INTRODUCTION.

JOHN GOWER was the principal political poet of the reign of Richard II. His writings of this class are nearly all in Latin verse, and ostentatiously designed for the most educated classes of society, and he was no advocate of the popular cause, but was evidently guided by his personal partialities to the nobles who led the opposition to the court; yet the changes in his political views were coincident with those which agitated society during Richard's reign. In its earlier period he had written in praise of the young monarch, and sought court favour; but, as we have seen in our former volume, he subsequently took part warmly with the opposition, and attached himself to the party of Henry of Lancaster, and the last of his Latin poems written before the accession of that prince to the throne are bitterly hostile to the person and government of king Richard. The present volume opens with the latest known of these Latin poems, and probably the latest which ever came from his pen. They were professedly written to glorify the new monarch, by commemorating the ruin which had threatened the kingdom under his predecessor, the patriotism and courage Henry had displayed in saving it, and his just title to the crown. We have, however, another poem by the same author, addressed also to Henry IV., but written in English. In this

COMPLIMENTARY VERSES
ON KING
HENRY IV.

ADDRESS
OF JOHN GOWER TO
HENRY IV.

Gower begins by pointing out the manifest interposition of God in promoting that prince to the sovereignty of his country, and he urges this circumstance, whereby the people had been no less evidently saved from tyranny and oppression, as one of the strongest proofs of his right to the crown, and at the same time as a substantial ground for the hope that the new government would be prosperous and beneficial to the country. England was still at war with France, but this had been carried on without honour to our country, and Gower expresses the strong feeling of the people in general, in his earnest desire for the establishment of peace. He recommends the king to petition heaven for wisdom in ruling his own people, rather than for the faculty of conquering others. Solomon, who had his choice, chose the former, and his reign was one of peace and glory. Alexander chose the other alternative, and was enabled to carry his conquering arms over the whole world; but, says our poet, the world was then all heathen, and full of sin and confusion, but now, under Christ's faith, everybody is bound to eschew war and to seek peace. The advantages of peace are contrasted in some rather vigorous lines with the injustice and tyranny of war; and the poet advises the king against taking to his councils any partizans of the latter. Christ, he says, came into the world to establish peace, so that war is contrary to our faith; and yet, at this time war prevailed throughout Christendom, and even in Christ's church itself, which was then disputed between two rival popes. Where there was disease in the head, the body must needs suffer; and under these circumstances it behoved the Christian kings to promote peace among themselves for two causes; first, for the protection of the church against internal division; and, secondly,

to defend Christendom against the infidels, who at this time were making dangerous attacks upon it. These blessings were to be hoped from the known character of Henry of Lancaster.

The only manuscript of this poem with which I am acquainted is contained in a volume in the library of the duke of Sutherland at Trentham in Staffordshire, which was made well known by Wharton as containing Gower's French sonnets.¹ There appears sufficient reason for believing this manuscript to have been presented to king Henry, after his accession, by the poet, who seems to have been rather vain of his French verses, and the two pieces here printed were probably written on the occasion. They are accompanied by a shorter piece, in Latin elegiacs, here given at the end of the English poem, in which Gower states, that at this time, which was the first year of Henry's reign, he was struck with blindness; and he complains of old age (torva senectus), and announces his resolution to write no more, but to leave literature to a younger generation. In fact, there are reasons for supposing that he must now have been considerably advanced in years—perhaps not far short of eighty; he died in 1408.

Gower, though, as a layman, conscious of many abuses in the ecclesiastical state, and wishful for their reform, was still a staunch catholic, and no favourer of what he considered as innovations in religion, and he urged the king above all other things to give the whole support of the secular government to the church. Henry's father, John of Gaunt, had been notoriously a favourer of the Wycliffites; and Henry himself, previous to his accession to the throne, had not been considered a very zealous son of the church;

so that, at the opening of his reign, the religious reformers took courage, imagined that they were at least sure of toleration, and employed themselves with extraordinary activity in spreading their doctrines. But, to their great disappointment, they soon found their mistake. Henry is accused of having deliberately purchased the support of the Romish clergy in his designs upon the crown by at least a verbal engagement to suppress the sect of the Lollards, and all other heretics; and, be this as it may, the clergy began immediately to display an active spirit of persecution which rendered it not improbable, and the commencement of his reign was marked by a statute against the religious reformers of a severity then unexampled. By the Act of the 2nd Hen. IV., chapter 14 (A.D. 1400), heretics were ordered to be punished by burning at the stake, and this cruel law was immediately carried into effect in the case of William Sautrey, a parish priest convicted of heretical opinions. These proceedings naturally carried consternation among the Wycliffites, but, as is usually the case, persecution on the one hand only increased and embittered the zeal of the persecuted, while some acts of severity on the part of the crown against a few Romish ecclesiastics who had engaged in treasonable conspiracies encouraged them still to hope for a change in their favour. Under these circumstances the Wycliffites slackened nothing in their activity, but they united more warmly with those who were struggling for social and political liberty; and the popular dislike to the Romish priesthood, and especially to the four orders of friars with whom people came into closer communication, was greatly increased. The watchword of this party was still the same which had been raised with so much vigour in the poem of Piers Ploughman, and which demanded the emancipation of the oppressed peasant. But the name of Piers Ploughman had been exchanged for that of Jack Upland, which was exactly equivalent, as it signified simply Jack the countryman, Jack Upland, or Jack of the country, in contradistinction from the town. About the date just mentioned there appeared a poem under this title in alliterative verse, intended evidently to be circulated among the populace, in which the popular character, Jack Upland, is introduced propounding the various heads of the complaints of the Wycliffites against the Romish church in a series of questions addressed to the friars, who were the most active agents against the professors of the new opinions. This poem appears to have given great alarm, or offence, to the friars, one of whom, whose real name, it is intimated, was John of Walsingham, but who wrote under the assumed and more popular name of Daw Topias, put forth a reply to these questions, compiled in exactly the same style, but sprinkled here and there with rather violent abuse of Wycliffe and the Lollards. A Wycliffite took up the cudgels immediately, and retorted in a similar style, and this last writer alludes to an event as then recent which seems to fix the date of all these pieces to the year 1401. Of the first of these no manuscript appears now to be known, but a copy had been found in the sixteenth century by Stow, and was inserted, without any reason, in the folio black-letter edition of the works of Chaucer. The other two, which may be considered among the most remarkable of the popular records of the history of the religious movement during this period, are preserved in a contemporary manuscript in the Bodleian Library, in which the friar's poem occupies the page of the vellum, and the reply of the Lollard is written in a smaller hand in the margins above and below. It was the common practice to write the alliterative poetry as prose, with a slight stroke of the pen to mark the divisions of the lines. Such is the case with the manuscript in the Bodleian Library, where the divisions of the lines are very distinctly marked. But the copyist of the first poem for the edition of Chaucer, who evidently understood the English of his original imperfectly, and was not at all acquainted with the principles of the old alliterative verse, had really mistaken it for prose, and not only copied it for such, but substituted for the obsolete words with which this class of poetry abounded others which were then better known, and often paraphrased the language in the belief that he was making it better understood. Thus in some parts all traces of its metrical character is lost, and we may judge in many cases how much it is corrupted by comparison with the quotations from it in the strictures of "Daw Topias." At the same time it must also be remarked that with the beginning of the fifteenth century the alliterative verse began already to be written very loosely, and, the rhythm being preserved, the alliteration was often left imperfect, or entirely neglected.

JACK UPLAND.

To begin with Jack Upland, the popular satirist commences with stigmatizing the church of Rome as Antichrist and his disciples, and complains that the worst of these "diverse sects" were those last brought in, the different orders of friars, who neither showed obedience to the prelates of the church nor allegiance to the crown, but sought only to indulge their own selfishness, while they pretended to have the power of selling heaven and earth to whom they liked. After taunting the friars with their great pretensions to knowledge, he proceeds to put certain questions to them, requiring that the answers should be grounded "in reason and holy writ." His first question is a very simple one—if there be so many different religious orders on earth, one must be supposed to be better than another, or there need have been no more than one; and if these orders are not better than the order which Christ himself founded, namely the Gospel, why should they choose any one of them in preference to it? Moreover, for which should a friar be more severely punished, for breaking the rules of his order or for breaking God's commandments? He asks further, why should a friar be considered an apostate for leaving one order for the purpose of joining another, where they were all considered to belong to Christ's church? In a number of consecutive questions, the friars are accused of placing their religion in their habit, and of furnishing themselves with clothes of rich materials for no other cause but vain-glory; of placing undue importance in vain things, such as particular colours of cloth and particular places; of obtaining dispensations from duties which were uneasy to them; and of pretending to embrace with their profession a life of mortification—to be as dead men; whereas they were the most active beggars alive, and, instead of graves, which were appropriate to dead men, they affected to live in mansions which exceeded in extent and splendour the palaces of the greatest nobles. As proofs of the selfish motives of the orders of friars, it is stated that fixed districts were farmed out to certain limitors, or begging friars, as the name intimates, and that they were not allowed to trespass within each others' limits; that they were exempted from the visitations of the bishops; that they sold for money, and never gave in charity, letters of brotherhood, by which people were entitled after death to a share in their merits; and that they induced people to give them large sums of money for their prayers, on the assurance that these would bring them out of purgatory or hell, while they were ignorant where they should go themselves. Jack Upland asks, with some reason, why, if they had this power, they should not employ it out of love for their fellow men as well as for gain. They are accused also of tives of the

Their simony.

“stealing” men’s children in order to bring them up in their order, a charge which is proved to be true by a collective force of contemporary evidence. They sought only to perform the two sacraments, shrift and burial, which brought in most money; and only, therefore, to those who could pay, rejecting the poor. “According to your own doctrine,” says the reformer, “holiness consists in poverty, and why, therefore, do you refuse to receive for burial those who are poor?” The friars, we are told, disapproved of preaching, and condemned the secular priests who practised it; they sold God’s mass for a penny, and therefore set that sum either on “God’s body,” which was worse than the crime of Judas, who sold it for thirty pence, or sold their labour, which was bribery and covetousness, or sold the service of the church, which was simony; they entered in their table books the names of those who purchased their pardons, as if God was not likely to remember them; and they justified their system of mendicity by the example of the Saviour, who, they pretended, had gained his living on earth by begging. In some further questions these particular charges are dilated upon; the reformer complains that the multiplication of friars and other ecclesiastics was an unnecessary and unjust burthen upon the people, and alleges that when Christ had but twelve apostles and a few disciples his work was done much better than since the number of workmen had been so greatly increased. Just as a man works better with four fingers and a thumb to his hand, than he would if the number were doubled; so the superfluity of workmen in the church only encumbered it and made it inefficient. These unworthy workmen locked up the bible from those who were able and willing to read and preach it, and persecuted as heretics those who sought to make its doctrines public. The reformer again repeats the charges that the friars only sought riches and self-indulgence; that one of them who brought home most money to his house received full absolution for whatever error he might have committed in obtaining it; that they neglected the poor, and chiefly sought out rich men, who could afford to pay them well for their religious consolations; and that these consolations were of such a kind that they encouraged lords and ladies to sin worse than before, instead of amending their lives; and he then again puts some home questions to the friar as to the superiority of one religious order over another. If the friar replied that his own order was the best, he assumed that the other orders were inferior to it; whereas each friar of one of the other orders would give him the lie and say that his own order was best; yet one only could be the best, and therefore three must be false, while there was no means of knowing which was the true one. And this contradiction between the orders was so great that a friar who left his own order to enter another was looked upon as an apostate. Also these orders and rules were assumed not only to be superior to one another, but to be superior also to that rule which had been given by Christ, otherwise why did they not follow Christ's order in preference to all others? Thus it was assumed that St. Francis or St. Dominic was superior in power and knowledge to God himself, an evident blasphemy. "Canst thou, friar, point out any default in Christ's rule of the Gospel, with which he gave all men the certain power to be saved, if they kept it to their ending? If thou sayest it was too hard, thou accusest Christ of untruth; for he said of his rule, 'My yoke is soft and my burthen light.' If thou sayest that Christ's rule was too light, that cannot be alleged as a fault, for it only made it the easier to keep. If thou findest no fault in Christ's rule of the

 FRIAR
 DAW TO-PIAS, AND JACK UP-
 LAND’S RE-JOINDER.

These questions of Jack Upland are put simply, and in a form to be easily understood by minds not accustomed to abstruse reasoning. His opponent, Daw Topias the friar, shows far less temper, and an inclination to browbeat rather than to convince or persuade. He begins by lamenting the degraded state of society which rendered it necessary to reply to such questions, and he reproaches the Lollards in rather abusive language, alleging that Jack Upland’s questions were ignorant and foolish, and proclaiming his readiness to answer them, although himself only a “ lewd ” or uneducated friar. It was, in fact, an attempt on the part of the Romish clergy to encounter the reformers in their own popular field. Daw Topias denies that the friars were other than liege subjects to the king ; and asserts that they professed obedience to the bishops, though not in the same degree as the secular priests, inasmuch as holy church had given them exemption. Jack Upland, who repays the friar with language as rude as his own, replies that their non-allegiance to the crown—meaning thereby disobedience to the laws of the realm—was notorious ; for when a friar lay under the charge of any crime or vice, his prior took him out of the hands of justice, without the king’s authority, and thus, however guilty, he escaped punishment. “ Oft,” says he, “ ye seduce men’s wives, “ and are put in the stocks, but your captains, or “ superiors, lay claim to you and ask no leave of “ kings.” In reply to the charge of laziness brought against the friars, Daw alleges that each class of society had its particular province, and that, as in a man's body, the hands were made to work for the support of the head and the feet and the eyes, so the common people were made by God to labour for holy church and the aristocracy. To this it is answered, that St. Paul and the apostles gained their living by the labour of their hands, and that yet at the same time they performed the duties of the ministry much better than the clergy of modern times, and hated above all things such "bold begging" as was practised by the friars. "You accuse us," says the popular advocate of the old religious system, "of being con-

 "founders of prelates and lords . . . but give "us any examples of prelates or lords thus confounded.
 "But since that wicked worm named Wycliffe began "to sow the seed of schism in the earth, sorrow
 "and ruin have made their appearance everywhere, Attacks upon Wycliffe.
 "and are bringing disgrace equally upon lordship and "prelacy." On the question of selling the sacraments by simony, the friar endeavours cunningly to throw this charge upon the parish priests, alleging that the only sacrament the friars had to dispense was the absolution of sins; and in retaliation for the charge of interfering unduly in families, he accuses the Wycliffites of seeking to make converts of women, with an evident intimation of something further, which is not declared openly. We know how many women embraced the opinions of the Wycliffites, and suffered martyrdom for maintaining them. In reply, the advocate of the reformation repeats the charge of incontinence against the friars, and offers to forfeit a hundred pounds if the friars can fix a similar charge on any member of the sect of Lollards. Daw justifies Splendid buildings of the friars. the splendour of the ecclesiastical buildings by the example of Solomon's temple, and passes on to a long string of more abuse of the reformers, who, he says, were the plagues sent upon earth by the "blastes" of the seven angels in the Revelations. "The third

"angel sent down a star from heaven, fiercely burning as a brand, it was called wormwood; this truly was Wycliffe your master; he shone brightly in appearance at his beginning, but by his false doctrines afterwards he created much trouble, and by his rash presumption fell from the church . . . The heretics Maximinus and Manichæus never caused more mischief." This attack on Wycliffe roused the indignation of the reformer, who replies: "I wonder, Daw, thou darest thus to lie on so great a clerk, who was known well in his time by rich and poor as a vertuous man, but thou, as blind as Bayard, barkest at the moon, like an old miller's dog when he begins to doat. But I know well that thy barking, however loud thou liest, will not diminish this saint, who lived and taught so truthfully." After several pages of general abuse, the apologist of the friars returns to the questions of the reformer. He justifies the number and diversity of the religious orders by alleging the various orders of angels in heaven, and he proceeds to give an explanation of the former, which was certainly not calculated to satisfy one of the reformers. His own order, he says, was that of Christ, who taught obedience, chastity, and poverty. "Nay," is the reply, "there is hardly an individual in thy order who can boast of possessing these three virtues, in regard to which ye rather follow Antichrist than our Lord Jesus. As to chastity of body, ye break it continually; and ye have no chastity of soul, for ye forsake Christ your spouse, and are become apostates from his church. In respect to true poverty, ye are the most covetous men in the world, for what with simony, and with begging, and with selling absolutions, you plunder both great and small." Daw alleges further, that Christ ordained two manners of life, the one contemplative, the other active, to the former of which the monks belonged, while the latter was represented by the friars. He represents their begging as the collecting of alms, and refuses to tell what they themselves gave to the poor, on the plea that charity should be exercised in secret. He defends the richness of the cloth worn by the friars, and explains the different parts of the costume symbolically, retaliating upon his opponent by sneering at the Lollards for affecting to dress in plain grey, which, he pretends, was intended to imply simplicity, while the wearers were ravenous wolves in Christ's fold. Others of the peculiar observances of the friars are explained in much the same manner, or defended in general terms, mixed with a large amount of abusive language addressed to the Lollards; to which his opponent replies with not much more temper, and utters a prophecy, not unlike that which has been so often remarked in the older poem of Piers Ploughman; "and yet," he says, "the time shall come when Josiah shall reign, and make an end of such fiends, and restore Christ's rule."¹

The friars were celebrated for the splendour of their conventual buildings, and this circumstance furnished a never-failing ground of attack to the reformers. It is one to which both the advocate and the opponent recur; and the former finds a rather singular reply to the charge of lavishing money on these great edifices instead of expending it in charity to the poor. "Jack," he says, "is not a man better than a rude beast? Yet you"—of course, addressing him in his assumed character of the uplandman or ploughman—"make a shed for your sheep, and a stable for your horse; and meanwhile there is many a man who has no roof over him, but the open air only is his house, and the beasts stand covered. Why dost thou not house the poor man as well as thy beasts?" The reformer finds a ready answer to this "monkey's argument," as he calls it, by which, he says, it might be proved that "he that drinks a quart of wine, must needs drink a gallon. But I grudge no reasonable house; and, though you speak scornfully of it, I have a sheep-house, for which I have better warrant in God's law than you have for your Cain's castle. I thank God, I built it with honestly gotten goods; but you built yours with the produce of begging, contention, and robbery." It is curious enough that the friar here—for there can be no doubt that it was the bonâ fide composition of one of the order who chose to encounter the popular preacher on his own ground—not only uses arguments which are in general very easily demolished, but he loses few occasions of displaying a feeling of spiteful hostility, which is known from other sources to have existed, towards other orders of the Romish clergy. In an earlier part of his writing, when accused of selling the sacraments, he attempts to throw this charge upon the parish priests; and now, in reply to the charge of farming out the country in districts to the limitors, he asserts that this was not done by the regular friars, but suggests that it was probably done by the pardoners, and the friars of some less regular orders. The clergy claimed a general exemption from secular taxes, and, when reproached with the example of Christ, who caused his disciples to pay the tribute to the emperor, our Daw Topias pretends that the Saviour did not do this as a duty, but merely as a matter of policy, that it might not be made a charge against him in his trial before Pilate. At length we come to the grand charge of kidnapping the children of people of property in order to bring them up in their order, with a view, of course, to future profit. The existence of this practice is notorious, for it was a subject of complaint not only with the Lollards, but with the commons assembled in parliament, who proposed an act forbidding the reception into the orders of friars of any men under twenty-one years of age; but the king, ruled by his fear of the clergy, gave only a partial assent; and it was enacted that in future no boy under the age of fourteen should be received into an order. Daw Topias, therefore, does not attempt to deny the fact, but he justifies it in rather a singular manner by the example of Christ. "Thou accusest us," he says, "of felony, for stealing children to draw them to our sects. I hold it no theft to draw people towards God, unless you call Christ a thief, who did the same, saying to the rich man (Matt. xix. 21): 'Go and sell thy goods, and give them to the poor, if thou wilt be perfect; and afterwards follow me, and be my disciple.' And, in the same gospel, see what he saith also (Luke xiv. 26): 'Whoso forsaketh not his father and his mother, his son and his daughter, his sister and his brother, his land and his tenements, and himself also, he is not worthy to be my follower.' And again he said to his twelve chosen (John xv. 16): 'Behold, from the world I have chosen you all, that ye go and bear fruit, and your fruit may remain.' And thus to plunder the world, and spoil it of its subjects, it is no robbery, but theft approved by Christ." In regard to the keeping of prisons by the clergy, Daw Topias argues that they have the same right to have prisons as the secular authorities. For, he says, if we take the Gospel literally, neither emperor nor king would have the right to imprison or put to death, but only to reprimand offenders, and then set them at liberty; whereby murderers, robbers, and all kinds of malefactors would go unpunished. The pope, the archbishop of Canterbury, and the bishops in general had, he says, their prisons, with the king's permission; and it would be a bold thing to pretend that this was contrary to God's law. But his opponent replies that the two cases were very different, that the sentences and punishments of the bishops were arbitrary and unjust, and generally directed against the innocent; whereas the king caused the law to be executed by judges who were bound to administer justice with impartiality, "as he did now lately, when he hanged you traitors." Some friars had been hanged for treason in the course of the year 1401.

the clergy to keep prisons and hold courts.

The remainder of this very curious poem is chiefly occupied with a defence of the various means by which the friars obtained money, and of the use they made of it. Daw Topias justifies the style of preaching of the friars, and the character of their sermons, which had become a subject of ridicule to the reformers, by urging that the means are justified by the end; and that if the people were taught the right faith, it mattered not how they were instructed in it. On the other hand, he accuses the Wycliffites of having conspired to destroy Christ's church and turn it to idolatry; and adds that he considers it more "wholesome" to pursue a heretic to prison, or to the fire, than even to consecrate a church. In answer to the charge of selling the sacraments, he pretends that the friars administered them freely, and that they also received freely the offerings of those who partook in them, and argues that there was no more simony in being paid in this way, than in the payment of a certain annual salary to a parish priest for his exercise of the ministry. To which Jack Upland replies sneeringly, comparing the friars to tapsters, or inn-keepers, who, instead of beer, "tap" out and serve their absolutions from Rome, and their preachings, prayers, and burials, to the deluded people. The begging of the friars is justified as a literal imitation of the example of Christ, who did not disdain to obtain his sustenance in this manner, and by the favour shown by the Saviour to mendicants; and here the popular advocate of Romanism, believing that his display of learning might betray his assumption of the character of a "lewd" friar, pretends that he had learnt to speak Latin when he was once a manciple, or servant employed in collecting the provisions, at Merton Hall, in Oxford. Another practice which had been ridiculed, that of writing in their books the names of those who give them money, or in other words making lists of benefactors, is justified on the ground that such lists were not made to remind God of those who had done good actions, but to assist their own memory as to those for whom they were bound to pray, inasmuch as, according to the opinion of the clergy, such special prayer was most conducive to the salvation of the souls of those for whom they prayed, a position which of course the reformers in a great measure denied. The practice of going about preaching in couples, when the apostles only went singly, is again explained symbolically, as Daw pretends that they went partly to bear one another company, "but more for the mystery contained in the "number"—for the law was written on two tables, and there were two cherubim in the temple, and two in the tabernacle. Jack replies that they did not adhere strictly to the symbol in this case, but that they sometimes went three together, one of the two being of the other sex; for the immorality of the friars is constantly insisted upon.

In regard to the complaints of the increase in the number of friars, who were made "against God's will," and the comparison with the hand and its fingers, Topias alleges that it would apply equally, and even in a greater degree, to the priests, who are again sneered at and represented as being more numerous and more burdensome to the people than the friars. Moreover, he proceeds to argue: "You say that God made all things in measure, weight, and number, and you cannot deny that every friar is something, and yet you assert that friars are made against God's will; thus you pretend that God hath made something which he would not make, so that his sovereign goodness is contrarious to himself." Jack Upland replies to this notable argument: "Though God made all things in measure and weight, it does not follow that he made you, for ye are out of measure, and so the devil and Cain and Judas are your fathers." The apologist of the friars remarks, with more reason, in regard to the hand, that nature had determined the number of its fingers, and if that number were passed, it was looked upon as a monstrosity; but that God or holy church had fixed no definite number of priests or friars. The question relating to Christ's presence in the sacrament is brought forward last, and becomes the ground for a good deal of personal reproach, with which both the poem itself and the reply to it close.

EXECU-TION OF ARCH-BISHOP
SCROPE.

The resentment of the Wycliffite party, no doubt, told against the house of Lancaster in the turbulent reign of Henry VI., and raised a strong prejudice against the memory of Henry IV. in the minds of the older protestant historians, while the latter monarch gained but a partial advantage by his yielding policy towards the church, for the clergy took an active part in nearly all the treasonable conspiracies of his reign. The plot for murdering the king, at the beginning of his reign, was arranged in the lodgings of the abbot of Westminster, where the conspirators held their secret meetings. In the spring of 1401 several priests and friars were, as we have seen before, executed as traitors, some, as was presented, having likewise plotted to murder the king. In the year following the friars appear to have been especially active in spreading abroad the report that king Richard was still alive, and that he was preparing to make an effort for the recovery of his kingdom, and some of them suffered the penalties of treason. They encouraged the same reports two years later, on the occasion of Serlo's rebellion, and some of the higher clergy had been compromised in the great insurrection of the Percies. Among these stood conspicuous the archbishop of York, Richard Scrope, or Le Scrope, who still claimed the title of primate of England. In 1405, this prelate, in conjunction with Thomas de Mowbray, earl marshal, the son of one of Richard the Second's great favourites, but at this time little more than a boy, placed himself at the head of a considerable armed force, and raised the standard of rebellion at Shipton-on-the-Moor. The insurrection was soon suppressed, and the archbishop and his youthful ally fell into the hands of the king, his friends said, through the treachery of the earl of Westmoreland, and they were immediately tried, condemned, and executed for high treason, being the first instance in this country of the execution of a prelate of the church by the sentence of a lay court. These proceedings, as it is well known, provoked a feeling of great indignation among the clergy, and the Latin ballad on the occasion, here printed, is evidently a clerical composition. It expresses the grief which must be felt by the church in general on so great an event, and points out the circumstance that the execution of archbishop Richard occurred on the same day as the martyrdom of archbishop St. William, who died, as the Romish church which canonised him pretended, by poison, on the 8th of June 1154. This Latin ballad complains of the haste and unfairness of archbishop Scrope's trial, without any regard to his rank as a peer, or to his quality as a dignitary of the church who claimed exemption from lay jurisdiction; and tells how the sentence was passed in his own episcopal palace at Bishopsthorpe, and how he was led to the place of execution (between that place and York) on a mare (which was regarded as disgraceful), without a saddle, and with a halter instead of a bridle. The archbishop there encouraged the young earl to submit courageously to his fate, and then bowed himself to the sword. The virtues of the martyred primate are dwelt upon with great earnestness, and his sanctity is insisted upon. The writer then laments the other victims who perished on account of this rising, and tells how his palace was plundered, how his body was buried without the decencies becoming his station, and no attention was paid to the poor, to his creditors, or to his household. Even the common people of York were punished with him, and were subjected to unbearable exactions. Not only did York, he says, suffer, but the kingdom was deprived of its noblest chiefs, and the army was denuded of its choicest warriors; and the ballad concludes with the expression of regret for the good old times which were passed. The clergy, indeed, pretended that archbishop Scrope was a holy martyr, encouraged the belief that miracles were performed at his tomb, which became a place of pilgrimage to the disaffected, and went so far as to declare that it was in punishment for his enormous sin in putting to death the archbishop of York, that Henry was struck with a loath-some disease, said to be the leprosy, which shortened his days.

We find no more political poems of this reign, unless we reckon under that head Occleve's Poem, De Regimine Principum, of which an edition has been recently printed by the Roxburghe Club; but the death of Henry IV. is commemorated in a curious little Latin poem by a now rather well-known writer of that period. Two works by Thomas de Elmham have been published recently, but neither of the editors appears to have been aware of the existence of the poem on the death of Henry IV., which is printed in the present volume. Elmham was in the first place a Benedictine monk of Canterbury, and subsequently entered the Cluniac order, and became prior of Lenton, in the county of Nottingham. He evidently held some position at court under Henry IV., and the poem here printed seems to have been composed no long time after the death of that monarch; but the object of the writer is not very evident. In the prefatory verses, which the rubric seems to intimate were written after Elmham became prior of Lenton, it is addressed to Henry V., who is exhorted to attend to the domestic happiness of his kingdom, as well as to the prosecution of his foreign wars. Elmham warns the king (not unprophetically) of the fleeting and uncertain character of human life, and urges him to consult the welfare of his own soul by correcting errors in his government, which are not very clearly intimated. He tells him that he would weep if he knew the true feelings of his subjects, to all whom his coming home was a subject of sorrow, while his departure from his country was looked upon with joy. In explanation of this he intimates that when the king was at home in his kingdom a host of overbearing warriors and chiefs, and their greedy followers, committed all sorts of violence and oppression, from which his subjects were released when he carried the oppressors away to the wars. In time of war, he says, the priest and the monk, the merchant and the cultivator of the land, received protection, and why should they not be protected in time of peace. Elmham reminds him of the fate of king Richard, and of the shortness of his father's reign, whose example, however, he recommends him to follow. These introductory lines are followed by a series of supposed exhortations addressed by king Henry IV. to his eldest son on his personal conduct, and on the government of the kingdom, which is called in the rubric a "letter," composed by the king when dying. This, differing in this respect from the introductory lines, is a curious specimen of the pedantic and obscure style of writing in which Thomas de Elmham indulged. In the conclusion the king is made to give his blessing to prince Henry, and to his three other sons, Thomas (duke of Clarence), John (duke of Bedford), and Humphrey (duke of Gloucester). The dying king is then introduced offering his thanks to heaven for the favours which he had received thence during his life. This is followed by a brief account of his death, which occurred, we are told, on St. Cuthbert's day (the 20th of March), in the year 1412, meaning, according to our present calculation, 1413. But this account is particularly interesting, as containing the only contemporary notice of a story, probably legendary in great part, which made much noise in after times, chiefly from the way in which it has been used by Shakespeare. It seems probable that Henry IV. entertained at some period of his reign a notion of entering into a crusade against the Turks—the language of Gower, in the poems printed in the present volume, would lead us to suppose that such designs had been talked of. According to the ordinary story, some one endued with the spirit of prophecy had told him that he would die in Jerusalem; and when suddenly struck with his last illness in Westminster Abbey, and carried thence into what was called the Jerusalem Chamber, on being told the name of the apartment, he recognized the fulfilment of the prophecy, and prepared for death. But as told by Elmham, the story is more simple and less wonderful. He informs us that a false prophecy had been current during his life that he would take the cross, and win the Holy Land; and that by an unforeseen occurrence he unwittingly gained admission to the Holy Land by being carried when dying into the Bethlehem (not the Jerusalem) Chamber in Westminster. In the latter part of this poem Elmham has given his own name, as well as those of the king and queen, in acrostics. Its exact aim is not very clear, but it shows that the domestic policy of Henry V. was not altogether popular.

We have no other poems on the domestic affairs of England under the reign of Henry V., but Henry's foreign wars appear to have been celebrated in a considerable number of contemporary poems and ballads. The short and simple song which carried the tidings of the victory of Azincourt through the towns and villages of England is preserved with the music to which it was chanted in a manuscript of the Pepysian Library in Cambridge, from which it was printed in bishop Percy's "Reliques," and, I believe, in a still more interesting form among the manuscripts in the Library of Trinity College, in the same University. The expedition into France, which was crowned by this great victory, is related in a very detailed manner in a much longer poem in the ballad form, which also was evidently intended to be sung or chanted about the country, and which, preserved in a manuscript in the Harleian Collection in the library of the British Museum, was printed not very correctly by Sir Harris Nicolas, in his "History of the Battle of Agincourt." Another poem of some length, written by one who was present at the events he relates, gives a circumstantial and most interesting account of the siege of Rouen in 1418-19. There is no early complete copy of it known, but the first and larger part of it is found in an imperfect manuscript in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, and was published very inaccurately by Professor Conybeare, in the twenty-first volume of the Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries. It was subsequently discovered that the author of one of the continuations of the English Brut Chronicle had used this poem as the material for his account of the siege of Rouen, and, after going on for some time paraphrasing it, had at last copied the text verbatim, thus preserving the whole of the latter part of the poem which was wanting in the Oxford manuscript. This supplementary text was edited from two manuscripts in the British Museum by Sir Frederic Madden in a subsequent volume of the Archæologia. A complete copy of the whole has since been met with in a manuscript in Balliol College, Oxford, containing a collection of pieces, chiefly in verse, made at the close of the fifteenth century by a citizen of London named Hill, which is, of course, of too late a date to be of much value as a text. The manner in which the latter part of this poem was preserved is of particular interest, as showing how much the narratives of events given by our old chroniclers were founded upon the ballads of the time, and upon other such popular materials. Another very curious example will be found in a shorter ballad or song on the battle of Azincourt, printed from a manuscript in the British Museum, in the present volume. The compiler of a contemporary, or nearly contemporary, chronicle of London has taken his account of the battle of Azincourt entirely from this ballad, turning the first part of it into prose, in which, however, the lines and rhymes of the original may still be traced, but transcribing the latter part of it without any alteration. It is a plain straightforward account of the battle, without any poetical embellishment. A Latin epigram on this same battle completes the number of our poems and songs of the French wars of King Henry V. They are followed in the present volume by another Latin epigram, in two parts, in the first of which the Frenchman reproaches the Englishman with the injuries he had inflicted on France, to which, in the second part, the Englishman replies. Even these short epigrams throw light on the feelings by which the contending parties were actuated.

FRENCH-MAN TO THE EN-GLISHMAN.

The next short piece included in the present collection, consisting of a few lines of Latin verse composed by a Lollard, and a parody upon them by a churchman in reply, are curious only as illustrating the bitterness of the hostile feeling between the Romanists and the church reformers. Each charges the other with crimes which were to be sufficiently punished only by the sword or the faggot. It has been said that the clergy encouraged Henry in his warlike plans, in order that his attention might be taken away from the religious persecution they were carrying on against a numerous portion of his subjects, which they supposed might have received a check from his sentiments of patriotism, or from the interference of the lay aristocracy; and the support he received from the clergy led him to pursue in regard to the church the policy which had been adopted by his father. He was not, however, destined to enjoy long the military glory which he had gained. In the December of the year 1419 was concluded the treaty of Troyes, by which the crown of France was confirmed to the king of England; and it was ratified in the spring of the year following by the English parliament. Henry V. died on the 31st of August 1422. A few Latin verses, here printed from a manuscript in the Bodleian Library, were probably written immediately after Henry's death, and seem to picture the feelings of the moment when the great warrior king had died so suddenly and so prematurely, and left his kingdom and his conquests to an infant less than a year old. The writer begins by boasting of the glory of the treaty of Troyes, and declaiming on the great qualities of the departed monarch. By his death, he says, the English were filled with sorrow and their enemies with joy, for the smiles of fortune in war, it was feared, would desert the former and pass over to the latter. The apprehension is intimated that Henry's queen, Catherine of France, would be guided by her partiality for her native land, and the young king, as he grew up, might be educated by her in French sentiments. Gloomy anticipations are the subject of a few concluding lines in prose, but expressed more mysteriously even than in the verse. These lines convey no distinct evidence of their dates, but the closing paragraphs seem to intimate that they were written before the death of the queen's father, Charles VI.

EPIGRAM ON THE AS-SUMPTION
ARMS OF FRANCE.

This latter event took place in the month of October, 1422, upon which the young king of England, Henry VI., became, by the terms of the treaty of Troyes, king of France, and he was proclaimed accordingly. But a counter-demonstration was made at the same time by the friends of the dauphin, who had been disinherited by the treaty, but who was, nevertheless, proclaimed king in Auvergne, where he had sought a refuge, and crowned subsequently at Poitiers as Charles VII. These rival claims are the subject of an epigram printed here from a manuscript in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, in which the claim of the French heir and the answer of the English heir are duly set forth, but which otherwise has no great importance. This question of inheritance continued to be debated, the more so as the English affairs in France, neglected by the home government, began to decline. A Frenchman named Laurence Calot, who was clerk of the council to the regent Bedford, had been employed by that prince to draw up in French verse a genealogical statement showing the superiority of the claims of the king of England over those of the dauphin, considering it as merely a question of legitimacy, in order that the nature of these claims might be made familiar to all who were capable of understanding the French language. It appears, however, to have been considered necessary that this justification of the English claims should be made known to the English also; and in the year 1426, while the duke of Bedford was absent in England, occupied in pacifying the troubles already displaying themselves in the English court, the earl of Warwick, who had been left in Paris as his lieutenant, employed the well-known poet, John Lydgate, monk of Bury, who was then in the French capital, to translate Calot's composition into English verse. Warwick had just then returned from a successful expedition into Maine against the duke of Brittany. Lydgate states in his prologue that the John Lydgate. object of this composition was to "set troubled hearts ON THE ENGLISH " at rest," and put a stop to the talk of "many TITLE TO THE CROWN OF FRANCE. folks," who disputed or threw doubts upon the legitimacy of king Henry's claims. Henry VI. was then, he tells us, nearly five years of age. In the text of the poem itself we are reminded of the great troubles which had been caused by the disputed claims to the French crown, that is, of course, by the resistance to the claims of the king of England, in punishment for which the English seem to have thought that God had visited France with all its domestic misery; and of the murder of the duke of Burgundy, Jean-sans-Peur, at Montereau, by the duke of Orleans, now Charles VII., but of whom the English still only spoke by his old title. The latter, he says, had by this treacherous and sanguinary deed rendered himself incapable of "succeeding to any dignity of knightly honour," and much more, therefore, "to reign in any land," and he in consequence had abandoned his claims by his own oath and under his own seal. In consideration of all this, and to put an end to the troubles of France, God had provided a young heir to the crown of France in the person of Henry VI. of England, whose right could not be disputed. He then proceeds to declare how Henry, as eighth in direct descent from St. Louis, was the nearest heir to the French throne, and how his right was allowed and confirmed by the treaty of Troyes. In conclusion, Lydgate specifies in an affected style of learning, then fashionable among poets, the day on which he concluded this "translation," which was the 28th of July 1426; and he adds a roundel in praise of the infant prince.

TO KING
HENRY VI.
ON HIS Co-RONATION.

Somewhat more than three years after this, on the 6th of November 1429, Henry, who was then only nine years of age, was crowned in England, and a poem on his coronation, the style of which seems to show that it also was composed by Lydgate, urges again the claim of the young king to the inheritance of the two crowns, as being the direct descendant on one side of St. Edward, and on the other of St. Louis.

ON THE Co-RONATION
OF HENRY
VI.

A second poem, on the same occasion, gives a more particular account of the ceremony, the solemnity and splendour of which seem to have produced a great impression on contemporaries, and they are described at length by the London chronicler Fabian. Our rhymester tells us of the display of mitred bishops and abbots who attended at the coronation, among whom were two archbishops and a cardinal (Beaufort). After the coronation the king and his great courtiers went in procession to the hall of Westminster, preceded by three dukes carrying the three swords, that of mercy, that of estate, and that of empire. The king was led by two bishops and six earls; his "pall" was borne by the Cinque Ports, and the earl of Warwick carried his train. Then followed in order the barons of the land, the judges, the knights of shires, and the city of London. At the feast which followed, the young king sat at the head table, having cardinal Beaufort on his right hand and the chancellor (Kemp, bishop of London,) on his left. The archbishop of Rheims sat at the same table; while, on the right side, the earl of Huntingdon knelt, holding the sceptre; and, on the left, the earl of Stafford, holding the sword of state. The earls of Norfolk and Salisbury were on horseback, the first as lord marshal, the other as constable in the place of the duke of Bedford. The Cinque Ports occupied a table on the right hand; another table was occupied by the prelates of the church, bishops and abbots; and at a table on the other side sat the representatives of the city of London. "Many other lords" occupied different tables. When the king and his lords were thus seated, the hereditary champion, Philip Dymmok, rode into the hall in complete armour, and publicly challenged all who had anything to say against the right of Henry VI. to the two crowns.

Henry was again crowned in Paris on the 17th of December 1430, and on the 21st of February 1432, on his return to England, he made his ceremonious entry into the city of London, an event commemorated in a poem by Lydgate, which has been printed in the collection of Lydgate's Minor Poems, edited by Mr. Halliwell for the Percy Society. Lydgate tells us how, after a succession of gloomy mist and rain, the weather suddenly became bright and smiling for the reception of the young king. The lord mayor, clad in red velvet, the sheriffs and aldermen in scarlet furred clothes, all well horsed, went forth to meet the king at Blackheath. They were followed by the citizens in their liveries, and by the foreign merchants in the following order :—Genoese, Florentines, Venetians, and Easterlings. The king was conducted in great state to London Bridge, where the pageantry began. A giant with a drawn sword stood at the entrance to the bridge, and other devices followed. Similar pageants were erected at different points in the line of the royal procession, which are rather minutely described. At St. Paul's the king dismounted from his horse, and was received by the archbishop, a number of bishops, and the clergy of the church ; and he was thence accompanied, as before, by the mayor and citizens to Westminster, where he was received into the minster by the abbot and his monks. Lydgate addresses his description of the splendid pageantry exhibited on this occasion to the lord mayor of London and the citizens.

Defection of the duke of Burgundy.

The next event which produced a strong political excitement was the defection of the duke of Burgundy from the English alliance. After the failure of Philippe-le-Bon in his attempts to effect a peace between England and France in 1435, and the death of the duke of Bedford, that prince allowed himself to be persuaded by the French party, and, after extorting very considerable concessions from Charles VII., he abandoned his alliance with England, and became reconciled with the king of France. The news of this event were received in England with such furious indignation, that the populace of London rose and plundered the foreign merchants who came from his dominions. At the beginning of March 1436 the duke of Burgundy declared war against England, and made no secret of his intention to wrest from the crown of this country its old conquest of Calais, which he laid claim to as belonging to his own county of Artois, and which he seems to have looked upon as an easy enterprise, encouraged, no doubt, by a mistaken estimate of the weakness and discouragement of the English at this moment. His subjects, and the men of Ghent especially, embarked in this enterprise with great zeal, and the siege of Calais Siege of Calais. began on the 19th of July 1436. The result is well known; the Flemings abandoned the siege early in August, and the duke of Gloucester, who arrived with reinforcements from England, invaded the dominions of the duke of Burgundy almost without resistance, burnt several towns, and returned to Calais laden with plunder.

We gather from the allusions in contemporary historians that these events caused not only great indignation, but great exultation in England, and that they were the subject of many popular songs and ballads, most of which, unfortunately, have perished. One of these, copied into a contemporary manuscript in the Sloane collection in the British Museum, but left imperfect by the transcriber, is a song on duke Philippe, composed, perhaps, if we may judge from the first lines, after the siege of Calais and the invasion of his dominions by the duke of Gloucester, when he was unable to take the field against the English. Duke Philippe is accused of falsehood, of being a public disturber of the peace, and of cowardice, and is challenged to come into the field and fight in defence of his character. The writer of the song reminds him of the kindness which he had experienced from Henry V., and of the assistance which in his own distress he had received from the English; of the murder of his father at Montereau; how he had sworn allegiance under Henry V. to the crown of England; and how, through the duke of Bedford, he had renewed his fealty on the coronation of Henry VI. at Paris.

Another short but curious piece, in Latin verse, ON THE DUKE OF BURGUNDY AND JAMES OF SCOTLAND. alludes to some communication between the duke of Burgundy and the king of Scotland, which appears to have provoked considerable indignation in England, but which is not noticed in our histories. It also has probably some reference to the siege of Calais, as Philip is introduced boasting to James of his irresistible power in reducing fortresses. It is little more than a string of reproaches, directed especially against the duke of Burgundy.

Satire on the Flemings.

A chronicler of England, preserved in a manuscript in the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth, speaking of the satirical ballads composed by the English on the failure of the duke of Burgundy's attempt upon Calais, has inserted one in his narrative as a sample. It was copied from the manuscript, and communicated to the Society of Antiquaries by Mr. Benjamin Williams, and is printed in the thirty-third volume of the Archæologia. The writer begins by jeering the Flemings on their expectation of conquering Calais, and he reminds them of their great exploits on "the first day," when the earl of Mortaign, with a party of the garrison of Calais, carried away their plunder openly in view of the town of Gravelines, although the townsmen sallied out upon them as fierce as "lions of Cotswold," which was in England a burlesque name for sheep. After ridiculing their dress and arms, he tells how the men of Gravelines fell upon the English with much fury; but how they left three hundred of their men dead, and the rest were glad to gain a refuge within their own walls, while the English continued their way without further interference. The Flemings are reminded how they came before Calais with a hundred and fifty thousand men, when the garrison of Calais were so much afraid of them that they left their gates open; and how they brought ships filled with stones to block up their harbour, which the English broke up and carried off at low water. They are reminded of Goby, the water-bailiff's dog, which "skirmished" with them twice at sea, and many times on the sands. The men of Bruges are reminded how they came out one afternoon to give battle on the plain of St. Pierre, and how many of them were carried into Calais, "tied fast by the fist." The men of Gaunt are reminded how their bulwark was captured, and how they fled from the siege, leaving their ordnance behind them. The Picards fared no better, and behaved just as disgracefully as the others. A song on the siege of Calais, printed in the present volume from a manuscript in the British Museum, is written in much the same tone, but is considerably longer. After a commencement, much in the style of the old English metrical romances of chivalry, as though intended to usher in some notable exploits, we are told how the duke of Burgundy, in his great pride, had made a great assemblage of his power and chivalry from Flanders, Brabant, Burgundy, Picardy, Hainault, and Holland, to the number of more than a hundred thousand men, to make war upon Calais. Their great preparations for the siege are described in the same mock-heroic style; and we are told that, among other things, they had brought nine thousand cocks to crow in the night, and eight thousand cressets to give them light. In Calais, meanwhile, the earl of Mortaign, Sir John Ratcliff, lieutenant of the town, and the baron of Dudley, who commanded the castle, made valiantly their preparations for defence, and did everything to encourage the defenders. The Lord Camois had the charge of Boulogne-gate, and Sir John Aston and Sir Geoffrey "Warbulton" of Milk-gate, but the gates themselves were kept continually open, as an act of defiance to the besiegers. Nevertheless, the soldiers, burgesses, and merchants of Calais posted themselves on the ramparts and in every position in which they could do good service in fighting; and even the women assisted by carrying stones and other missiles to the men on the ramparts, and preparing boiling cauldrons, in case of assault, "all hot to give drink" to the assailants. The duke threatened the south-west corner of the town, and shot "many a great stone" into the place, but without doing much damage; and the French and Flemings were finally obliged to retreat to their camp, closely pursued. The exploits of an Irishman in this pursuit are especially commemorated, as furnishing "a sportful sight;" and the courage of the water-bailiff's dog appears to have furnished matter of especial exultation; he is here said to have played "heigh-go-bye" in every skirmish, and to have spared neither man nor horse. One Thursday the earl of Mortaign fought the Flemings at St. Pierre, in the plain, drove them to their tents, and brought into Calais many prisoners. Next day came the duke's navy, with the "bulged ships," to block up the harbour, but this stratagem failed, and his "castle" was soon afterwards taken and destroyed. Next day, after this mishap, the duke fled with the men of Ghent, and was followed by those of Bruges and Ypres. "Little knows the fool," says the songster in conclusion, "who might choose, what harm it were to "the crown of England good Calais to lose."

THE LIBEL
OF ENG-LISH
POLICY.

The danger of Calais, indeed, seems to have created as much alarm in England as the defeat of the besiegers gave joy, and not only the chance of losing it, but the great importance of England's maritime policy, began more and more to occupy people's minds. It was in the middle of the political agitation of this period, apparently soon after the defeat of the Flemings before Calais, that a writer, whose name is unknown, but who was evidently very intimately acquainted with the commercial affairs of the time, published the remarkable poem entitled "The Libel of "English Policy." The author was a friend of one of the great warriors and statesmen of the day, Walter baron Hungerford, to whom he showed his book, and whose warm approval of it he received before it was published; and he seems also to have enjoyed the favour of cardinal Beaufort, and to have been intimate with the other great lords of the court. He quotes, as his authorities for facts he states, on one occasion the earl of Ormond, on another, "a good squier in time of parliament," who in one of the manuscripts is called Hampton, and at another a merchant named Master Richard Barnet. The grand political principle of this writer is that England's power lay on the sea more than on the land, and that she might make her commercial and maritime influence so great as to be able to impose peace on the nations of western Europe. He considers the importance of Calais as an English possession to consist in giving to England the undisputed command of the straits. When, in the year 1416, the emperor Sigismund visited England, to endeavour to effect a peace between Henry V. and the king of France, he had been especially struck with the importance of Calais in this point of view, and advised the king to value the two cities, Calais and Dover, as the two eyes of his maritime power. Taking this anecdote as his text, the author shows how, as the straits of Dover were at that time the only passage for the commerce of western Europe, of which Flanders was the chief mart, England, having the power to forbid the passage and put a stop to the commerce, could compel the countries whose wealth arose from that commerce to keep the peace with her in their own interests. This had been the policy of Edward III. and of Henry V., but now, under Henry VI., it had been neglected, and the English began to be despised by foreign nations. The English coin called the noble, he says, first issued by Edward III., was significant of this policy, because it bore on one side the king and a sword, and on the other a ship, intimating especially maritime power; but now, he says, the courage and influence of the English on the sea had fallen so low, that the Bretons, Flemings, and others, punning upon the word, said that the English ought to take the ship from their noble and put a pusillanimous sheep in its place. With this introduction, he proceeds to examine, in a most curious and interesting manner, the commercial relations of England with the continental states.

Commerce
of Spain and Flanders ;

The principal exports of Spain at this time were figs, raisins, the wine called bastard, liquorice, oil of Seville, grain, Castile soap, wax, iron, a coarse cloth called wadmotte, the skins or leather of goats and kids, saffron, and quicksilver. These were shipped to the port of Sluys, for the great commercial mart of Bruges, and in return the Spanish merchants carried home the fine cloths manufactured in the Low Countries. Here, then, we are told were two ways in which the influence of England might be exerted on Flanders and Spain. In the first place, if she shut up the passage of the straits, the trade between the two countries would be stopped entirely. In the second place, although the English weavers had not yet learnt the art of making fine cloths themselves, yet the English wools were so much superior to those of every other country, that the Flemings could not make fine cloths without them; and if England stopped the exportation of her wools, the manufacturers of Flanders would be utterly ruined. Flanders, therefore, could not permanently be at war with England without the entire ruin of her population, and that would ruin equally the commerce of Spain, so that peace with England would be absolutely necessary to both. It is true that wool was also one of the great articles of Spanish produce, but not only were the Spaniards obliged to carry their wool to Flanders to be made into cloth, but it was in itself of so poor a quality, that it was good for little unless mixed with English wool. The Flemings could not live without this foreign trade, of which their country was a sort of central and general mart; for the agricultural produce of Flanders in a year was not sufficient to keep its population alive one month. The commercial intercourse of Portugal between England and Portugal was very intimate and friendly. The chief exports of Portugal were wine of different kinds, oil, wax, grain, figs, raisins, honey, cordewain (or shoe-leather), dates, salt, and hides. They, however, like the others, were not to be allowed to pass through the straits freely in time of war; for the duke of Burgundy seems to have been considered as the arbiter of the wars in western Europe at this time; and it is assumed that, by stopping all commerce with Flanders in time of war, either by foes or friends, England would compel that prince to be her ally. The commerce of Britany also was of some importance, consisting chiefly in salt, wines a fine linen cloth known by the name of crested-cloth, and canvas, but it was carried on principally through Flanders, and might, therefore, be easily stopped if England were master of the sea. But the Breton navigators, and especially those of St. Malo were notorious at this time for their piracies, and had little claim upon English sympathies, for they had not only plundered our merchant shipping at sea, but they landed unawares on our coasts, and burnt and plundered the coast towns with impunity. Former kings had taken energetic measures against such insults, and an anecdote is told of the maritime policy of Edward III., in whose time the piratical propensities of the Bretons were equally notorious. Edward and the duke of Brittany were at war, but a peace having at last been concluded, the English merchants repaired to Britany, expecting the due protection given to the ships of friendly states, but, to their dismay, they were attacked by the Breton navy, and taken and plundered as in time of war. King Edward, we are told, loved his merchants, and he expostulated with the duke of Britany, who, in reply, alleged somewhat deceitfully that the people of Mont St. Michel and St. Malo were disobedient subjects, and that he could neither restrain them nor be answerable for them. Edward said no more, but enabled the three towns of Dartmouth, Plymouth, and Fowey to fortify themselves, and to send their sailors to make war upon the Breton rovers. They not only defeated these at sea, but they landed in Britany, and committed such ravages that the duke was now obliged to complain, and, as he received an answer similar to that which he had before given, he found himself placed under the necessity of acting with honesty, and he undertook to put a stop in future to the depredations of all his subjects. In proof of the care of Edward III. for the interests of his English merchants, we are told that he passed a statute for the Lombards, compelling them to discharge the merchandise they brought, and charge that which they were to take, within forty days. The importance of this regulation is alluded to afterwards.

Commerce
land ;

The exports of the Scots were chiefly fells, or skins, hides, and wool-fleeces, which were carried to Flanders, and the Scottish merchants carried home mercery, haberdashery, cart-wheels, and barrows. The chief marts of the Scots in Flanders were Belle and Popering, which had been recently burnt in the invasion by the duke of Gloucester. Scotland would herself be greatly distressed if England, master of the sea, held a check upon her navigation. From the Germans of Prussia and the Easterlings the Flemings derived their beer, which was one of their great articles of consumption. The author of this poem takes the occasion of making some rather coarse satirical remarks on the drunken habits of the Flemings, on their cowardly conduct before Calais, and on the punishment they received from the duke of Gloucester. The articles of commerce brought from Germany to the marts of Flanders were very numerous, and comprised, among other things, beer and bacon, a preparation of iron known by the name of osmond, copper, steel, bow-staves, wax, peltry-ware, or skins of wild animals, grey (badgers' fur), pitch, tar, boards, flax, thread of Cologne, fustian, canvas, card-board, buckram, silver plate, and wedges of silver and other metal. The German merchants carried back woollen cloth, and they ventured to the "Bay" in search of salt, so that they too would be affected either by our stopping this branch of commerce at sea, or by our cutting off the supply of fine wool to Flanders. The Italian merchants followed rather a different course of traffic. The Genoese, for instance, came to England with great carracks, laden with cloths of gold, silks, black pepper, woad, and woad-ashes, wool, oil, cotton, rock-alum, and "gold of Genoa." They took from England the English wools, but instead of carrying them home, they conveyed them to the markets of Flanders, and carried on a second traffic there. The Venetians and Florentines brought to England what our writer calls "things of complacence," meaning mere articles of luxury, under which head are included spicery and grocers' ware, with sweet wines, apes and marmosets (or monkeys), and what he calls "nifles and trifles," things which "blere the eye," and are of no substantial use or profit to the buyers. These merchants also brought in their galleys the foreign drugs which were used in medicinal receipts, which our author thinks might easily be dispensed with, as he suspects that our good English medicinal plants were more efficacious remedies.

of the Genoese;

of the Venetians and Florentines.

Indeed, he was evidently of opinion that the commerce with Italy was rather injurious than otherwise, for, in exchange for wares which were of no substantial use, they carried away some of our most valuable commodities, such as cloth, wool, and tin, which we might keep with more advantage at home. Moreover, there was so great a balance in their favour, through our foolish love for these luxuries, that they carried away our money as well as our merchandise. He complains, too, that these Italian merchants followed a system of trading which was as dishonest as it was injurious to our interests. For instance, they obtained the wool and other materials in England on credit, going to Cotswold and other districts where they were produced to buy them up at first hand, and then carried them to Flanders, where they sold them for ready money at a loss of as much as five per cent. on their purchase. This money they lent out on heavy usury, and thus realized a considerable profit out of the money before the term at which they were obliged to pay their debts in England. Practices like these, we are assured, were commonly resorted to, and were very injurious to honest English trade, to remedy which it was desirable that the old law should be resorted to, and that they should be compelled to discharge their merchandize and complete their transactions within forty days. Our author intimates that by thus allowing so much of our commerce to be carried on in foreign bottoms, we had allowed our navy to decline until we were no longer in a condition to repel foreign invasion. In illustration of this part of his subject, he tells us how Denmark, by neglecting her merchants and merchant navy, had fallen entirely from her former prosperity; and he introduces incidentally a few words in praise of the great London merchant, then not very long dead, Richard Whittington, "thrice lord mayor of London." Our writer complains further, that the indulgence given in England to foreign merchants was not reciprocated to English merchants in other countries. Thus Englishmen, trading to Brabant, were compelled to dispose of their merchandise in fourteen days, and to take within the same space of fourteen days their return cargo, on pain of forfeiting all they had. Nevertheless, it was commonly reported that the English merchants were the great supports of the marts of Brabant, which were frequented by most nations, and that if the English absented themselves the trade would be "full feeble."

The merchandise derived from Brabant consisted chiefly of madder and woad for dyers, garlic, onions, and salt fish; while the Dutch procured through Brabant from Calais our skins and wools. This commerce of Brabant was carried on, from Hainault, Burgundy, France, and other parts, by land-carriage, and not by sea; yet, though we had thus not the same means of interrupting it, our merchants were the great support of it, and could always exert a serious influence over it. As an example of the remissness of England in exerting the influence which thus naturally belonged to her, he speaks of the ravages committed on our commerce at that time by the arch-pirate Hankin Lyons, who was suffered to rob on the sea with impunity. The Lombards, he assures us, were themselves a sufficient injury to this land, without any others, and he complains that they obtained impunity by means of gifts and presents bestowed on those in power. It is intimated, somewhat obscurely, that the Lombards promoted secretly the depredations of the sea-rovers, and that people in power connived at them from interested motives.

Ireland was rich in products of various kinds, and among the articles of commerce derived thence the author enumerates hides and fish, especially salmon, Ireland, and the necessity of conquering it.

hake, and herrings, Irish linen and woollen cloths, a rough cloth called falding, the furs of martens, the hides of deer and other animals of the chase, skins of the otter, squirrel, Irish hare, sheep, lambs, and foxes, as well as of kids and rabbits in great plenty. With such numerous and valuable articles of merchandise, the author argues that there must be a community of interests between Ireland and England, and that the Irish ought to assist us in keeping the command of the sea, which they were bound to do, seeing that the king of England was by inheritance from his forefathers lord of Ireland. He speaks of the great havens and goodly bays of the sister island, such as that of Waterford, and many others, than which English merchants said that there were none better in the world for ships to ride in or for protection against enemies; of the great fertility of the soil; and, further, of its richness in gold and silver ore, which the "wild Irish" were unable to turn to account. A jeweller of London, who had brought gold ore from Ireland, had informed him that, when refined, he had obtained from it pure gold of the most excellent quality. He urges, therefore, that the English government should take care that Ireland were not lost by its negligence, for it was a "buttress and port" to support England, as Wales was another. "God forbid," he adds, "but they were all as brothers, and faithful in one allegiance to the king." He expresses, however, great fears that our power in Ireland was in imminent danger, and declares that it could not be lost without the ruin of England. At the same time he announces his intention of composing a separate book on Ireland and the English policy with regard to that country, which he either never wrote, or it is unfortunately lost. Our possessions in Ireland, he continues, were then so ineffectually defended, that the wild Irish had recently gained upon us as much as two or three English shires, so that the English ground was but as a small corner compared with the rest. If this were lost, Wales must go too, and then both would become our enemies and form alliances with Scotland, Spain, and other countries, against us. The earl of Ormond had assured him that the expenses of one year in the wars in France, if properly employed, were sufficient to reduce the whole of Ireland to obedience within twelve months, and that the money would soon be repaid by the commercial advantages which would be derived from it. Wales also required to be watched with the utmost vigilance, if we would not leave it to be a cause of weeping to our children's children. Men who knew the people were in continual apprehension of their rebellion.

The mariners of Scarborough had long been in the habit of visiting the "coasts cold" of the north, and had monopolized a trade in stockfish with Iceland, of which island this seem to have been the only export; but within twelve years before this treatise was written, that is, about the year 1424, the merchants of Bristol had found their way thither, "by nedle and by stone," or, in other words, by the guidance of the mariner's compass, and had shared in this trade, and so many ships had visited Iceland during the season in which the author compiled his book that they could not obtain cargoes sufficient to clear their expenses.

Having thus described the products and commercial position of the different countries with which England was in relation, the author of the Libel of English Policy returns to the question of keeping possession of the passage of the straits. He dwells at some length on the importance of securing Calais, quoting the same lines which conclude the song we have printed on the siege of that town, which seem to have been then proverbial. He fears that the ears of men then in power were not sufficiently open to warning, and laments over the losses of Harfleur and Rouen. In further proof of the care with which our wisest kings had provided for retaining the superiority over other nations on the sea, the story of king Edgar and his fleet is given from the old chronicles, and the writer quotes the examples of Edward III. and Henry V. King Edward, who won Calais, was able by the strength of his fleet to beleaguer it on all sides, by sea as well as by land; whereas the duke of Burgundy, in his late siege, had been obliged to leave it open to the sea, through the insufficiency of his naval force. As to Henry V., he says, what was the object of all the great ships he caused to be built at Southampton, so much larger than any of the ships of the merchant navy, such as the "Trinity," the "Grace," the "Holy Ghost," and others which are now lost? What was the king's intention with these but to make himself master of the sea? When Harfleur was attempted in his time, and the enemy brought a great fleet to attack it by sea, this fleet was destroyed by the English navy under the duke of Bedford. These reflections lead the writer into a warm eulogy of the greatness of character of the late king, Henry V. Had he lived, his great ships would not have been built in vain, but England would at this time have been undisputed mistress of the sea, instead of lamenting over the successive losses of his conquests. In conclusion, the lords of the king's council are urged to unite together in devising measures for the establishment of our supremacy on the sea, not only on account of the importance of that supremacy in a commercial point of view, but because it would prove the surest means of establishing an honourable and permanent peace with other countries. Such, in a brief abstract, is the poem entitled the "Libel of English Policy," published at a very interesting period in our national annals, and remarkable both for the sort of information it gives us, and for the political views entertained by its author.

At the moment when this poem was published, the personal dissensions were showing themselves at the English court, which afterwards took a more definite form, and inundated the kingdom with blood. The quarrel between the duke of Gloucester and cardinal Beaufort had compelled the duke of Bedford to quit his government in France at a very critical moment, in order to return to England to pacify their feuds. Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, the fourth son of Henry IV., and now, since the death of the duke of Bedford, heir-apparent to the crown, was a great favourite of the people, and was called popularly the "good duke Humphrey." He had been appointed, under the regency of the duke of Bedford, protector of England during the king's minority. He had greatly embarrassed our foreign relations by an impolitic marriage with Jacqueline, countess of Holland, who was already married to the duke of Brabant, but, when the countess's second marriage was declared void by the pope, duke Humphrey married a lady who had already lived with him as his mistress, Eleanor, daughter of Reginald lord Cobham, to whom he appears to have been much attached. The timely relief of Calais in 1436, and the subsequent invasion of the territory of the duke of Burgundy, had increased the "good duke's" popularity, to the great disappointment of the party opposed to him, who looked forward eagerly to an opportunity of revenging themselves. Their vengeance was first wreaked upon his duchess, Eleanor, his marriage with whom had been a cause of considerable scandal. Duke Humphrey was a patron of literature, and especially of science; he was the founder of what was afterwards the Bodleian Library; and he maintained an intimate intercourse with learned men. Among those whom he thus patronised was a clerk or ecclesiastic named Roger Bolingbroke, a man very learned in astronomy, or, as it was then called, astrology, and other sciences, who was permanently established in the duke's household as his chaplain. The ill-feeling between Gloucester and cardinal Beaufort had never really ceased, and it broke out with violence in 1440, in a quarrel relating to the delivery of the duke of Orleans from his long imprisonment, in which Humphrey was obliged to yield. Soon after this an accusation was brought against his duchess of having employed witchcraft to compass the young king's death, and she and Roger Bolingbroke were placed under arrest. Three other persons were thrown into prison at the same time, as accomplices in the conspiracy, a priest and canon of Westminster, another priest, named John Hum, and a person named Margery Jourdain, better known as the witch of Eye. The duchess was examined before a council of the English prelates, in St. Stephen's chapel in Westminster, on the charge of having had an image in wax made by these necromancers, as they were all judged to be, by which the king's death was to be effected. Dame Eleanor was an ambitious woman, and she, perhaps, superstitiously consulted some of these supposed magicians, to know how long the king would live, and whether she were destined to become queen of England; but the evidence against her seems to have been of a very unsubstantial character. Yet both she and her reputed accomplices were found guilty; and, while most of them were publicly executed, the duchess of Gloucester was condemned to a humiliating penance, and to imprisonment for life in the Isle of Man. The duchess Eleanor does not appear to have shared the popularity of her husband, yet her misfortunes can hardly have failed to excite some degree of public sympathy. The only monument of it with which we are acquainted is the ballad printed in the present volume, which, though preserved in a manuscript perhaps written nearly half a century later, has all the appearance of a contemporary composition. The duchess is introduced lamenting over her fall, and ascribing it to her pride and vain-glory. She regrets her high estate, and the reverence she had once commanded, tells how she was carried before the council at Westminster, where the king himself was present to hear her case; and, though according to the law she had incurred sentence of death, and "some men sought to have it executed," he took pity on her, and prevented it. She was then examined before the two cardinals (Beaufort and Kempe), five bishops, and others of the spirituality, who, on her confession, enjoined her penance, in accordance with which she went barefoot through the principal streets of London. She takes her leave sorrowfully of London, of Greenwich (where the duke had a noble palace), and of other fair places "on Thames' side;" and of all her worldly wealth—her robes of damask and cloths of gold, and other rich dresses, her minstrels and music, and "all joy and lustiness." The duke of Gloucester is said to have borne this injury with patience, but his enemies were not pacified, and there were other persecutions in store for him.

There had been frequent rumours of negotiations for peace, and some vain attempts had been made to treat, for all became wearied by these long and costly wars, but the peace party was not altogether the popular one. The people, however they complained of the burdens of the war, felt too much the humiliation of the recent reverses to give up the hope of recovering the brilliant conquests of Henry V.; while the men who now directed the measures of the court, conscious of inability, and perhaps of neglect, dreaded the continuation of disasters, the effect of which was to make them every day personally more unpopular. Two poems by Lydgate, here printed, seem to have been intended to promote the feeling in favour of peace thus desired by the ministers. The first consists chiefly of a general eulogy of peace, and concludes in wishing for a speedy peace between England and France. The second is equally indefinite in its language, though it contains more general allusions to the condition of the country; it appears to have been written at the time of the truce with France in 1444, and it contains something like an intimation of distrust at the treaty then in agitation. The year following saw the conclusion of this treaty, and the marriage of the young king with Margaret of Anjou, whose favouritism and spirit of political intrigue hastened the crisis which the disputes and jealousies of the feudal aristocracy of England were already preparing. One of its first results was the death of the duke of Gloucester, while attending the parliament at Bury St. Edmund's, in 1446, under circumstances which justify a strong suspicion that he was murdered, and the popular party did not hesitate in laying the crime to the charge of the queen and her favourite Suffolk. Gloucester's old rival and opponent, cardinal Beaufort, followed him to the grave in 1447. The great chiefs who had continued to labour with some success in keeping together the remains of the English power in France were now nearly all dead or unemployed, and disasters followed one another in rapid succession in that country, and increased the exasperation of the popular party at home. Normandy was invaded, and Rouen, Caen, and the other places held by English garrisons in that duchy, fell into the hands of the French. Amid the agitation caused in England by these events, songs and poetry, as a means of promoting the general discontent and spreading the spirit of resistance to the government which was then beginning to manifest itself, were used more largely, and assumed a bolder character. A few of these have been accidentally preserved, and afford extremely interesting illustrations of the history of the turbulent reign of Henry VI., though they are full of minute allusions which it would require very extensive research, and would, perhaps, now be hardly possible, to explain.

There is, among the charters in the Cottonian Library in the British Museum, a roll of vellum, marked ii. 23, which has belonged to a partizan of the popular cause at the time of the proceedings against the duke of Suffolk and Cade's rebellion, that is, in the years 1450 and 1451. This individual, whoever he was, has copied into his roll a great variety of political matter, such as a copy of the articles against the duke of Suffolk, the written demands of the commons of Kent assembled under Jack Cade, lists of persons involved in some of the events of the time, the duke of York's declaration to the king, one or two rather long metrical prophecies, and interspersed with the others a few political songs, which are printed in the present volume. The earliest of these, which may be as old as the year 1449, is a sort of lament over the state of our foreign affairs. The writer tells with regret how the old warriors who had established our continental power were dead, and how the work they had raised was falling to pieces; how the king was led by courtiers who cared not for the interests of their country; and how the duke of York, who was now becoming the popular hero, had been obliged to retire into Ireland to consult his own safety. In these political troubles it was customary to speak of the leaders by their signs or badges, which were as well known as their names or titles, and which had the advantage of being more comprehensive, as they were worn by their followers, who were thus recognized at a glance. The song of which I am speaking has a peculiar interest from the circumstance that, while the badges only are given in the text, an interlinear gloss in the manuscript has placed over them the name of the individual to whom each belongs. The next of these songs is a chant of joy on the committal of the duke of Suffolk, here designated as the fox, and as Jack Napes, the popular name for a monkey. Suffolk is accused of having "tied Talbot our dog," meaning, I presume, that he had designedly left him without the means of carrying on the war effectually. He is further charged with the murder of the duke of Gloucester; and it is recommended that his enemy, the earl of Salisbury, should be his confessor, and that he should be forthwith hanged at Tyburn. Some rather obscure lines at the end contain another allusion to the retreat of the duke of York to Ireland.

ON BISHOP
BOOTHE.

The third of the songs from the Cottonian Roll is directed against the unpopular prelate, bishop Boothe, who had been promoted entirely by court favour during the time that Suffolk was the favourite. William Boothe had been originally a jurist, but he subsequently embraced the clerical profession, and in 1447 obtained the bishopric of Coventry and Litchfield. The first Norman bishop of Litchfield had removed the see to Chester, and hence, although his successor carried it back (or, at least, took it to Coventry, from whence it was half restored to Litchfield), it continued long to be popularly called the bishopric of Chester. In these popular songs Boothe is always called bishop of Chester, and he is spoken of by that title in documents of a more serious character.¹ In this song

Boothe is accused of having obtained his bishopric by simony; and the writer of it seems also to charge him with ignorance, for he tells him to leave "practising on the privy of prince's power," to follow the plough, or to become a carter. The bishop is charged with usury, as well as simony, and of paying little attention to his clerical duties. The covetousness of men in power, he says, was the ruin of ancient Rome, and such was likely to be the case in England also. The bishop is spoken of in this song as an old man, suffering from palsy, and as nevertheless sacrificing his duties to his personal interest, in "praying for

" the party that all the world cried out on." The voice of the oppressed, we are told, complained of the prince, " and of the priest eke," and he warns them of approaching vengeance. As an example of how little was gained by the givers of false judgments, he reminds him of the case of Trevilian. After some further reflections on the evil-doing and treasonable designs of the bishop's "sect," or party, and an appeal to God to guide the king better than he had been guided, and to rescue him from the influence of men like the earl of Suffolk, "and from all his foes," the writer of the song calls upon Boothe to bridle himself and not be too bold, and above all things to "cast away covetousness." In 1453 Boothe was further promoted to the archbishopric of York, and he died in 1464.

A WARN-ING TO KING
HENRY.

The next of these popular compositions is addressed to the lords of the court, and contains a warning for the king himself. The courtiers who ruled the king are called upon to restore the grants they had obtained from him, for they had reduced him to such poverty that he was obliged to "beg from door to door" through his tax-gatherers. The lord treasurer Say and Daniel are exhorted to set the first example of this good work. Untruth, oppression, and evil-doing prevailed throughout the land much more than the king knew; but vengeance was at hand. The "traitors" believed that they were too cunning to be caught, and that their opponents had not the power to punish them; but, says the writer, "we swear by him that harrowed hell that they shall remain no longer in their heresy and false belief." So poor a king and such rich nobles were never seen before; while the commons could support their burdens no longer, in spite of the resolution of the lord Say to tread them under foot. The earl of Suffolk had sold Normandy, and now sought to make the king take upon himself the blame of his treason. It was evident that Suffolk was taking advantage of the king's innocence, and, unless the commons of England came to the assistance of their liege lord, that nobleman would usurp the crown. The king would do well to let these traitors no longer go loose, for they were all sworn to hold fast together. The writer concludes with a condemnation of the conduct of the late chancellor Wainflete, bishop of Winchester, and a strong assertion of the truth of what he states concerning the wrongs of the people. This is followed by a short but more direct attack on the duke of Suffolk; and those who support him are warned that, if they did not abandon him and seek popular favour, punishment would overtake them within three months.

AGAINST THE DUKE OF SUFFOLK.

The spirited ballad which follows, taken from another manuscript in the British Museum, has for its subject the death of the favourite, the duke of Suffolk. It commemorates the accident by which, in the pleasant month of May, Jack Napes, as the favourite is here termed, who had gone to sea to be a mariner, was arrested by death on the way; and how Nicholas, which was the name of the ship which stopped him, and was possibly taken by the writer for the name of a person (unless it were the name of the ship's commander), volunteered to be his confessor. The principal ecclesiastics and laymen are introduced taking different parts in the exequies of the deceased favourite. Among the ecclesiastics thus introduced are two who appear to have been especially unpopular, the bishops of Coventry and Litchfield (already mentioned) and of Norwich. It is worthy of remark that the latter is here called Walter Liard, instead of Walter Hart, which is the name by which he is known in all our lists of bishops. Nevertheless he is also undoubtedly named Liarde in the list of persons indicted at Rochester, given in the note on page lvii. of this Introduction. In some lists of the bishop of Norwich he is called Hart or Le Hart.

ON THE CORRUPTIONS OF
THE TIMES.

In the present volume these songs are followed by a few short poems, more general in their satire, most of which appear to have been written just before the civil wars between the rival houses of York and Lancaster. They are found scattered through contemporary manuscripts in different collections. The first of these complains in general terms of the absence of wisdom and truth from the state, and the prevalence of falsehood and guile. So completely was the just order of things overthrown, that, the writer says, it might be well said, that the blind man was guided by him who could not see, or, in the language of the time, "the bysom ledys the blynde," and this proverb is made the burden of the song. The writer complains, among many other griefs, that poor men were raised to be peers of the land, and that maintainers, or men who supported their dependants in doing wrong, and men ignorant of the laws, were made the dispensers of justice; that robbers and men who only looked to their private gain were established in the place of righteousness; that in the consistory courts the officials and deans sold their judgments for money; that friars, contrary to nature, were made confessors to the chief ladies of the land; that the prelates made a traffic of holy church, selling their pardons and absolutions; that the holiness which prevailed among them "came out of hell;" and that the commons loved not the great. Sin thus reigned supreme, and it was to be feared that evils would fall upon the land such as those which had been brought by sin upon France and Flanders. The next of these pieces is similar to the other in purpose and tone. It professes to show "how mischance (or misfortune) reigns in England;" and in the same way ascribes it to the sins of all ranks and of all classes of society.

All this time the persecution of the Lollards continued, though we hear perhaps less of them in consequence of the preoccupation of men's minds with the political crisis. The first piece here given is curious as being a ballad against the religious reformers, and belongs probably to the earlier part of the reign of Henry VI., or perhaps to that of Henry V. The writer pretends that, till lately, he did not know what "Lollards" were, but now that he did know it, he was astonished that anybody should be so unwise as to incur the risk of being burnt by meddling with questions which they did not understand. Above all things, he says, it was contrary to nature for a knight, whose business it was to defend castles for his king, to "babble" about the Bible day and night. It is hardly necessary to say that the allusion is to Sir John Oldcastle, the martyr, whose name was long a sort of watchword among the persecuted Wycliffites. The allusion becomes more pointed as we go on. It is not worth the wages, he continues, to remain with such a captain, who is but an "old castle," all in ruin, and who secretly laboured to raise tumults against the king and his clergy. After representing the Lollards as wolves who had introduced themselves treacherously among the sheep, he proceeds again with his punning sarcasm. The castle, he pretends, the walls of which were overthrown, was not fit for a king's residence, especially when the captain had fled, and forsaken bow and spear, in order to "creep from "kighthood into clergy." "For I trow," he adds, "there is no knight alive who would have done so open a shame, for it is no gentleman's game to study or dispute in that craft." The writer calls for the execution of the law upon men who, he intimates, only sought riot and robbery under pretence of religious reform; and he blames their contempt for images, their want of reverence for the saints who had been canonized by the church, adding an allusion to some recent occurrence in Kent, where the Wycliffites had beheaded the image of St. James. In some rather obscure Latin rhyming verses, preserved in a contemporary manuscript belonging to the library of Merton College, Oxford, the king is called upon to protect the clergy against the attacks of the laity, and the people are blamed for their ingratitude towards their sovereign. A short metrical prophecy follows, which is more obscure in its English than the Latin verses which precede. We are informed that certain disastrous occurrences are to take place, and among them a battle on the banks of the Humber, "when "Rome shall be removed into England, and every "priest shall have the pope's power in hand." Another short poem, from a manuscript in Trinity College, Cambridge, is written in alternate lines of English and Latin, and presents a very violent attack upon the friars. They are accused of leading people to hell, and of being themselves possessed by the seven mortal sins. They were, according to this account, false and deceitful, and extremely immoral, so that it was dangerous for a man who had wife or daughters to let them enter his house. No lord could afford to build such a house as these men, who pretended to live by begging, erected for themselves, so that you might imagine them to be coiners, and therefore traitors to the king. Another short English poem of the same age, after exclaiming against the extravagant apparel of the courtiers and "proud gallants," again attacks the church and the "pope-holy" priests, whose conduct was the reverse of their preaching, who obtained advancement by simony, and who were as proud and extravagant in dress as the courtiers. They are admonished to keep within their monasteries, instead of wandering about; and not to reprove other people till they set a better example themselves. If they did their duty as they ought, they might restore peace to the land. Two or three shorter scraps in English verse may be classed under the head of epigrams. One makes love complain of being exiled by envy, and ascribes it to the long beards which people wore hanging down to the breast. Another states that England had been ruined by extravagance in dress, great oaths, bribery, flatterers, and false deeds. A third describes England as in a state of universal contention, and says that the land contained much people of light consciences; many knights, who had little power; many laws, with little justice; many acts of parliament, and few of them properly kept; little charity, but much flattery; many a penniless gallant; great show of living, upon small wages; and many gentlemen, but few pages or servants. A few lines in Latin, on the same subject, follow.

ON THE TIMES.

When we return again to the poems on political events, we meet with an almost solitary example of a ballad, the subject and tone of which are of a more cheering character. The first battle of St. Alban's had been fought, and had added family feuds to the political divisions, and everything announced the approach of a sanguinary civil war. But suddenly an outward pacification was effected, and it was arranged that the great lords of the rival factions should mutually forgive each other, and that there should be a public reconciliation. This took place on the 25th of March 1458, when the king and queen and the reconciled chiefs walked in procession to St. Paul's to celebrate so joyful an event. The ballad here printed was written to celebrate this reconciliation. "Charity," it was believed (as we here learn), had at length driven wrath out of the land, and had paved the way for wealth and prosperity. The foreign enemies, who had rejoiced at our divisions, were now "quaking"

with fear at the report that peace at home had succeeded division. Sorrow had fled with shame into France, "as a felon that hath forsworne this land," and love had driven out "malicious governance." The great lords had laid aside their feuds, so that England might now enjoy concord and unity. The king and queen, and the great lords, went in friendly procession to St. Paul's on Lady-day, and showed to one another "lovely countenance," which France and Brittany would have cause to rue. It was the archbishop of Canterbury and the bishop of Winchester who had brought about this "love-day." The ballad ends with an eulogy of the city of London. The contending factions had now become those of York and Lancaster.

The songs from the Dublin manuscript.

A manuscript preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, of a few years' later date than the Cottonian roll, has, like it, a few very interesting political songs, which, with one from another MS. in the same library, were published by Sir Frederic Madden in the twenty-ninth volume of the Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries. They commence with the date of the public reconciliation just described. The first in date is the single song from the last-mentioned manuscript, where it is stated to have been written in the year 1458, and is the work of a Lancastrian partisan. Henry VI. is represented under the form of a ship, with the young prince Edward for a mast. The ship's light was a blazing cressett, representing the duke of Exeter, and its strong stern was the duke of Somerset. The sail-yard was the earl of Pembroke, the stay the duke of Buckingham; and the shrouds consisted of the lords Devonshire, Grey, Beauchamp of Powik, and Scales. The earl of Northumberland, with Ros, Clifford, and Egremont, formed the sail; the earl of Shrewsbury was the top-mast; and the ship had three good anchors, the lords Beaumont, Welles, and Rivers. St. George is appealed to for protection for this stately ship. The other Dublin manuscript has belonged, most certainly, to a Yorkist, and it was evidently written during the years 1460 and 1461. The earliest of the songs contained in it, written about the month of May in the former year, gives a list of the Yorkist leaders, and enumerates their qualities. Another commemorates the battle of Northampton, fought on the 10th of July 1460, and appears to have been composed between that time and the month of September. The Yorkists were now again the victorious party, but intrigue was soon active against them, and another of those poems in the Dublin manuscript, composed in the month of December, is a warning to them to be on their guard. A song, printed in the same volume of the Archæologia, from a manuscript in the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth, celebrates the entry of Edward IV. into London, at the beginning of March 1461. The last of the songs in the Dublin manuscript commemorates Edward's decisive victory at Towton.

To return to the poems printed in the present volume, the death of Richard duke of York, the hero of the earlier period of the wars of the roses, is here commemorated, and his titles and qualities and great actions enumerated, in an epitaph in French verse, stated to have been composed by "Chester the herald." A Latin poem, composed by a rather well known monk of St. Alban's, John de Wethamstede (called sometimes in Latin Johannes Frumentarius or de Loco Frumenti), soon after the battle of Towton, in not very elegant Latin, gives an account of the previous civil wars as far, chiefly, as they concerned the town and abbey of St. Alban's, and the object of the writer seems to have been to protest against the predatory propensities of the northern troops who formed the army of Margaret of Anjou. He gives his name at the end under the affected concealment of puns, and informs us that when it was written he was an aged man, and that he was both deaf and blind. His poem begins with an account of the first battle of St. Alban's, in which the Lancastrians were defeated, and their chiefs, the earl of Northumberland and the duke of Somerset, slain. The Lancastrians, the writer tells us, fled like children from the rod and many of them sought refuge in the abbey, and, in their terror, concealed themselves under the stalls of the church, or in any other hiding-places they could find. After the battle the victorious troops of the duke of York fell to plundering the town, and the monk who wrote these verses looks upon it as a miraculous intervention of his patron saint that the king, instead of flying to the abbey, sought refuge in a house in the middle of the town, and thus the abbey escaped plunder. A brief account of the battle of Wakefield, in which the duke of York was slain, follows, and we have then a description of the second battle of St. Alban's, in which the abbey was less fortunate. The monk speaks indignantly, and no doubt feelingly, of the barbarous conduct and rapacity of the northern troops, and narrates with evident joy the arrival and triumph of Edward, and the sanguinary punishment which he inflicted on the northern plunderers on Towton field. The poem concludes with a statement of Edward's claims to the English crown, and a comparison between him and the feeble monarch to whom he had succeeded.

A POLITICAL RETROSPECT.

A poem, in English, written at the commencement of the reign of Edward IV., gives a sort of retrospect of the history of the Lancastrian dynasty, composed in a strongly Yorkist point of view. The author praises highly the prosperous reign of Richard II., and speaks of the base usurpation of Henry of Lancaster, who had dethroned "this righteous king, God's true knight," and thrown him into prison. "The blessed confessor," archbishop Scrope, took his death "full patiently" in that quarrel. The "said Henry," for his tyranny and usurpation, was struck with leprosy, of which he died. The glory of his son, Henry V., was still too recent, and his name too popular, to allow of his being spoken of with disrespect; and, although he "reigned unrightfully," he had held up the honour of England. But no language was too strong to describe the bad qualities of his ill-fated son, and more especially of his consort queen Margaret, whose reign had been one of continuous misrule. In speaking of the sanguinary struggle which had paved the way of the house of York to the throne, and which had proved so fatal to the English nobility, the writer of this poem compares England to a garden which had been many years overgrown with weeds, and which required to be "mown down plain" before the "pleasant sweet herbs" could have a chance of growing. He quotes Edward's victories, and his constant good fortune, as an acknowledgment from heaven of his worthiness and right, and praises highly the earl of Warwick, "the load-star of knighthood, born of a stock that ever shall be true."

Edward's fortune, however, was destined to change once, and Warwick's trueness to be put to a trial in which it failed. The next poem in the present volume, a longer English poem than the preceding, commemorates Edward's return from exile in 1471 to recover his crown.

ON THE RECOVERY
THRONE
BY ED-WARD IV.

After at least warm praise of king Edward, the writer tells how, when he landed in Holderness, the people were unwilling to join him, and showed him unkindness. He, however, made his way to York in spite of his enemies, and when the people of that city had a sight of his person, "their malice was quenched," and they joined him. He proceeded thence to Pontefract, to the great chagrin of the marquis Montague, who durst not meet him. At Coventry

Edward was in want of meat, drink, and lodging for his army, yet he prepared to give battle to the earl of Warwick. He was here reconciled with his brother the duke of Clarence, but he remained long without being able to bring Warwick to fight, until "want of lodging and victual" obliged him to change his quarters, and he proceeded to London. At Daventry, a miracle—"an image which was closed "brake open suddenly"—was manifested in the abbey as a token of victory. The citizens of London received him with great joy, and he there took prisoners "a king and a clerk." He went by water from London to Westminster, where he resumed the crown and sceptre, and offered his devotions at the shrine of St. Edward. The meeting between Edward and his queen and children was very tender, but he was soon called away to meet his enemies in the field. The night before the battle of Barnet witnessed another miraculous sign in Edward's favour, for a bright star was seen to shine over his head. The battle is described at some length, after which the king returned to London, where his presence was very desirable. The bastard Falconberg had collected a multitude of fighting men, with whom he plundered the country round, and attempted to force his way into the capital, but he was successfully resisted by the citizens at London Bridge, the outer gate of which was burnt by the assailants. In another assault they applied gunpowder, as well as fire, and destroyed all the buildings up to the drawbridge, but they could get no further. They also attacked Aldgate, and burnt fair houses there, but the earl of Essex and the aldermen, with the citizens, went out at Bishopsgate, and, falling upon them, put them to flight. The earl of Rivers, too, happening to be in London, did great service, and, placing himself at the head of the citizens, attacked the Kentish men, and defeated and pursued them with great slaughter.

After this defeat the Kentish men dispersed, while king Edward came to London with his forces. The duke of Gloucester, "that noble prince,"—"grace him followeth, fortune, and good speed,"—with the earl of Pembroke, and the lord chamberlain and others, rode in the king's advanced guard of eight thousand men, and was joyfully received by the citizens. King Edward knighted eight aldermen on the field of battle. The king, accompanied by the duke of Clarence, followed with a smaller division of his army, and was received and welcomed by at least twenty thousand men. They rode through the city to St. Paul's, to offer up thanks for their success. The ballad ends with some lines in praise of Elizabeth, Edward's queen. It is rather curious that the author of this poem, who was evidently a contemporary, and probably a Londoner, should make the bastard Falconberg's attack upon London follow immediately after the battle of Barnet.

The last poem in the present collection is somewhat similar in subject to the Libel of English Policy, from which the first lines are taken, but it is much shorter. Like that poem, its theme is the supremacy which England ought to secure by her navy and commerce. There was no man, the writer says, of whatever degree, who had not absolute need of three things, meat, drink, and clothes. England, he said, possessed all these three articles in abundance, and of one there was a great superfluity, but the people neglected to make the most of this advantage. Other countries produced meat and drink for their inhabitants, but it was clear that they depended upon England for clothing, for merchants from them all came here to purchase either the raw material or the cloth that was made of it. The writer here gives a list of the countries which then traded with England, adding that there were doubtless many others with the names of which he was not acquainted, for he conjectured that all the nations under heaven, whether Christian or heathen, had need of our English commodities. He recommends that none but wool of the worst quality should be exported; because, as the coarse cloth could only be sold at a low price, while the various processes of making the cloth were nearly as expensive as in the fine cloth, so the profit of this coarse cloth to the makers was very small. The next point to which this writer calls attention makes us acquainted with rather a curious fact. A custom had, he says, been recently introduced among merchants and cloth-makers, which was very unjust and oppressive to the poor workmen, whom they compelled to take half of their wages in merchandise. This plan further enabled the employers to cheat those they employed, by giving them merchandise at a nominal value, which was double its true worth, so that it was an indirect manner of considerably diminishing their wages. Thus, "the poor had the labour, and the rich the gain." The writer demands an ordinance, or act of parliament, to compel the employers to pay the wages of their workmen in money. This system of paying wages in goods seems to have prevailed very extensively, and is represented as not only creating much misery among the poor, but as being in many cases a disadvantage to the employers themselves, and generally to the country, as it prevented the development of the national industry. This, the writer tells us, was especially the case in the mines, and he proposes a rather singular remedy. He asks for the establishment of a mint near the mines, and an ordinance that all the silver brought up should, as soon as it was refined, be coined on the spot, and that the men should receive their pay in this newly-coined money before any of it was carried away. If this were the case, he says, people would be glad to work, and the number of workmen would be increased tenfold, and necessarily the more workmen were employed in the mines the greater quantity of silver would be derived from them; thus the king himself, and through him the whole kingdom, would be enriched. In the same way, by making all the fine wools into cloth at home, and paying the workmen fairly, money would be brought into the country, and a great source of national wealth transferred from our enemies to ourselves. The suggestions contained in this poem furnish a very interesting illustration of the social condition of the English workman and of the state of English manufactures in the fifteenth century.

CIAL

This is the last poem of a political character with which I am acquainted which comes within the limits of the present collection. It is hardly necessary to state that the texts in the present volume have been edited, from the original manuscripts, on the same principles which were observed in the former. It may perhaps, however, be right to state that the plan adopted in the first volume was to collect together all the songs and short poems of a political or historical character, belonging to the period, which have been preserved, whether they had been previously printed or not; but as it has been since decided that poems which have previously been printed in works generally known and easy of access, such as the Archæologia, should not be re-edited here, that plan has, to a certain degree, been abandoned in the second volume, and such only have been re-edited as have previously appeared in books less likely to be generally known. I have thought it well at the same time, to prevent any inquirers who may be using this book from overlooking poems which have been printed elsewhere, to notice in the present Introduction all those which have been omitted.

the volume has no further pretensions than to assist the reader in understanding the texts. The English poems belong to periods scattered over a century and a half; and they are just of that popular class which present the varying peculiarities of the language, and which contain a great number of words of a popular or trivial character, which perhaps only occur once in the writings with which we are acquainted, and to the exact meaning of which we have hardly any clue. It would be almost impossible, under such circumstances, to attempt anything like a systematic philological dictionary of the English language, as exhibited in these various examples; and I have contented myself with giving an index of the obsolete words or less intelligible forms, and explaining as many of them as I can.

VOL. II.

COMPLIMENTARY VERSES ON KING HENRY IV.¹

By John Gower.

Sequitur carmen unde magnificus rex noster Henricus prænотatus apud Deum et homines cum omni benedictione glorificetur.

Rex cœli Deus et Dominus, qui tempora solus Condidit, et solus condita cuncta regit;
Qui rerum causas ex se produxit, et unum
In se principium rebus inesse dedit;
Qui dedit ut stabili motu consisteret orbis,
Fixus in æternum mobilitate sua;
Quique potens verbi produxit adesse creata,
Quique suæ mentis lege ligavit ea;
Ipse caput regum, reges quo rectificantur,
Teque tuum regnum, rex pie, quæso regat.
Grata superveniens te misit gratia nobis,
O sine labe salus, nulla par ante fuit.
Sic tuus adventus nova gaudia sponte reduxit,
Quo prius in luctu lachryma major erat.
Nos tua milities pavidos relevavit ab imo,
Quos prius oppressit ponderis omne malum.
Ex probitate tua, quo mors latitabat in umbra Vita resurrexit claraque regna regit.

¹ From MS. Cotton. Tiberius A. iv. fol. 166, r°. It is found in most of the manuscripts of Gower's Latin poems; and has here been collated with a copy in the MS. of Gower's poems in possession of the duke of Sutherland, now preserved at Trentham.

 God hath the chose in comfort of ous alle,
 The worschipe of this lond, which was doun falle,
 Now stant upriht thurgh grace of thi goodness,
 Which every man is holde for to blesse.

The high God, of his justice allone,
 The right which longeth to thi regalie Declared hath to stonde in thi persone;
 And more than God may no man justifie.
 Thi title is knowe uppon thin ancestrie,
 The londes folk hath ek thy riht affermed;
 So stant thi regne, of God and man confermed.

Ther is no man mai seie in other wise
 That God him self ne hath the riht declared, Whereof the lond is boun to thi servise,
 Which for defalte of help hath longe cared;
 But now ther is no mannes herte spared,
 To love and serve, and wirche thi plesance,
 And al is this thurgh Godes pourveiance.

 What kyng that wolde be the worthieste,
 The more he myghte oure dedly werre cesse,
 The more he schulde his worthinesse encrease.

Pes is the chief of al the worldes welthe,
 And to the heven it ledeth ek the weie;
 Pes is of soule and lif the mannes helthe
 Of pestilence, and doth the werre awcie.
 My liege lord, tak hiede of that y seie,
 If werre may be lefte, tak pes on honde,
 Which may not be withoute Goddis sonde.

With pes stant every creature in reste;
 Withoute pes ther may no lif be glad;
 Above alle othre good pes is the beste;
 Pes hath him self when werre is al bestad;
 The pes is sauf, the werre is ever adrad;
 Pes is of al charitie the keie,
 Which hath the lif and soule for to weie.

My liege lord, if that the list to seche
The sothe ensamples that the werre hath wrought, •Thou schalt wiel hiere of wise mennes speche,
That dedly werre turneth into noght.
Ffor if these olde bokes be wel soght,
Ther myght thou se what thing the werre hath do,
Both of conqueste and conquerour also.

For vein honour, or for the worldes good,
Thei that whilom the stronge werres made,
Wher be thei now, bethenk wel in thi mod ;
The day is gone, the nygth is derk and fade,
Her crualté, which mad hem thanne glade,
Thei sorwen now, and zit have noght the more ;
The blod is schad, which no man mai restore.

The werre is modir of the wronges alle ;
It sleth the prest in holi chirche at masse,
Fforlith the maide, and here flour tofalle ;
The werre maketh the grete citee lasse,
And dothe the lawe his reules overpasse.
There is no thing wherof meschef mai growe,
Which is noght caused of the werre, I trowe.

The werre bringth in poverte at hise hieles,
Wherof the comon poeple is sore grieved ;
The werre hath set his cart on thilke whieles,
Wher that fortune mai noght be believed.
Ffor whan men wene best to have achieved,
Fulle ofte it is al newe to beginne ;
The werre hath no thing siker, thogh he winne.

Forthi, my worthi prince, in Crists halve
As for a part, whos feith thou hast to guide,
Leie to this olde sor a newe salve,
And do the werre awei, what so betide ;
Pouchace pcs, and sette it be thi side,
And suffre noght thi poeple be devoured ;
So schal thi name ever after stonde honoured.

If eny man be now, or ever was,
 Aȝein the pes thi prevé counseillour,
 Lete God been of thi conseil in this cas,
 And putte awei the cruel werreieur.
 Ffor God, which is of man the creatour,
 He wolde noght men slowe his creature,
 Withoute cause of dedly forfeiture.

Wher nedeth most, behoveth most to loke;
 Mi lord, how so thi werres ben withoute
 Of time passed, who than hiede toke,
 Good were at hom to se riht wel aboute,
 Ffor evermor the werste is for to doute;
 Bot if thou myghtest parfit pes atteigne,
 Ther schulde be no cause for to pleigne.

Aboute a kyng good conseil is to preise,
 Above alle othre thinges most vailable;
 Bot ȝit a kyng withinne him self schal peise,
 And se the thinges that ben resonable;
 And theruppon he schal his wittes stable,
 Among the men to sette pes in evene,
 Ffor love of him which is the kyng of hevene.

Ha! wel is him that schedde never blod,
 Bot if it were in cause of rihtwisnesse.
 Ffor if a kyng the peril undirstod,
 What is to sle the poeple, thanne y gesse
 The dedly werres and the hevynesse,
 Wherof the pes distourbid is ful ofte,
 Schulde at som time cesse and wexe softe.

O kyng, fulfilled of grace and of knyghthode,
 Remembre uppon this point for Cristes sake;
 If pes be profred unto thi manhode,
 Thin honour sauþ, let it noght be forsake.
 Though thou the werres darst wel undirtake,
 Afür reson ȝit tempre thi corage,
 For lich to pes ther is non avantage.

My worthi lord, thenke wel how so befallē
Of thilke lore, as holi bokes sein,
Crist is the heved, and we ben membres alle,
As wel the subjit as the sovereign;
So sit it wel, that charité be plein,
Which unto God him selve most accordeth,
So as the lore of Cristes word recordeth.

In tholde lawe, er Crist him self was bore,
Among the ten comandementz y rede
How that manslaghtre schulde be forbore;
Such was the wille that time of the Godhede;
But aftirwards, whanne Crist tok his manhede,
Pes was the ferste thing he let do crie
Aȝein the worldes rancour and envie.

And er Crist wente out of this erthe liere,
And stigh to hevene, he made his testament,
Wher he beqwath to his disciples there
And ȝaf his pes, which is the fundament
Of charité, withouten whos assent
The worldes pes may never wel be tried,
Ne love kept, ne lawe justefied.

The Jewes with the paiens hadden werre,
Bot thei among hem self stode evere in pes;
Whi schulde thanne oure pes stonde out of herre,
Which Crist hath chose unto his oghne encres?
Ffor Crist is more than was Moises,
And Crist hath set the parfit of the lawe,
The which scholde in no wise be withdrawe.

To ȝive ous pes was cause whi Crist dide, Withoute pes may no thing stonde availed;
Bot now a man mai sen on everi side,
How Cristes feith is every dai assailed,
With the paiens destrued, and so batailed
That for defalte of help and of defence,
Unethe lath Crist his dewe reverence.

The righte feith to kepe of holy chirche,
 The firste point is named of knyghthode ;
 And everi man is holde for to wirche
 Uppon the point which stant to his manhode.
 Bot now, helas ! the fame is sprad so broode,
 That everi man this thing compleigneth,
 And ȝit ther is no man which help ordeigneth.

The worldes cause is waited over al,
 Ther ben the werres redi to the fulle,
 Bot Cristes oghne cause in special,
 Ther ben the swerdes and the speres dulle ;
 And with the sentence of the popes bulle,
 As for to do the folk paien obeie,
 The chirche is turned al another weie.

It is to wonder above any mannys wit,
 Withoute werre how Cristes feith was wonne ;
 And we that ben uppon this erthe ȝit,
 Ne kepe it noght as it was first begonne.
 To every creature undir the some Crist bad him self, how that we schulden preche,
 And to the folk his evangile teche.

More light it is to kepe than to make ;
 Bot that we founden made tofore the hond
 We kepe noght, bot lete it lightly slake.
 The pes of Crist hath al tobroke his bond ;
 We reste our selve, and soeffrin every lond
 To slen ech other, as thing undefendid ;
 So stant the werre, and pes is noght amendid.

Bot thogh the heved of holy chirche above
 Ne do not al his hole businesse
 Among the men to sette pes and love,
 These kynges oughten of here rightwissnesse
 Here oghne cause among hem self redresse ;
 Thogh Peters schip as now hath lost his stiere,
 It lith in hem that barge for to stiere.

If holy cherche after the dueté
 Of Cristes word ne be noght al avysed
 To make pes, acord, and unité
 Among the kinges that ben now devised, 3it natheles the lawe stant assised
 Of mannys wit to be so resonable, Withoute that to stonde hem selve stable.

Of holy chirche we ben children alle,
 And every child is holden for to bowe
 Unto the modir, how that ever it falle,
 Or elles he mot reson desalowe.
 And for that cause a knyght schal first avowe
 The right of holi chirche to defende,
 That no man schal the privilege offende.

Thus were it [good] to setten al in evene,
 The worldes princes and the prelatz bothe,
 Ffor love of him which is the king of hevene;
 And if men scholde algate wexe wrothe,
 The Sarazins, whiche unto Crist be lothe,
 Let men ben armed azein hem to fighte,
 So mai the knight his dode of arnes righte.

Uppon thre pointz stant Cristes pes oppressed;
 Ffirst holy chirche is in her silf divided,
 Which oughte of reson first to be redressed,
 Bot 3it so highe a cause is noght decided.
 And thus whan humble pacience is prided,
 The remenaunt, which that thei schulden reule,
 No wonder is though it stonde out of reule.

Of that the heved is sick, the limes aken;
 These regnes that to Cristes pes belongen,
 Ffor worldes good these dedly werres maken,
 Which heliples as in balance hongen.
 The heved above hem hath noght undirfongen
 To sette pes, bot every man sleeth other,
 And in this wise hath charité no brother.

The two defaltes bringen in the thridde,
 Of miscreantz, that sen how we debate,
 Betwene the two thei fallen in amidde,
 Wher now al dai thei finde an open gate.
 Lo, thus the dedly werre stant algate;
 Bot evere y hope of king Henries grace,
 That he it is which schal the pes embrace.

My worthi noble prince and kyng enoight,
 Whom God hath of his grace so preserved,
 Beholde and se the world uppon this point,
 As for thi part, that Cristes pes be served;
 So schal thin highe mede be reserved
 To him which al schal qwiten ate laste,
 Ffor this life hiere mai no while laste.

See Alisandre, Ector, and Julius,
 See Machabeu, David, and Josué,
 See Charlemeine, Godefroi, Arthus, Ffulfild of werre and of mortalité,
 Here fame abit, bot al is vanité;
 Ffor deth, which hath the werres under fote,
 Hath made an end of which ther is no bote.

So mai a man the sothe wite and knowe,
 That pes is good for every man to have;
 The fortune of the werre is evere unknowe,
 Bot wher pes is, ther ben the marches save.
 That now is [up], to morwe is under grave,
 The mighti God hath alle grace in honde, Withouten him pes mai noght longe stonde.

Off the tenetz to winne or lese a chase,
 May no lif wite er that the bal be ronne;
 Al stant in God, what thing man schal pourchace, Thende is in him er that it be begonne.
 Men sein the wolle, whanne it is wel sponne,
 Doth that the cloth is strong and profitable,
 And elles it mai never be durable.

The worldes chaunces uppon aventure
 Ben evere sett, bot thilke chaunce of pes
 Is so behoveli to the creature,
 That it above alle othre is piereles ;
 Bot it mai noght begete natheles
 Among the men to lasten eny while,
 Bot wher the herte is plein withoute guile.

The pes is as it were a sacrament
 Tofore the God, and schal with wordes pleine, Withouten eny double entendement
 Be treted, for the trouthe can noght feine ;
 Bot if the men withinne hem self be veine,
 The substance of the pes may noght be trewe,
 Bot every dai it chaungeth uppon newe.

Bot who that is of charité perfit,
 He voideth alle sleighthes ferr aweie,
 And sett his word upon the same plit,
 Wher that his herte hath found a siker weie ;
 And thus whan conscience is trewly weie,
 And that the pes be handlid with the wise,
 It schal abide, and stonde in alle wise.

Thapostle seith, ther mai no lif be good
 Which is noght grounded uppon charité,
 Ffor charité ne schedde nevere blod ;
 So hath the werre as ther no propriété.
 Ffor thilke vertu which is seid pité
 With charité so ferforth is acqweinted,
 That in here may no fals semblant be peinted.

Cassodre, whos writinge is auctorized,
 Seith, wher that pité regneth ther is grace,
 Thurgh which the pes hath al his welthe assised,
 So that of werre he dredeth no manace.
 Wher pité dwelleth in the same place
 Ther mai no dedly cruelté sojorne, Wherof that merci schulde his wei torne.

To se what pité forth with mercy doth,
 The cronique is at Rome in thilke empire
 Of Constantin, which is a tale soth;
 Whan him was levere his oghne deth desire
 Than do the zonge children to martire,
 Of cruauté he lasse the querele,
 Pité he wroghte, and pité was his hele.

For thilke mannes pité which he dede,
 God was pitous, and mad him hol at al;
 Silvestre cam, and in the same stede 3af him baptisme first in special,
 Which dide awai the sinne orginal,
 And al his lepre it hath so purified
 That his pité for ever is magnified.

Pité was cause whi this emperour
 Was hol in bodi and in soule bothe;
 And Rome also was set in thilke honour
 Of Cristes feith, so that the lieue of lothe,
 Which hadden be with Crist tofore wrothe, Resteined were unto Cristes lore;
 Thus schal pité be preised evermore.

My worthi liege lord, Henri be name,
 Which Engeland hast to governe and righte,
 Men oghten wel thi pité to proclame,
 Which openliche in al the worldes sighte
 Is shewed, with the help of God almighte
 To 3ive ous pes, which longe hath be deleated;
 Wherof thi pris schal nevere ben abated.

My lord, in whom hath ever 3it be founde
 Pité, withoute spot of violence,
 Kep thilke pes alwei withinne bounde
 Which God hath planted in thi conscience;
 So schal the cronique of thi pacience
 Among the seintz be take into memoire,
 To the loenge of perdurable gloire.

And to thin ertbli pris, so as y can,
 Which everi man is holde to commende,
 I, Gower, which am al thi liege man,
 This lettre unto thin excellence y sende,
 As y which evere unto my lives ende
 Wol prae for the stat of thi persone,
 In worschipe of thi sceptre and of thi throne.

Noght only to my king of pes y write,
 Bot to these othre princes cristene alle,
 That eeh of hem his oghne herte endite,
 And sese the werre er mor meschiefe falle.
 Sette ek the rightful pope uppon his stalle,
 Kep charité, and draugh pité to honde,
 Maintene lawe, and so the pes schal stonde.

Explicit carmen de pacis commendatione, quod ad laudem et memoriam serenissimi principis domini regis Henrici quarti suus humilis orator Johannes Gower composuit.

Henrici quarti primus regni fuit annus
 Quo mihi defecit visus ad acta mea.
 Omnia tempus habent, finem natura ministrat,
 Quem virtute sua frangere nemo potest.
 Ultra posse nihil quamvis mihi velle remansit,
 Amplius ut scribam non mihi posse manet.
 Dum potui scripsi, sed nunc, quia torva senectus
 Turbavit sensus, scripta relinquo scholis.
 Scribat qui veniet post me discretior alter,
 Amodo namque manus et mea penna silent.
 Hoc tamen in fine verborum quaeso meorum,
 Prospera quod statuatur regna futura Deus.

1401.

I, Jacke Upland, make my mone to very God,
 and to all true in Christ,
 that Antichrist and his disciples,
 by colour of holines, walking and deceiving Christs church
 by many false figures,

¹ This violent attack on the friars by one of the Wycliffite party has been preserved by being inserted in the early printed black-letter folios of the works of Chaucer, from whence it is here printed. The old editor was quite ignorant of the fact that it was composed in alliterative verse, and either he, or some one from whom he had it, has altered it so much, with the view apparently of removing the obscurity which seems to a certain degree inseparable from this class of old English poetry, by using common words for obsolete ones, and adding words and phrases to explain the meaning, that much of the alliteration and rhythm is lost. I give it verbatim from this printed text, except that I have arranged it in lines as nearly as I can make them from a knowledge of the rhythm of this class of versification. A comparison with the alliterative poem which follows will enable us to restore a good deal of it to its original form. The poem alluded to is a reply by a friar to the attacks of Jack Upland, and this latter is accompanied by a rejoinder which contains an allusion which enables us to fix the date of all three. The writer throws in the teeth of his opponent a recent act of justice of Henry IV., who had hanged certain traitorous friars :—

 “ execute his lawe,
 “ As he did now late,

There can be no doubt that this refers to the event thus recorded in Capgrave's Chronicle, p. 278: “ About the fest of Pentecost that same ȝere [May, 1401], certeyn men whiche had conspired the kyngis deth, &c. . . . a prest . . . was take at Ware The prest for his labour was hang and drawe. So was a chanon priour o Lawne, wech mite a lyved but for his tunge. So were certeyn religious men, and specially of the menouris order, endited of treason and hanged.” It is most probable that all these poems were composed during the year 1401; the last in date of them must have been written very soon after the event just mentioned.

where through (by Antichrist and his) many vertues been transposed to vices.

But the felliest folke that ever Antichrist found,
been last brought into the church,
and in a woonder wise ;
for they been of diverse sects of Antichrist, sown of diverse countries and kindreds.
And all men knowne well that they bee not obedient to bishops, ne leege men to kings ;
neither they tillen ne sowen,
weeden ne reapen,
wood, corn, ne grasse,
neither nothing that man should helpe,
but onely themselves,
their lives to susteine.

And these men han all manner power of God, as they seyn,
in heaven and in yearth,
to sell heaven and hell to whom that them liketh ; and these wretches weet never where to been themselves.
And therefore, freer, if thine order and rules been grounded on Goddis law, tell thou mee, Jacke Upland,
that I aske of thee,
and if thou be or thinkest to be on Christes side, keepe thy paciens.

Saint Paule teacheth that all our deedes should be do in charitie, and els it is nought worth,
but displeasing to God,
and harme to oure soules.
And for that freers challenge to be greatest clerkes of the church, and next following Christ in living, men should for charitie

ask them some questions, and pray them to ground their answeres in reason and holy writ ;
for else their answer would nought be woorth,
be it flourished never so faire, and, as me thinke, men might skilfully aske thus of a freer.

1. Freer, how many orders bee in earth ?
and which is the perfectest order ?
of what order art thou ?
who made thine order ?
what is thy rule ?
is there any perfecter rule than Christ himself made ?
If Christs rule be most perfect,
why rulest thou thee not thereafter ?
Without more, why shal a freer be more punished, if he break the rule that his patron made, than if he break the hests that God himself made.

2. Approveth Christ any more religions than one that saint James speaketh of ?
If hee approveth no more,
why hast thou left his rule, and takest another ?
Why is a freer apostata,
that leveth his order,
and taketh another sect,
sith there is but one religion of Christ ?

3. Why be ye wedded faster to your habits than a man is to his wife ?
For a man may leave his wife for a year or two,
as many men done ;

and if you leave your habite a quarter of a yeare, ye should be holden apostataes.

4. Maketh your habit you men of religion or no?

If it doe, then ever as it weareth,
your religion weareth;
and after that your habit is better,
your religion is better;
and when yee have liggen it beside,
then lig ye your religion beside you,
and been apostataes.

Why buy ye you so precious clothes, sith no man seeketh such,
but for vaine glorie,
as saint Gregorie sayth?

✓ What betokeneth your great hood,
your scaplerie,
your knotted girdle,
and your wide cope?

5. Why use ye all one colour more than other christian men doe?
What betokeneth that ye been clothed all in one manner clothing?

If yee say it betokeneth love and charitie,
certes then ye be oft hypocrites,
when any of you hateth another, and in that that ye wol be said holy by your clothing.

Why may not a freer weare clothing of another sect of freers, sith holinesse stondeth not in the cloths?

6. Why hold ye silence in one house more than another, sith men ought over all to speake the good and leave the evill?

Why eat you flesh in one house
more than in another,
if your rule and your order be perfect,
and the patron that made it?

7. Why get ye your dispensations to have it more easie?
Certes either it seemeth that yee be unperfect, or he that made it so hard,
that ye may not hold it.
And siker, if ye hold not the rule of your patrons, ye be not then her freers,
and so ye lie upon your selves.

8. Why make you as dede men, when yee be professed,
and yet ye be not dede,
but more quicke beggars than you were before?
And it seemeth evil a dede man to go about and beg.

9. Why will ye not suffer your novises hear your counsels in your chapter house, ere that they have ben professed,
if your counsels been true and after Gods law?

10. Why make yee so costly houses to dwell in, sith Christ did not so,
and dede men should have but graves,
as falleth it to dede men?
And yet ye have more courts
than many lords of England;
for ye now wenden through the realme, and ech night will lig
in your own courts, and so mow but right few lords doe.

11. Why heire you to ferme your limitors, giving therefore each yeare

 a certain rent, and will not suffer one in anothers limitation, right as yee were your selves lords of countries?
 Why be ye not under your bishops visitations,
 and leege men to our king?
 Why aske ye no letters of bretherheads of other mens praiers, as ye desire that other men should aske letters of you?
 If your letters be good,
 why grant ye them not generally to all maner of men, for the more charitie?

12. Mowe ye make any man more perfect brether for your prayers, than God hath by our beleewe,
 by our baptisme and his owne grant?
 If ye mow, certes,
 then ye be above God.
 Why make ye men beleewe
 that your golden trentall sung of you, to take therefore ten shillings,
 or at least five shillings will bring soules out of hell, or out of purgatorie?
 If this be sooth, certes,
 yee might bring all soules out of paine;
 and that wol ye nought,
 and then ye be out of charitie.

13. Why make ye men beleewe that he that is buried in your habit
 shal never come in hel,

and ye weet not of your selfe whether yee shall to hell or no?
And if this were sooth, ye should sell your high houses to make many habites for to save many mens soules.

14. Why steal ye mens children for to make hem of your sect, sith that theft is against Gods hests,
and sith your sect is not perfect?
Yee know not whether the rule that yee bind him to be best for him or worst.

15. Why underneme yee not your brethren for their trespasse after the law of the gospell, sith that underneming is the best that may be?
But ye put them in prison oft,
when they do after Gods law;
and by saint Augustines rule,
if any doe amisse,
and would not amend him,
ye should put him from you.

16. Why coveit ye shrift and burying of other mens parishens, and none other sacrament that falleth to christian folke?
Why busie ye not to heare to shrift of poore folke,
as well as of rich,
lordes and ladies,
sith they mow have more plentie of shrift-fathers than poore folke mow?
Why say ye not the gospel in houses of bedred men,
as ye do in rich mens,
that mowe goe to church and heare the gospell?
Why covet you not to burie poor folk among you, sith that they been most holy,

 as ye saine that ye ben for your povertie?

17. Why will ye not be at her diriges, as ye have ben at rich mens, sith God praiseth him more than he doth other men?
 What is thy prayer worth, sith thou wilt take therefore?
 For all chapmen yee need to bee most wise for dread of simonie.

What cause hast thou that thou wilt not preach the gospel, as God saith that thou sholdst, sith it is the best lore,
 and also our beleewe?
 Why be ye evill apaid
 that secular priestes should preach the gospell, sith God himselfe hath boddenn hem?

18. Why hate ye the gospell to be preached, sith ye be so much hold therto?
 For ye win more by yeare with In principio, than with all the rules
 that ever your patrones made.
 And in this minstrels ben better than ye;
 for they contrarien not to the mirths that they maken, but yee contrarien the gospell, both in word and deed.

19. Freer, when thou receivest a penie for to say a masse,
 whether sellest thou Gods bodie for that penie,
 or thy praier, or els thy travell?
 If thou saiest thou wolt not travell for to say the masse but for the penie,

that certes if this be sooth,
then thou lovest too litle meed for thy soule ;
and if thou sellest Gods bodie, other thy prayer,
then it is very simonie,
and art become a chapman worse than Judas, that sold it for thirtie pence.

20. Why writest thou hir names in thy tables that yeveth thee mony, sith God knoweth al thing?
For it semeth by thy writing that God would not reward him, but thou writest in thy tables,
God would els forgotten it.
Why bearest thou God in hand,
and slanderest him,
that he begged for his meat,
sith he was lord over all?
For then had he beene unwise,
to have begged and have no need thereto.
Freer, after what lawe rulest thou thee?
Where findest thou in Gods lawe that thou shouldest thus beg?

21. What manner men
needeth for to beg?
For whom oweth
such men to beg?
Why beggest thou
so for thy bretheren?
If thou saiest, for they have need,
then thou doest it for the more perfection,
or els for the least,
or els for the meane.
If it be the most perfection of all,
then should all thy brethren do so,
and then no man needed to beg but for him self,

for so should no man beg but he needed.
 And if it be the least perfection, why lovest thou then other men more than thyselfe?
 For so thou art not well in charitie, since thou shouldest seek the more perfection, after thy power living
 thy self most after God;
 and thus leaving that imperfection, thou shouldest not so beg for them.
 And if it is a good mean,
 thus to beg as thou doest,
 then should no man do so,
 but they been in this good meane;
 and yet such a mean granted to you may never be grounded on Gods law,
 for then both lerid and leaud that ben in meane degree of this world, should go about
 and beg as ye do.
 And if all should do so, certes well nigh all the world should go about
 and beg as ye done,
 and so should there be ten beggers against one yever.
 Why procurest thou men to yeve the their almes,
 and saiest it is so needful, and thou wilt not thy selfe win thee that meed.

22. Why wilt thou not beg for poore bedred men that bin poorer than any of your sect, that ligen and mow not go about to help him selves?

Sith we be all brethren in God,
and that bretherhed passeth any other that ye or any man could make.

And where most need were,
there were most perfection;
either els yee hold them not your pure brethren, but worse, but then ye be unperfect in your begging.

Why make ye so many maisters among you,
sith it is against the teaching of Christ and his apostles?

23. Whose ben all your rich courts that yee han, and all your rich jewels, sith ye seyen that ye han nought ne in proper ne in common?

If ye saine they ben the popes, why gather yee then of poore men and lords so much out of the kings hand to make your pope rich,

And sith ye sain that it is great perfection to have nought in proper ne in common, why bee ye so fast about to make the pope, that is your father, rich, and put on him imperfection?

Sithen ye saine that your goods been all his,
and he should by reason be the most perfect man, it seemeth openlich that ye been cursed children so to slander your father and make him imperfect.

And if yee saine that the goods be yours,

then do ye ayenst your rule.
 And if it be not ayenst your rule, then might ye have both plough and cart,
 and labour as other good men done,
 and not so to beg by losengery,
 and idle, as ye done.
 If yee say that it is more perfection to beg,
 than to travell or to worch with your hand,
 why preach ye not openly,
 and teach all men to do so,
 sith it is the best and most perfect life to the help of their soules, as ye make children to beg,
 that might have bin rich heirs?
 Why make ye not your feasts to poore men, and yeveth him yefts,
 as yee done to the rich, sith poore men han
 more need than the rich?
 What betokeneth that ye goe tweine and tweine togither?
 If ye be out of charitie,
 ye accord not in soule.
 Why beg ye and take salaries therto
 more than other priests,
 sith hee that most taketh,
 most charge hath?

24. Why hold ye not saint Francis rule and his testament, sith Francis saith that God shewed him
 this living and this rule?
 and certes, if it were Gods will,
 the pope might not fordo it,
 or els Francis was a liar,
 that saied in this wise.

And but this testament that he made accord with Gods will,
or els erred, he is a lier,
that were out of charitie ;
and as the law saith, he is accursed that letteth the rightful last wil of a dead man.
And this testament is the last will of Francis that is a dead man ;
it seemeth therefore that all his freers been cursed.

25. Why will ye not touch no coined money with the crosse ne with the kings head, as ye done other jewels
both of gold and silver?
Certes if ye despise the crosse,
or the kings head,
then ye be worthy to be despised of God and the king ;
and sith ye will receive money
in your hearts, and not with your hands, it seemeth that ye hold more holinesse in your hands than in your hearts, and then be false to God.

26. Why have ye exempt you from our kings lawes, and visiting of our bishops, more than other christen men that liven in this realme,
if ye be not guiltie of traitoric to our realme,
or trespassers to your bishops ?
But ye will have the kings lawes for the trespasse doe to you, and ye wil have power of other bishops
more than other priests,
and also have leave to prison your brethren,
as lords in your courts,
more than other folks han that ben the kings leege men.

27. Why shal some sect of you freers pay ech a yere a certaine to her generall provinciall or minister, or els to her sovereignes,
 but if he steal a certaine number of children, as some men saine?
 And certes, if this ben sooth, then yee bee constrained upon certain pain to do theft, against Gods commaundement, Non furtum facies.

28. Why be ye so hardie to grant by letters of fraternitie to men and women, that they shall have part and merite of all your good deedes?
 And ye weten never whether God bee apayed with your deedes, because of your sinne.
 Also yee witten never whether that man or woman be in state to bee saved or damned, then shall he have no merit in heaven for his owne deedes ne for none other mans.
 And all were it so that he should have part of your good deedes, yet should hee have no more that God would give him
 after that he were worthie;
 and so much shall each man have of God's yeft,
 without your limitation.
 But if ye will say that ye been Gods fellowes, and that he may nought doe without your assent, then be ye blasphemers to God.

29. What betokeneth that yee have ordeined, that when such one as ye have made your brother or sister, and hath a letter of your seale,
 that letter mought bee brought in your holye chapter, and there be rad,

or els yee will not pray for him.
And but ye willen pray especially for all other that were not made your brethren or sistren, then were ye not in right charitie,
for that ought to be common,
and semely in ghostly things.

30. Freer, what charitie is this,
to overcharge the people by mightie begging, under colour of preaching,
or praying, or masses singing?
Sith holy write biddeth not thus,
but even the contrarie;
for all such ghostly deedes should be done frely,
as God yeveth them freely.

31. Freer, what charitie is this,
to beguile children or they comen to discretion,
and bind hem to your orders,
that ben not grounded in Gods law,
agains hir friends will?
Sithen by this follie been many apostataes,
both in will and deed, and many beene apostataes in hir will during all her life, that would gladly be discharged,
if they wist how;
and so many ben apostataes,
that shoulde in other states have been true men.

32. Freer, what charitie is this,
to make so many freers
in every country,
to the charge of the people?
Sith persons and vicars alone,
ye, secular priests alone,
ye, monkes and cannons alone,

with bishops above them, were ynough to the church to doe the priests office.
And to adde more than ynough,
is a foule error,
and great charge to the people, and this openly against Gods will,
that ordained all thyngs
to be done in weight, number, and measure.
And Christ himselfe was apaied with twelve apostles and a fewe disciples, to preach and doe priests office
to all the whole world;
then was it better doe than is nowe at this time,
by a thousand dele.
And right so as foure fingers with a thombe in a mans hand helpeth a man to worch, and double number of fingers in one hand should let him more;
and so the more number that there were passing the measure of Gods ordinaunce, the more were a man letted to worch;
right so, as it seemeth,
it is of these new orders that ben added to the church, without ground of holy write and Gods ordinance.

33. Freer, what charity is this,
to the people to lie,
and say that ye follow Christ in povertie more than other men done?
And yet in curious and costly housing,
and fine and precious clothing,
and delicious and liking feeding,
and in treasure and jewels,
and rich ornaments,
freers passen lords
and other rich worldly men, and soonest they should bring her cause about,

be it never so costly,
though Gods law be put abacke.

34. Freer, what charitie is this,
to gather up the books of holy write,
and put hem in tresorie,
and so emprison them from secular priestes and curats, and by this cautell
let hem to preach the gospell freely to the people without worldly meed, and also to defame
good priests of heresie,
and lien on hem openly,
for to let hem to show Gods law by the holy gospell to the Christian people.

35. Freer, what charitie is this,
to faine so much holines in your bodily clothing,
that ye clepe your habit,
that many blind fools desiren to die therein
more than in another?
And also that a freer that leveth his habit,
late founden of men,
may not be assoiled
till he take it againe,
but is apostata, as ye saine,
and cursed of God and man both?
The freer beleeveth truth and patience, chastitie, meeknesse, and sobrietie, yet for the more part of his life he may soon be assoiled of his prior;
and if he bring home to his house much good by the yeare, bee it never so falsely begged and pilled

of the poore and needie people in countries about,
he shall be hold a noble freer ;
o Lord, whether this be charitie !

36. Freer, what charity is this,
to prease upon a rich man,
and to intice him to be buried among you from his parish church,
and to such rich men give letters of fraternitie, confirmed by your generall seale,
and therby to bear him in hand,
that he shal have part of all your masses,
mattens, preachings,
fastings, wakings,
and all other good deeds done by your brethren of your order,
both whilest he liveth,
and after that he is dead ;
and yet ye witten never whether your deeds be acceptable to God, ne whether that man that hath that letter be able by good living to receive any part of your deeds.
And yet a poore man,
that ye wite well or supposen in corten
to have no good of,
ye ne given to such letters, though he be a better man to God than such a rich man.
Neverthelesse this poore man doth not retch therof ;
for as men supposen,
such letters, and many other that freers behoten to men, be full false deceits of freers,

out of all reason,
and Gods law,
and Christian mens faith.

37. Freer, what charitie is this,
to be confessors of lords and ladies,
and to other mightie men,
and not amend hem in hir living?
but rather, as it seemeth,
to be the bolder
to pill hir poore tenants,
and to live in lechery;
and there to dwell in your office of confessor for winning of worldlie goods, and to be hold great
by colour of such ghostly offices?
This seemeth rather pride of freers, than charitie of God.

38. Freer, what charitie is this,
to fain that who so liveth after your order,
liveth most perfectlie,
and next followeth the state of apostles
in povertie and penance;
and yet the wisest and greatest clerkes of you wend or send or procure to the court of Rome, to be made cardinals or bishops of the popes chaplens,
and to be assoiled of the vow of povertie and obedience to your ministers;
in the which, as ye sain, standeth most perfection and merit of your orders;
and thus ye faren as Pharisees that sain one and do another to the contrarie,

Why name ye more the patron of your order in your Confiteor, when ye begin masse,
than other saints,

apostles, or martyrs,
that holy church hold[eth]
more glorious than hem, and clepe hem your patrons and your avowries?

Freer, whether was saint Francis in making of his rule that he set thine order in, a foole and a liar,
or else wise and true?
If ye sain that he was not a foole, but wise,
ne a liar, but true,
why shew ye contrarie by your doing, when by your suggestion to the pope ye said that your rule that Francis made was so hard,
that ye mow not live to hold it,
without declaration and dispensation of the pope?
And so by your deed,
ne let your patron a foole,
that made a rule so hard that no man may well keepe;
and eke your deed prooveth him a liar,
where he saith in his rule, that he tooke and learned it of the Holy Ghost;
for how might ye for shame pray the pope
undo that the Holy Ghost bit, as when ye prayed him to dispense with the hardnesse of your order?

Freer, which of the foure orders of friers is best,
to a man that knoweth not which is the best,
but would faine enter into the best, and none other?
If thou saiest that thine is the best,
then saiest thou that none of the other is as good as thine ;

and in this ech freer in the three other orders
wooll say that thou liest, for in the self same maner ech other freer wooll say that his order is best.
And thus to ech of the foure orders bin the other three contrary in this point, in the which if any say sooth,
that is one alone,
for there may but one
be the best of foure.
So followeth it that if ech of these orders answered to this question as thou doest, three were false, and but one true,
and yet no man should wite who that were.
And thus it seemeth that the most part of freers bin or should be liars in this point, and they should answere thereto.
If you say that another order of the freers is better than thine, or as good,
why tooke ye not rather thereto as to the better, when thou mightst have chose at the begining?
And eke why shouldst thou be an apostata, to leave thine order and take thee to that is better, and so why goest thou not from thine order into that?

Freer, is there any perfecter rule of religion than Christ Gods sonne gave in his gospell to his brethren?
or than that religion that saint James in his epistle maketh mention of?
If you say yes, then puttest thou on Christ, that is the wisdom of God the Father, unkunning, unpower,
and evill will ;

for then he could not make his rule so good as an other did his,
and so he had be ununning ;
that he might not so make his rule so good as another man might,
and so were he unmightie, and not God ;
as he would not make his rule so perfect as another did his,
and so he had bin evill willed, namely to himselfe.

For if he might and could,
and would have made a rule perfect, without default, and did not,
he was not Gods Sonne almighty.

For if any other rule be perfecter than Christes, then must Christes rule
lacke of that perfection, by as much as the other weren more perfecter ;
and so were default, and Christ had failed in making of his rule ; but to put any default or failing in God is blasphemie.

If thou say that Christes rule, and that religion which saint James maketh mention of,
is perfectest, why holdest thou not thilke rule without more ?

And why clepest thou the rather of saint Francis or saint Dominiks rule, or religion or order,
than of Christes rule or Christes order ?

Freer, canst thou any default assigne
in Christes rule of the gospell,

with the which he taught all men sikerly to be saved,
if they kept it to her ending?
If thou say it was too hard,
then saiest thou Christ lied;
for he said of his rule,
“ My yoke is soft and my burden light.”
If thou say Christes rule was too light;
that may be assigned for no default,
for the better it may be kept.
If thou saist that there is no default
in Christes rule of the gospell, sith Christ himself saith
it is light and easie, what need was it to patrons of freers to adde more thereto, and so to make an harder religion to save freers than was the religion of Christes apostles, and his disciples helden,
and were saved by?
But if they woulden that her freers saten above the apostles in heaven for the harder religion that they keepen here,
so would they sitten in heaven above Christ himselfe,
for their more and streict observations, then so should they be better than Christ himself, with mischance.

Go now foorth, and fraine your clerks, and ground ye you in Gods law,
and gif Jacke an answer;
and when ye han assoiled me that I have said sadly, in truth I shall soile thee of thine orders,
and save thee to heaven.

If freers kun not, or mow not,
 excuse hem of these questions asked of hem, it seemeth that they be horrible giltie against God and her even christian;
 for which gilts and defaults
 it were worthy that the order, that they cal their order,
 were fordone.
 And it is woonder that men susteine hem,
 or suffer hir live in such maner.
 For holie write biddeth that thou do well to the meeke, and give not to the wicked,
 but forbed to give hem bread, least they be made thereby mightier through you.

THE REPLY OF FRIAR DAW TOPIAS, WITH JACK

1401.

Ho shal graunten to myn eye
 a strong streme of teres, to wailen and to wepyn

An answer to this tretis,
 that a frere hath forgid;
 he callith hym self Daw Topias,

¹ These two alliterative poems, a reply to and a defence of the preceding, are preserved in a contemporary MS. in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, MS. Digby, No. 41, fol. 2, r^o. The allusion which fixes their date has already been pointed out in the note at the beginning of the satire of Jack Upland.

the sorwyng of synne?
 for charité is chasid
 and flemed out of londe, and every state stakerth unstable in him silfe.
 Now apperid the prophecie that seint Joon seide, to joyne therto Johel
 in his soth sawis;
 the moone is al blodi
 and dymme on to lokyn, that signefieth lordship
 forslokend in synne;
 the sterres ben on erthe throwun
 and fallen to the erthe, and so is the comounté
 treuli oppressid;
 the sunne is eclipsid with al his twelve pointes,
 by erreure and heresie,
 that rengnith in the chirche.

ares[oneth] Jak Uplonde.
 He groundith hym upon seven thynges,
 as his ordre askith,
 lesynges with losengery,
 cursynges and false glose, chidyng with blasfemie
 or chyteryng as chowȝes.
 Thow saist thi name is Dawe,
 it may rith wel be so;
 ffor thou hast condiciounes of a tame¹ chowȝe.
 He chiterith and he bribith
 alle that he may gete;

¹ I have ventured to read the word thus, but it is nearly effaced | in the MS. and cannot be read with certainty.

Now is oure bileve laft and Lollardi growith;
envie is enhaunsid
and aproched to preestes, that shulden enforme her flok
and ground in Goddes lawe, to love her God sovereynli,
and sithen her brothir.
Bot not for thanne now is tauzt hindring of states,
and pursuyng of poverte,
that Crist hath approved.
Now is that seed of cisme sowen in the chirche;
the whete fadith with the floure,
oure fode is for to feche.
Ffoxes frettid in fere wasten the cornes,
and Cristes vine is vanishid to the verray rote.
Now Achor spoilith Jerico, and lyveth of the thefte;
and so lyven this Lollardis

this he doth in dede asseye of hem that knowith.
Jak Dawe, thou blaberist blasfemies, and reson hast thou non;
thou leggist oft Goddis lawe,
bot to a false entente;
zee, falselier than the fende,
whan he saide to Crist, Quia angelis suis mandavit de te.
Daw, thou fablest of foxes,
and appliest hem to a puple,
of whom nether thou knowyst kunnyng, ne her conversacion.
Bot iche man that witte hath,

in her fals fablis.
 Datan and Abiron and Chorees children, with newe senceres ensencen
 the auters of synne.
 Baal preestes ben bolde sacrifice to make,
 and mortel maladi
 crepith in as a canker ;
 and thus is Jak Uplond fodid with folie,
 and thourȝ formyng of his formere
 thus freyneth a frere.
 On wounder wise, seith Jak, freres, ȝe ben growun ;
 sowen in ȝoure sectes of Anticristis hondes ;
 unboxom to bishopis,
 not lege men to kynges ;
 wede corn ne gras
 wil ȝe not hewen,
 ne lyven with Jakke in labour,
 but al to ȝour ese.

and happe of discrecion,
 may knowe thee and thin ordre,
 as Crist saith, bi the werkes.
 Take propirté of twey foxes,
 and werkes of twye freres,
 and than thou fyndest hem meche acorde, bot freres ben the werse ;
 if thou saist this is not so,
 bot groundid without skil, loke how Sampson bonde the foxes
 two and two togedir, til that thai destried
 the corne alle about hem,
 and this was, as a doctour saith,
 the figur of freres.

Jak, thi formur is a fole,
that thus thee hath yfourmed, to make so lewid an argument
azens so many freres, that better knowen liztles
her doctours and her bible, than he can rede his troper bi a long torche.
But, Jak, thouz thi questions
semen to thee wyse, zit liztly a lewid man
maye leyen hem a water ;
ffor summe ben lewid, summe ben shrewid summe falsli supposid ;
and therfore shal no maister,
ne no man of scole,
be vexid with thy maters,
but a lewid frere
that men callen frere Daw Topias, as lewid as a leke,
to medelin with thi malice
as longe as thou wolt.
¶ That we ben not lege men, Jak, lowde thou lyst ;
ffor lenger than we lyven so,
abide we not in londe,
the sotil witt of wyse men
shulde temte us wel soone, and fleme us from felowshipe,

¶ Dawe, thou saist proudely I lie,
for I telle the trouthe ;
ffor that [thei] ben not lege men men knowlechen wise ;
ffor whan ze ben trespassoures
in theft or other vices, and done us of dawc.

 We obeien to bishopes,
 as boxomnesse askith,
 althouzz not so fer forth
 as seculer preestes;
 ffor holy chirche hath us hent
 and happid with grace, to were us from wederes
 of wynteres stormes,
 wede corn ne gras
 have we not to hewen, ne with Jakke Uplond
 ferme the dikes;
 ¶ althouȝ Poul in his pistele laborers preise, displesith him not the preestes
 that syngen her masses.
 For riȝt as in thi bodi, Jake ben ordeyned thin hondis, ffor thin heed and for thi feet and for thin eyen to wirken, ȝour priour may at wille

 fecche ȝou home to hym, without kynges commission,
 Jak, bot gret aȝen reson.
 Ffor oft ȝe leden awaye mennes wifes,
 and ben sette in stokkes.
 Bot ȝour captaynes chalengen ȝow,
 and asken not leve of kynges.

¶ Me mervelith of thi lewdnes, Dawc, or of wilful lesynges;
 ffor Poule laborid with his hondes,
 and other postilles also;
 ȝee, oure gentil Jhesu,
 as it is openly knowe.
 And thes were the best prestes

riȝt so the comoun peple God hath disposid, to laboren for holi chirche and lordshipis also.

A! for-writhen serpent, thi wyles ben aspied,
with a thousand wrynkel
thou vexed many soules;
thi malice is so michel,
thou maist not for-hele, but thi venym with vehemens thou spittist al at ones.

Thou seist we ben confounders of prelates and of lordes;
but, Jakke, bi my lewté,
lowde thou lyst;
ffor telle me, bi oure counseile what lord hath ben confoundid?
or what prelat of ony pepil put in ony peril?
But sith that wickide worme, Wiclyf be his name,
began to sowe the seed
of cisme in the erthe, sorowe and shendship
hath awaked wyde,
in lordship and prelacie hath growe the lasse grace.
Jak, thou seist with symonye
the seven sacramentes we sellen, that ever rose on ground; e

and the best messes song, not lettyng hem her labour.
But suche bolde beggyng hatid thai in worde and werke.

and preien for no men but 3if thei willen paien.
 God wote, Jakke, thou sparist
 here the sothe,
 and, er we departen us asoundre,
 it shal wel be shewid.
 But oon is the sacrament that we han to dispensen off penaunce to the peple whan nede askith.
 I trowe it be thi parochie preest, Jacke, that thou meenest, that nyl not hosel his parischens til the peny be paied, ¶ ne assoilen hem of her synne withouten schrift silver.
 Jakke, of thi foli
 thou feynest fife erores, and 3it ben ther but foure
 foundid in the lawe, ffalsly as thou seist
 and soone shal be distroied.
 Jakke, thi lewid prophecie
 I preise not at a peese.
 Somme fantasie of Fiton

¶ Dawe, thou spekist proudely, apechyng oure prestes;
 bot of oon thyng am I certen, thai ben lasse evel than 3e.
 Ffor alle if thai synne oft,
 as it is wel knowen, 3it the grounde that thai have is playnly Cristis religion.
 And thou 3 thai straye oft therfro, 3it mowe thai com to grace.
 Bot 3e han left that grounde, hath marrid thi mynde ;

thou prophete of Baal,
thi God is aslepe ;
the goodnesse of the grost
may not lizten upon thee.
Whi presumyst thou so proudli to prophecie these thingis ?
and wost no more what thou blabereſt than Balames aſſe.
Thou mayntenist in thi mater that matrimony thus we marre ;
but this arowe ſhal turne azen to him that it ſent, ffor thou and thi ſecte,
sothli ze ſchenden,
in as moche as ze may,
the ſacramentis ſeven,
and reles of ſynne
and grauntyng of grace, and Cristis bitter paſſioun ze sette not at an hawe.
Who marrith more matrimonie, ze or the freris,

and your patron bothe.
Ffor as the prophetes of Achab wer multiplied in many,
and by oon holy prophet were thai alle deſtried, so the chirche is cropun now to multitude of curſid men, whiche of ſadde bileve
moſt nede be deſtried.
Bot I prayſe nother preſtes ne thee,
for your aſſent in ſymonye.

¶ with wrenchis and wiles wynnen mennes wyves, and maken hem scolers
 of the newe scole,
 and reden hem her forme
 in the lowe chaier?
 To maken hem profit in ȝour lawe thei rede ȝour rounde rollis, and callen hem forth her lessouns with, "Sister, me nedith."

Jak, thou seist that we biden the castels of Caym.
 It is Goodis hous, oold schrewe, that we ben aboute,
 to mayntenen his servauntis
 to singe and to reden,
 and bidden for the peple,
 as we ben beholden.
 Clerkis sein that Salomon made a solempne temple,

¶ Daw, I have askid questiones of thee and of thi freres;
 bot that I lied oones ouȝt knewe I me not gilty, ffor Goddis lawe forbedith this in many place, I wene.
 And thowȝ I be Jak Uplonde, ȝit drede I Goddis lawe.
 Bot I suppose thi secte tristith
 so meche in her habites, that thai kun lye of custum,
 as Peter prophecith of hem, Fuerunt pseudo-prophetæ in populis, magistri mendaces, etc.
 Bot to lie thus playnly and openly on men,

¶ and ȝit was it bot figure of oure newe chirche, that ech holi hous that Crist him silf in dwellith.

Jak, thou seist ful serpentli, and sowdiours us thou callist, sette for oure sutilté in Anticristis vaunwarde.
Crist in the gospel
rehersith a rewle,
how ech man shal be knowun
oonli bi his werkes;

ȝe count it not synne,
as ȝour wordes shewen;
ȝour freres ben taken alle day
with wymmen and wives, bot of ȝour privey sodomye spake I not ȝette.
Bot lat see, Dawe, if thou,
or any lyer of thin ordre, can preve this on oon of hem that clepest my secte, and sicerly shalle thou have of me an hundrith pounce.

¶ Daw, thou leggist Salomon for ȝour hie houses;
bot olde holy doctoures
ben aȝen thee here, and specialy Jerom,
that saith in the lawe,
who wil allege the temple
for glorie of our chirche, fforsake he to be cristen, Jak,
and be he newe a Jewe.

and if we were founden on Anticristis side,
 oure werkes shulden shewen,
 Jakke, ful soone.
 The werkes of Anticrist pursuen oure bileve, so do the disciplis

 shending the sacramentes, salve to oure soris.

12 7̃. 2^a Gloria episcopi.

Ffor sith the pore lorde, he saith, halowed his pore chirche, take 3e Cristes crosse, he saith, and counte we delices claye.
 Daw, blaberere and blynde leder,
 thowg thou bigile symple hertes with thi gildyn glose,
 and with thi costly houses, thou bigilest not Jak with 3our thevishe logges.

Unde in evangelio, vos autem fecistis eam speluncam latronum.

¶ Ze resseyve your wisdom ;
your preching is perilouse,
it poiseneth sone,
as honyed venym
it crepit in swot.
Jak, in the Apocalypse
ful pertli ze be peintid, whan the seven angels
blowun there seven trompis, to warne Anticristis meyné of our Lordes comyng,
with her sterne stormes astonye al the erthe, reve men of her rest,
and ferli hem afefe.
The first angel with his blast
he noieth ful sore, hayl and fier he myngit with blood
he sendith to the erthe, by the tokenyng that your preching, Jak,
makith obstinat hertis.
Your daliaunce inducit ire and envie.
Who ben more Fariseis than hinderers of soulis,

¶ Topias, thou writist me to be a lewed man ;
bot lewed men prechen not,
as thou canst saye,
bot if the list to lye.
Bot I wot thou saist thus,
by vertuose prestes ;
bot thai ben ful bisie
to edife the chirche,

the which in her interpretacion divisioun ben callid ;
 and ȝour teching in an hour
 wil breke mo love-daies, than ȝe mowe brynge togidere
 vij. ȝere after.
 The secounde aungel wit his blast
 smythith with drede, and an huge hill is sent adoun
 into the salt water ;
 the thridde party of creaturis
 ben bitter therof, ffor Sathanas by ȝour sawes
 is sent into soulis,
 that ben ful unsavery,
 and saltid by synne.
 The bitternesse of ȝour bacbityng brewith many bales.
 The thridde angel sent down
 a sterre from heven, breimli brennynge as a bround,
 wermode it was callid ;
 wermode, Jak, moost verrel was Wiclif, ȝour maister, withinne in his begynnyng
 litht lemed he by cunnyng,

that the multitude of ȝou han allemost destried.
 Ffor the gospel saith,
Surgent multi pseudo-prophete.
 Bot of hem ben fewe,
 and gretly dispiside ;
 and of ȝou ful many,
 and ever tho mo the werse.

¶ but aftir with wrong wrytyng he wrouz̃te mykil care, and presumynge perilously foul fel fro the chirche, missaverynge of the sacrament,
 infectyng many other.
 Thus brenneth he zit as a bronde, consumyng many soulis,
 that in her hard obstinacy
 growen schides of helle.
 Maximine ne Maniché nevere wrouz̃ten more wrake.
 Therefore from wele is he went,
 and woo mote him wrynge.
 The iiij^e aungel with his blast
 smytith riȝt smerte;
 the iiij. party of the sonne
 with dymmenes is dirked, off the moone and of the sterres,
 and of the day also;
 and the egle in the eyre thries væ! wescheth.

¶ Me mervelith, Daw, thou darst thus lie on suche a gret clerke, and in hys tyme knowen wel
 a vertuose man, of riche and pore
 that hym tho knewe.
 But thou, as blynde Bayarde, berkest at the mone,
 as an olde mylne dog
 when he bygynnith to dote.
 Bot wel I wot thi baffyng,
 lye thou never so lowde,
 may not menuse thiȝ seint,
 that lyved and tauȝt so truly,
Quia dignus est operari misericordiam.

The sonne is holy chirche,
 and lordship the moone,
 the sterres ben the comuns,
 as I seid bifore, ¶ and alle these ben alured to 3oure sory secte ;
 and summe of ech of these astates
 ben privyly apoisoned.
 Therfore thries væ !
 is manassid upon 3ou, ffor three manere of synnes that comunly 3e usen ;
væ for envye, væ for ipocrisie,
 and væ for 3our leccherie.
 Whan the first angel blew,
 ther was a pit.opend,
 ther rose smotheryng smoke,
 and brese therinne,
 alle thei weren lich horses
 araied into bataile,
 thei stongen as scorioun,
 and hadden mannis face,
 tothed as a lioun,
 with haburjouns of iren.
 This pitte is the depnes, Jak, of 3our malice ;
 the smothering smoke
 is 3our dymme doctrine, that flieth out from the flawmes

¶ I drede me, Dawe, the sentence, of whiche the prophet spekith,
 shal falle hevy on thin hede,
 and many of thi brether.
Væ vobis qui dicitis bonum malum et malum bonum.
 Ffor alle trwe sentence,

of the develis malice,
 that troublith and blindith
 the izen of mannis resoun.
 The breses ben not ellis
 but Anticristis menye, with short legges bifore and longe bihinde;
 the which pretenden first mekenesse of herte,
 and aftir rysyng to arrogaunce, disdeynynge al other.
 That 3e ben lyke scorpions, signefieth not ellis,
 but that 3e flateren afor,
 and venym casten bihinde.
 3e ben also lich horses
 redy into bateil,
 by woodnesse and foolhardinesse for heresie to dien.
 3e ben tothed as lyoun
 by stynkyng detraccioun.
 3our haburjons that 3e han upon,
 ben cauteles and sleiztes.
 ech intrikid in other,
 to snarre symple soules;
 but that thei ben of iren,
 obstinacie is shewid,
 ffor the which with Farao in helle 3e wil be dampned.

that we taken here,
 thou turnest into falsenes,
 that woo shal the bitide;
 ffor to our secte that is Christis
 we drawen bot fewe puple;
 ffor thou and other pseudo

In the sizt of aungels blast foure aungels there were lousid, the whiche were redye bothe day and nyzte men for to noien;
 to sleen the ferthe part of men with fyr, smoke, and brymstone.
 Ffoure angels singnesien foure general synnes, sett up bi sir Adam, Jakke,
 among your maistris,
 cediciouns, supersticions,
 the glotouns, and the proude.
 Poerte preambelis to presse aforne Anticristis comyng,
 to sleen the thridde party of men with ther deedly dartis off envie, pride,
 and leschry stynkyng.
 Ffor sum ben perfit, sum ben yvel,
 sum ben unstable;
 the perfit wole not ben hirt,
 the yvel ben al redy,
 but thei that ben unstable
 resseyven the strokes, and thei ben clepid the thridde part of hem that ben dede.
 The seventhe angel blew his trumpe,
 and noise in heven was made,

han marrid hem in the way, that bot if God of his grace
 sende his honde of help, the chirche that shuld folowe Crist,
 is lykly to sinke.

Qui mihi ministrat me sequatur. Attendite a fermento Phariseorum, quod est hypocrisis.

that the kyngdom of this world
 shulde falle to Cristis hondis;
 betokenyng that thouz Anticrist,
 with his myȝti meyné, shulde for a short tyme
 by tirantrie intrusyve, ȝit shal God gader his flok togider,
 and rengne without eende.
 Jak, thus to dubby with scripture,
 me thinkith grete folie;
 ffor as lewid am I as thou,
 God wote the sothe,
 I know not an a
 from the wynd-mylne, ¶ ne a b from a bole foot,
 I trowe, ne thi silf nother;
 and ȝit for al my lewidhed,
 I can wel undirstonde that this prevy processe perteneth to ȝour secte,
 and we as giltles therof,
 as ȝe of Cristis blessyng.
 It ar ȝe that stonden bifore,
 in Anticristis vauwarde,
 and in the myddil and in the rerewarde, ful bigly enbatailid.

¶ Homo apostata, vir inutilis, graditur ore perverso.

Dawe, thou hast liȝt conscience,
 thus fynaly to deme;
 ffor here thou damnest men to helle without any condicion.
 Whe have leve of scripture to deme after mennes werkes, but for to deme as thou dost,
 is to robbe God of his power;

The devel is 3our duke,
 and pride berith the baner;
 wraththe is 3oure gunner, envie is 3our archer, 3our coveitise castith fer, 3our leccherie brennith, glotony giderith stickes therto,
 and sleuthe myneth the wallis, malice is 3our men of armes,
 and trecherie is 3our aspie.
 Thus semith that 3e more than we be Anticristis frendis.
 Jak, of perfite pacience holilich holy chirche thou me prechist, to kep it if I will sitte
 on Cristis owne side;
 but, good Jak, herdist thou evere
 how judicare cam into crede?
 no more skil thou canst of paciens, Jak,
 so God me spede,
 ffor thi schreude herte and he ben as afere asundir
 as Lucifer is from heven,
 and Gabriel from helle,
 the which, as many man suposis,
 shal nevere mete togider.

ffor the apostil saith,
Noli ante tempus judicare, quoadusque veniat Dominus.

Litil wondir thou3 lordis myssetyme, that han suche confusours.
Quia si cæcus cæcum ducat, ambo in foveam cadunt.

Thou saist thou knowist no lettre here,
 as if thou wer noo clerke.
 To take a clerke as it shuld be,

On old Englis it is said,
unkissid is unknowun,
and many men speken of Robyn Hood,
and shotte nevere in his bowe.

Now, Jak, to thi questions,
nedes me moste answer, althouȝ thei wanten sentence and good thrift bothe.
Which is the moost perfit ordre, Jakke, thou askist,
and how many ordres ther ben in erthe.

Off what ordre art thou, frere,
and who made thin ordre?
iff thou wolt have the hizest ordre, seke it in heven,
in the blessid Trinité
that fourmed us alle, where flowith the Sunne from the Fadir,
the Holigost from hem bothe;
noon gretter in degré,
no more perfite than other,
but the ordre that there is,
is in her proceding;
and if we comen lower,
there finde we holy angels,

after his undirstondyng, than sayst thou here more trwly than in any other place.
Clark is als meche to mene,
as of the sort of God,
and so thou previst thi self non suche,
if thou loke riȝt,
but a liere apostata,
with alle his other partes.

stablid in iij. ierarchies, dividid in ordres nyne.
 Seraphin he is the sovereynest,
 in charité he brennith;
 and of al ordris in erthe
 y holde preesthood the hizest, that han the principal partis of men,
 and kingis han the bodies;
 and this is the popes decreté in comoun lawe.

¶ But peraunter, Jak, thou menest of religious ordre,
 of templeres, hospitalers,
 chanouns, monkes, and freres, Jak, in this mater,
 loke seint Thomas bokes,
 and thei shal thee techen

¶ Daw, dirt, thou claterist meche of orderis of aungeles in heven, bot lykkyn not thes to thin ordre,
 ne thin ordre to hem;
 fför thai ben ordenid of God,
 there withouten synnes;
 and thin is ordered of man,
 with many rotun rites;
 and so as the prestes of Bel stale undir the awter,
 to bigile the kyng,
 to thefly cache here lyfode,
 so 3e forge 3our falshed
 undir ydil yprocrisie,
 to bigile the puple,
 bothe pore and riche;
 as the prestes fayned that Bel cte the kynges sacrificise, so 3our wikkid wynnyng 3e saye wirchipith God.

and enfourme at the fulle.
 How many ordris ther ben can I not telle,
 but if y cowde calkyn
 al manere kyndes, ffor to loken how many kyndes
 oure Lord hath yfourmed.
 But evermore betwene two and two, Jak, thou shalt fynden ordre.
 Off what ordre I am,
 and who made myn ordre, Jakke, fast thou fraynest,
 and fayn woldist wite.
 ¶ I am of Cristis ordre, Jak, and Crist made myn ordre, ensaumple in the gospel,
 in many sondry place,
 ffor who tauzte obedience,
 chastiti, and poverte?
 Hopist thou not it was Crist,
 and fulfillid in him silf,
 in which ech religion
 perfitli is groundid, reversynge the soorie synnes

¶ Zit, Daw, in this mater, thou broylist up many lesynges, ffor grounde of thin ordre not groundid in the gospel;
 ffor see thes thre vertues whiche thou here rehersist, ffaylen in thin ordre
 welny in every persone.
 Ffor in obedience and chastité, and poverte also,
 ze folowen more Anticrist

notid of the postle, lust of fleich and lust of ize,
 and pride in oure lyvyng.
 On this three, Jak, by my ewté, is groundid al 3our colege.
 Iff I breke myn ordre,
 I breke Goddis lawe,
 and if I be punishid for that oon,
 I am ponishid for that other.
 Bot the contrarie of this, Jak, thou falsly afermest.
 If ony religioun be more perfit, than techith seint Jame, Jacke boy, either more appreved of God,
 fayne thou woldist witen.
 Iff I seie thee, thou askist where it is foundid ;
 and if y nayt seie not that thou seist,
 thus thou procedist.
 Thou seist that I contrarie Cristis owne rewles, bidinge 3eve to be pore
 in peyne of dampnacion, and we piken from the pore and riche

than Jhesu Crist our Lorde.
 3e ben more obedient to 3oure owne reules, than to the reules of Crist groundid in lawes.
 And as to chastité of body, 3e breken it ful oft ;
 bot chastité of soule,
 forsakyng Crist our spouse,
 ffor 3e ben apostatas,
 gon bak fro holi chirche.

al that we may geten.
 Jak, thou shewist sikirli,
 what scole thou hast ben inne,
 of sutiltee of arguyng
 me thinkith thi brayn ful thinne.
 Go grees a shoep undir the taile, that semeth the beter than with sotil sillogismes to parbrake thi witt.
 Jack, in James pistles
 al religioun is groundid, ffor there is maad mencion of two perfit lyves, that actif and contemplatif comounli ben callid, ffulli figurid by Marie and Martha hir sister, by Peter and bi Joon,
 by Rachel and by Lya.
 Thes lyves ben groundid in charité
 by diverse degrees, by men of professiouns
 makyng sundri religiouns, and evident ensauple
 moun techen us the waye.

Initium omnis peccati apostare a Deo.

As to verrei poverte,
 who that wil riȝt loke,
 ȝe ben the most covetouse of alle men in erthe, ffor with symonye and begrye,
 and sellyng of shrift,
 ȝe pillen bothe gret and smal,
 and prise hem of bileve
Avaritia, quod est idolorum servitia.

¶ Ffor sum fleen from the world,
 and closen hem silf in wallis,
 and steken hem in stones,
 and litil wole thei speken,
 to fleen sich occasiouns
 as foly wole fynden;
 and these we clepen ances
 in the comoun speche.
 Also in contemplacion there ben many other that drawen hem to disert,
 and drye myche peyne;
 by eerbis, rootes, and fruyte lyven,
 for her Goddis love;
 and this manere of folk men callen heremytes.
 The thridde degree there is,
 not for to be dispisid,
 off sich as ben gaderid in coventis togidere;
 off the which men spekith
 David in his psalmis, sith he seith how merie it is to dwelle togidere;

¶ Dawe, thou ratelist many thynges, bot grounde hast thou non;
 ffor where groundist thou in Goddis lawe to close men in stones, bot if it were wode men,
 or giloures of the puple?
 Sith alle that is not groundid smacchith grete synne;
 bot if 3e taken as 3e usen
 arseworde this gospel,

the which for worldly combraunce
 kepen in cloistris, on hert and oon soule
 havynge with the apostlis;
 and this clepe we monastical,
 that kendly is knowun.
 Mo, Jak, in contemplacion
 ther be diverse degrees;
 and after that charité growith in hem,
 the more is her mede.
 Off actif lyf y shulde thee tellen,
 yf that y hadde tyme,
 and shewen how men by charité ben holden
 to helpe her bretheren;
 somme with paynymys for to fyte,
 oure feith to defende;
 somme for to make purvyance
 for seke and for pore;
 somme for to preche to the puple
 aftir her synne askith;
 and somme in bothe lyves laboren full soore, liche unto the angels
 in Jacobus ladder.

*Non potest civitas abscondi super montem posita;
 ellis, neque accendunt lucernam et ponunt eam sub modio.*

Or wher fyndist thou, Dawkyn, that men shulden kille her brether?
 Sith Crist, our aller duke,
 brouȝt us verrei pees,
 bot if there be of the rancs that ran fro Anticristis nose,
Pacem relinquo vobis, pacem meam do vobis.

¶ See now, Jak, thi silf, how these bothe lyves opinli ben expressid in the epistle of James :
 cleen religioun it is, he seith,
 to visite the widewis,
 the fadirles and the modirles,
 to actif lyf expressid,
 and undefoulid us to kepen
 from al worldly werkes.
 Byhold of contemplacioun opinli he spekith ;
 so this may be resonably
 the conclusioun of my tale, that no religion more is than techith sent Jame.

Jak, thou seist we piken from the pore and from the riche, and not 3even a3enward, thou3 that thei ben nedy ;
 that almes is pykyng,
 y fynde it in thi boke,
 and I herde it nevere afor in no maner scripture.
 But if alwey pikers, Jak,
 thou wolt us maken,
 ther we piken but seely pans,
 thi secte pikith poundis.

¶ Touchyng this pagyn, Dawe, thi lesynges ben ful rif ;
 ffor her thou spekist of twey lyves,
 and 3e don nother wel, ffor Martha groundid hir labour
 fully in Goddis lawe, so may not 3e 3our beggyng, ne 3our castelles nouthur.

What we zeven to the pore,
it nedith not thee to telle ;
ffor almes-dede shul be hid,
and sweten in thi hondis.
Whi, bi mannes mariage, ze ben weddid to your abitis wele harder than worldly men
ben weddit to her wyves, which thei mowe leeve and lete go as longe as him list.
Jak, for siche manere scole
ze cacchen Cristis curse, so freli to mayntenen Manichés errours,
to make men breke her matrimonye,
and leeve her wyves,
and whanne the good man is oute, playe hey god rode.
Jak, to oure abite be we not weddid more than eny preest is weddid to his coroun,
that is over growun with heer,
and he preest nevere the lesse ;
or ellis shulde every barbour make newe preestes.
Riȝt so oure clothis maken us not men of religion,

But of contemplacion ze usen not bot as foxes ;
so in this ze leven Crist Martha and Marie both.
As touchyng ziftes to pore men, ze pike that thai shulde have,
bothe of godes and faithe of soule,
I, Jak, can see non other.

but oonli oure profession
 byndith us to the stake ;
 and so apostasie
 mowen we maken in oure soule, liche men of religion
 abidinge in oure abitis.
 If Sathanas were transfigurid into his former fairnesse, throwist thou he were ouzt ellis
 but a dampnid aungel ?
 and so not for the levyng of oure clothis
 we be not punishid, but bicause it bitokeneth
 forsakyng of oure reule ;
 and, Jacke, no more than thi sadi makith thin hors a mere,
 no more makith oure abitis monkes ne freris.
 Jak, of oure presciouse clothis fast thou carpist, the which ben so fyne
 that noman werith better.
 Every man may perseyve apertli,
 Jakke, that thou liest.
 Were we no sendal ne satyn,
 ne goldun clothis,
 and these passen in presciousitee
 many foold ouris.

Panis egentium vita pauperis est ; qui defraudat eum, homo sanguinis est.

We can not make mariage, Dawe, ne pursue no divorce ;
 we wyne not meche money with thes,
 as thi seete doth ful oft.
Quod Deus conjunxit, homo non separet.

But if my cloth be over presciouse,
Jakke, blame the werer;
ffor myn ordre hath ordeyned al in good mesure.
Thou axist me, Jacke, of my grete hood,
what that it meneth,
my scapelarie and my wide cope,
and the knottide girdil ¶ What meenith thi tipet, Jakke, as longe as a stremer,
that hangith longe bilinde,
and kepith thee not hoot?
an hool cloith of scarlet may not make a gowne;
the pokes of purchace
hangen to the erthe, and the cloith of oo man
myzte hele half a doseyne.
Why is thi gowne, Jakke, widder than thi cote,
and thi cloke al above
as round as a belle,

¶ I praise not, Dawe, the stremerre that thou herof spekest;
bot of suche wide clothing,
tateris and tagges,
it lirtith myn hert hevyly,
I wil that thou it wite.
Bot þour ypocrites habit,
to whiche þe ben harde weddid,
doth more harm than thes,
bi thes two skilles;
oon for the coloure,
that signifieth sadnes,
whan þe ben most unstedfast
of any folk in erthe;
another for þour diffomed shap,

sith taille myȝte serve to kepe thee from coold?
 Jak, answere thou to that oon,
 and I shal to that other.
 My grete coope that is so wiid, signefieth charité,
 that largeli longith to be sprad
 to sibbe and to frende, figurid in the faire cloith of Salomons table,
 and bi wedding garnement
 that Crist hadde at his feeste.
 My greet hood behynde, shapun as a sheeld,
 suffraunce in adversitee
 sothely it scheweth, herbi to reseyyve reproof
 for oure Goddis sake;
 or ellis bisynesse of oure feith
 it may wel bitokene, whiche that ȝe Lollardes constreyne ȝou to distroie.

that signifieth ȝour holines;
 so if it be soth
 that ȝe therof saye, it wold with litil help make an ape a seint.
 The tipet is a comyn reule,
 if it be not superflue,
 and so it doth gode
 to bynde a mannes hede;
 bot ȝour misse shapen shelde bihynde at ȝour shulderes, blowith ȝour ypocrisie,
 and blyndith many foles.
Genimina viperarum, quis demonstravit vobis fugere a ventura ira.

The scapelarie also that kevereth the schuldris, it bitokeneth boxumnesse
 dewe unto oure prelatis, and boxomly bere burthuns that they wole leyen upon us.
 Off the knottide girdel knowe I no mysterie ;
 therfore what it meeneth axe frere menours.

But, Jacke, amonge oure chaterying, zit wolde I wite, whi that the Lollardis
 weren moost greye clothis ;
 I trowe to shewe the colour that signefieth symplenesse, and withinne, seith Crist,
 ze ben ravenous wolves.
 ¶ Whi, seist thou, holde we more scilence in oon hous than another, sith over al a man is holden for to seie the goode ?
 To thi lewde question
 Salomon thus answerith,

Est tacens sciens tempus apti temporis, et homo sapiens tacet usque ad tempus ; tempus tacendi, tempus loquendi ; et iterum, Sicut urbs patens et absque murorum am-bitu, ita qui in loquendo non potest cohibere spiritum suum.

¶ Zit, Dawe, me thynkith thou usist thi customale condicion, thou hast so lerned to lye,
 thou kanst not leve werk, bot zit I am gladde
 thou groundist the on the gospel:

Thus perfit scilens
 by scripture is approved.
 Jakke, if thou undirstonde no Latyn,
 go to thi parochē prest,
 and undir 3ou bothe, with Goddis grace, marren 3e wolen ful yvele.
 Whi also ete we no fleish
 in every hous iliche, but chesen therto an hous,
 and leeven another?
 Jak, if every hous were honest to ete fleish inne, than were it honest
 to ete in a gonge.
 Whi is not thi table sett
 in thi cow-stalle?
 and whi etist thou not in thi shipun
 as wele as in thin halle?
 But al is good ynow3 for thee,
 where that evere thou sittist.
 Whi with not thi cow make myry weder in thi dish?
 But, Jacke, in this mater
 appose thou the monkes;

Diabolus est audax, et pater ejus.

The secte that thou seggist of,
 I wot, is Jhesu Cristis, tellen lital by clothing,
 bot now oon now other;
 thou3 thou accuse the menours have I not to do, bot wel I wot 3e ben alle drawn in oo maner draggee.
 Lewde Dawe, whi laist thou forthe so many blunt resones?
 ffor Salomon spekith not of silence for thei kepen this serimonie more streiter than freris.

Moreover thou mevest, Jak, another mater ;
if oure patrouns be perfit,
and oure reule also,
whi renne we to Rome,
to be assoilid of the oth
that we han maad,
and be popis freris ?
Jak, summe rennen to Rome,
but mo ther ben at hoom,
and dewli done her dever aftir that thei han chossen ;
and that the Lollardis forthinken ful soore.
Ze wolden that there were oon lesse,
ze zeve nevere tale,
that ze myzten have zour reyke
and prechen what zou list, and with zour privy pestilence enpoisoun the peple.
Jak, that Judas was a shrewe, what was Crist the worse ?
and so that summe ben exempt,

propirde to an house,
bot of silence in iche place in tyme and in reson.
Bot the cursid ypocrisie
of etyng of zour fleshe, shuld iche man despise
for zour rotun rowle,
and so thes similitudes,
with thes solucionis, ben not worthe
the devellis dirt, Dawe.

and rennen to 3our ritis, and summe bi apostasie
 ben Sathanas servauntis, whi shulde owre patrouns be ever the lasse perfit?

¶ “ Fferther more whi make 3e 3ou
 “ as men dede?
 “ sith in begginge 3e ben as quic
 “ as ben only other,
 “ and unsemeli it is “ to see deed men begge.”

Jak, me thinkith thou lernedist nevere of Poulis pistlis,
 whiche in a fewe shorte wordes
 answerith to thi sentence,

Quasi morientes et ecce vivimus; glossa, quasi morientes, i. de vitio in vitium secundum opinionem aliquorum, et ecce vivimus in bonis operibus in rei veritate.

So thou3 we ben deed to the world, after thin opynyon, 3it is oure soule in the bodi and grace in the soule.
 “ Whi,” seist thou, “ suffre 3e not 3our children

¶ Daw, thi wordes ben many,
 and ever medled with venym;
 ffor a3enes gode men
 strecche Jus malice, ne non of thilk Cristis secte that myn callist, bot a3enes heritikes,
 bosteres and lieres,
 whiche han chosen hem a reule
 with blabereres of Baal;
 and 3it shal tyde the tyme
 when Josie shal regne,

“ to come into your conseil, “ if it be good and able,
 “ and aftir Goddis lawe?”

A, Jak, mafey, me mervailith moche of thin lewidheed!

Herdist thou nevere how Crist was transfigurid in the hil, and ther to his privyté he chees but three apostlis, forbedinge hem to telle
 that conceil ony ferther, and so were there nyne
 fro that conceil refusid.
 Crist also took to him
 alle his twelve apostlis, and tretide of his passioun in rízt privy maner, and the rude peple that folowiden knewe no thing therof.

Shal we, Jak, therfore seie his conceil was not able, suspect and not good confourmed to Goddis lawe.
 Another cause resonable

and make an ende of suche fendes, and Cristis reule shal renue.

3ee, Jamnes and Mambres japid not so the kyng, as thou with thi cursid secte
 the kyng and the puple.

Attendite a falsis prophetis, qui veniunt ad vos in vestimentis ovium.

I til thee, Daw, without dout, thes wordes ben said of 3ou, with other pregnant prophecies of Peter and of Poule.

me thinkith I can telle,
 for counceil owith to be kept and not to be clatrid;
 and children ben ay clatringe,
 as thou wel knowest.

Another skill may be groundid of Salomons sawis;
 to him he seith that is wiis
 it longith to kepe conceil;
 and children ful seldum ben foundun wiis.

Jak, wolt thou telle thi knave
 as myche as thi wyf?

¶ Fforthermore thou spekest of oure costli houses;
 thou seist it were more almes
 to helpen the nedy, than to make siche housynge
 to men that ben deede, to whiche longith but graves and mornynge housis.

Jak, is not a man beter than a rude best?

3it makist thou to thi sheep a shepen,

¶ Daw, thou laborist fast to lede thii self to helle, and blyndist many lewde foles with thi stynking brethe;
 ffor bi this apis argument that thou here now ratelist, he that drynkith a quart wyne
 most nedis drynk a galon.
 Bot aȝen house in mesure, Dawe, grucche I riȝt nouȝt;
 and thouȝ thou saye a scorne,
 a shepe house I have,

and to thi hors a stable ;
 and many a pore man ther is that hath noon hillyng, but oonly heven is his hous,
 the bestes stond kevered.
 Whi houses thou not pore men as wele as thi beestis ?
 Take hede to sumwhat
 that is seid biforen,
 and thou answeere to my question,
 answer to thin owne.
 Thou carpist also of oure coveitise,
 and sparist the sothe ;
 thou seist we ben more ryal than ony lordis.

Coventis have wee noon, Jack,
 but cloistrers we ben callid, ffoundid afor with charité,
 or that he were flemyd ;
 but sith entride envie,
 and renyd hath oure houses,
 that unnethes the hillinge
 hangith on the sparres ;
 and 3it thou thinkist hem over good,
 yvel fare thou therfore !

that hath more grounde in Goddis lawe^{*} than alle 3our Caymes castelles ;
 I thank God, I beldid it with trwe bygeten gode.
 Bot 3e 3oures with beggery, bargenyng and robberye ;
 ffor grounde have thai non,
 bot if it be here.

Non habemus hic manentem civitatem. Et idem, Væ qui ædificatis civitatem in sanguinibus. Et, Væ qui conjugatis domum ad domum.

' Jak, where saw thou ever frere houses,
 thourzout the rewme, liche in ony rialté
 to the Toure of Londoun, to Wyndesore, to Wodestoke, to Wallingforde, to Shene,
 to Herforde, to Eltham,
 to Westmynster, to Dover?
 How maist thou for rebukying lye so lowde,
 to saye that oure covetise
 passith the lordes?
 But so longe, by my leuté,
 thou hast lerned to lyen,
 that thi tonge is letteroun of lyes, thou lettest for no shame.

¶ We leten, thou seist, to lymytours al this rewme to ferme, as that we were welders and lordes of alle.
 Unsikir thing sothli
 it were to sette to ferme, and fooles were the fermeres to taken it to tax.
 I trowe thou menyys the pardonystres of saint Thomas of Acres, of Antoun, or of Runcevale,

¶ Zit, Dawe, thowz thou accusest pardoneres that ben fals, thou lovest lesse a trwe prest
 than thou dost hem alle, ffor thai gon heere zou apostatas in gilyng of the puple.
 Bot that ze ferme to limitours,
 it maye be denyed,

that rennen so fast aboute ;
for of the kynges rewme
have we no more astate, than thou hast of paradis,
or of the blisse of heven,
for the which y trowe thou maist of hasilwode singe.

Why, seist thou, paye ze to no taliage to oure cristen kyng, sith Crist paiede tribut to the hethene emperour ?

Jak, of no dewté ne of no dette paide Crist noo tribute ;
but oonliche of mekenesse
performynge the lawe, and for to fleen occasioun
of aftirward apechinge, whan that afore Pilat
he shuld be forjugid.

But aftir the scripture, preesthode shulde not paien to tax ne to taliage with the comun peple.

For whan the folk of Israel were put undir servage, Pharao suffride preestes in her former fredome to be saved and susteyned

lye thou never so lowde,
and therto sette a sele, bote thus with many fals meenes oppresse the cuntrees.
Bot as to payng of tribut,
as Crist hym self did,
thou lyknist zou to Pharoes,

of the comoun store.
 But now is the compleynt of Jeremy trewe,
 the prince of provynces
 sugette is under tribute.
 Not for thanne the comun lawe may wel suffren, that preesthode may paye
 bi assent of prelatis, ffireli of her owne wille
 no thing constreynede, and thus prelatis and persouns
 aftir her state,
 ben stended to paien
 what that nede askith;
 but neither freres ne annuellers,
 save now late.
 God woot, it worchipith not to beggen of beggers.
 Off lettris of brotherhood
 also, Jak, thou spekist, and wounders that we wynnen noon
 of pore men and of preestis;
 and 3it 3e desiren that every man shulde have 3our;
 of pore mennes preieris
 to be parteners we wolden, and of her lettris and of her sele,
 if autentike thei weren.

and so 3e ben and werse.

Azenes Cristes paying and alle other mekenes, thou autorisest 3our pride,
 azenes his holi werkes.

Qui non est mecum, contra me est; et qui non colligit mecum, dispergit.

But of þour preestis pater-nosters
we desiren noon,
for comunliche her blake bedes
thei delen to freris ; ¶ but thei shal cleve unto thi chekes, and Cristis curse also,
as wysly as we holde us not more perfit than ony other, ne non suffragies selle
for a certeyn bi þere, ne maken men more perfit
than her blessid baptisme ;
ffor praier may not satyllyn
but oonliche on them alle, and so that gilden trentels that thou spekist of, that now is purchasid of preestis out of freris hondis, delyverith noo soule
out of the peyne of helle, ne purgen may of purgatory,
but as it is deserved.
Ffor charité is the mesure
that demeth that meyné.
Also thou seist, Jak, that we men enformen that oure holy abite shulde helpen men fro helle,

¶ Dawe, I seide first to thee
oon of thi groundes was eirsyng, whare autorisist thou this lewde . . .
answere nowe.

This resonos ben a staf of rede that liztly persen the honde,
I mervel that thou, a clerk,

and nameliche tho that be beried therinne ;
 and Cristis clothis dide not so,
 ne noon of the apostlis.
 Jak, that frere was over lewid that lernede the this lessoun, or on thi ficul fantasie thou faynyst this fable.
 Ffor Austyns ne prechours proponen no sicke pointis.
 Whether the Carmes of her copes mayntenen sicke an errour, or whether seint Fraunce hath geten to his habite that vertu be his grace, witterly me ne wote.
 But wel I wote that Cristis cloith helide a womman
 ffrom the longe fluxe of blood,
 as the gospel tellith ;
 but his predestinacion
 may onlich save soulis, and his prevy presciens
 may dampne whom him list.
 Jak, ferthermore of felony thou felly us enpechest, of stelyng of children,

blaberist thus blyndely.
 Thou takest comynly no grounde of Crist ne of his lawe, bot apr the pope
 as if he were thi God, or of other fantasies that han no grounde hem self ;

to drawe hem to oure sectis.
To tille folk to God-ward,
I holde it no theft,
but if thou calle Crist a theef,
that dide the same,
sayyng to the riche man,
" Go and selle thi goodis,
" and ȝif hem to the pore,
" ȝif thou wole be perfit ;
" and aftirward folowe me,
" and be my disciple."
And in the same gospel se what he seith also :
" Whoso forsaketh not
" his fadir and his modir,
" his sone and his douȝtir,
" his sistir and his brother,
" his lond and his tenementes,
" and him selven also,
" he nys not worthi
" to ben my folower."
And to his twelfe chosen eftsoones he seide,
" Behold, from the world
" I have chosen ȝou alle,
" that ȝe gon and beren fruyte,
" and ȝour fruyte may dwellyn."

ffor whi shuld not alle prestes be meke after Crist, in payng of tribut
and alle other werkes ?
Daw, late thi false glose,
it drivith thee to the devel.
Benedicite et nolite maledicere.

¶ And thus to reven the world, and spoilen him of his persouns,
 it ne is no robbery,
 but Crist appreved thefte.
 Thou seist also ferthermore that prestis shul not enprisoun, ffor it nys not foundid in al Goddis lawe,
 but undermyn bi charité,
 and so wynnyn her brother,
 and ȝif he wil not be so wonnen,
 have him as hethene ;

¶ Lo, Dawe, with thi draffe, thou liest on the gospel ;
 ffor Crist said it hym self,
 “ The vertu passid fro me.”
 And here thou maist see,
 I knowe a b fro a bole fote ;
 ffor I cacche thee in lesynges that thou laist on the gospel.
 Bot thus to stele a childe is a gretter theft,
 than to stele an axe,
 for the theft is more.
 Dawe, for thou saist ȝe robbe him fro the worlde ;
 ȝe maken hym more worldly than ever his fadir ;
 ȝee, thowȝ he were a plowman, lyvyng trwe lyf, ye robbe hym fro the trwe reule,
 and maken hym apostata,
 a begger and a sodomit ;
 for suche thai ben many.
Vae vobis qui facitis unum proselytum ! supple, filium Gehennæ duplo quam vos.

and thus bi thin opynyon
no man shulde be enprisound.
But, Jakke, in thi frensy, thou fonnest more and more,
thou wenyst to make to me a dicue, thou fallist thi silf therinne.
Ffor if thou pursue thi purpos, thou assentist thi silf in tresoun, menusynge the kyngis majesté,
privyng him of his power.
¶ For if we taken the gospel aftir the menyngge, nether emperour ne kyng
may honge ne drawe,
heved ne enprisoun,
no haunte no domes,
but al in fair manere
shulen ben undirnomen,
and who wil not amenden him,
zeve him the brydil;
and be robberis and revers,
mansleeris and treytours,
and al maner mawfesours
shulden ben unponnishid.
Jak, the pope hath a prisoun,
the bishop of Cantirbury, and of Londoun also,
and many other bishopis,
by leeve of her kyng;

¶ Daw, I do thee wel to wite, frentike am I not;
bot it semith thi sotil witte marrith many man.
Bot how stondith this togedir, ze sle men in your prison?

art thou hardy to seien
 it is not Goddis lawe.
 But y blame thee not gretli,
 thou; thou bere hem hevy;
 ffor goldsmythis of thi crafte
 ofte haveth hem haunted, and zit thei shulen offer,
 bi the helpe of heven.
 Also thou seist no sacrament
 we covetyn ne desiren,
 but shrift and biryyng,
 that longeth to the peple.
 Alas, Jak, for shame!
 whi art thou so fals,
 ffor to reverse thi silf
 in thin owne sawes?
 Thou seidist in thi begynnyng,
 whan thou seidist of freres, thei sellen seven sacramentes with Symoundis eyris;
 and now that we coveite noon
 but the sacrament of schrifte.
 Ffor beriyng is no sacrament,
 but an almes-dede.
 Thou jawdewyne, thow jangler,
 how stande this togider,
 by verré contradiccion
 thou concludist thi silf, and bryngest thee to the mete

ze have your conspiracies,
 when ze gode likith,
 ze damme the trwe, ze hyen the false,
 deme, Dawe, wher this be gode.
 And the kyng by his juges trwe

there I wolde have thee.
Who wolde take entent
to suche wrechis wordes, that nevere more zeveth tale to be take with a lesyng?

Whi, axist thou ferthermore, will we not shryven ne birien the pore
as wel as the riche, and do other dedes of almes done at her nede?
But if we schryve not the pore,
whi ben perssons so wrothe,
and paroche preestes also,
for schryvyng of her paishens?
For every Lenten us azen thei aleggen the lawe off omnis utriusque sexus, with the favourable glooses.
But, Jak, do thi won,
and lette not to lyene;
I have as leef thy leeing
as thi soth saw.
Ffor who is oonis suspect,
he is half honged.
Thou seis that we prechen fallace and fables, and not Goddis gospel
to good undirstondinge;

execute his lawe,
as he did now late,
whan he hangid zou traytours;
wilt thou, Dawe, allegates compere zou to the kyng, or to other lordes,

and we ben more holdun therto than to alle other reulis.
 For we wynnen more therwith than Crist and his apostlis, what we ben holdun
 and wil not forsake.
 For moche of oure lyvyng is of the gospel;
 so dide Poul
 and other disciples, and lyvede of colectis made generali bi chirchis, ffor sustinance of prechours,
 and also of the pore.
 And if thou leve not me,
 loke Poulis pistlis,
 and the glose therwith,
 and there thou shalt fynde it.

*Quis, inquit, militat suis stipendiis unquam?
 Et iterum, Dominus ordinavit iis qui evangelium annunciant de evangelio vivere.*

And so to his prechours
 Crist also thus seide,

In quamcunque domum intraveritis, manete in eadem edentes et bibentes, etc., dignus est enim operarius mercede sua. Et ad Romanos, Probaverunt Macedones et Achaia collationem facere in pauperes sanctorum qui sunt in Jherusalem.

that han her grounde in God?

Lefe, fole, thi losengerie, and studie Cristis lyf.

Quæ conventio Christi ad Belial? Quid communi-cabit cacabus ad ollam?

Azens that that thou saist that we prechen but fallace and fables, and leve the gospel
 that moste us al save,
 loke that every werke is knowen,
 plenili bi his eende,
 and so the peple hath the pathes
 of feith and of bileve, and God woote freres prechinge hath wrouzt to this ende.

¶ Daw, hou maist thou saye for shame that Crist stale thus childre, and Poule beggid as ze don,
 ze lyven bi the gospel?
 zee, Dawe, ze selle derrere lesynges and poyson, than ever did Poule
 alle his holy writyng;
 ever thou likynest zou to Crist,
 whan ze ben verrei Anticrist.
 And if bisshopes byside wel to knowe alle your dedes,
 thai founde zou werse than harlotes,
 or jogulours ether;
 ffor ze begge or ze preche many tymes and oft,
 somen men and threaten hem,
 bot if thai zif zou gode.
 Bot the harlot wil drawe
 the blode of his arse,
 or he ask any gode,
 or any reward.
 And, Dawe, truly your dedes contrarie Crist.

Mordent dentibus et prædicant pacem, et si quis non dederit in ore eorum quippiam, sanctificant super eum prælium.

But ȝe han cast cursidly Cristendome to distroye, and of Cristis gospel
 make Machometis lawe, azens whom with opin mouth
 other while we romee, and sum tyme brynge ȝou til a bay
 if God wil it graunte.
 For this cause ȝe calle us bastard branchis, pursuyng preestes to prisoun and to fire also ;
 ¶ but, Jak, thei ben bastard braunches that launchen from oure bileve, and writhyn wrongli away from holy chirche techinge, siche beren yvel fruyte
 and soure to atasten, worthi to noon other good,
 but in the fire to brenne ;
 and so for to pursue an heretike
 to fire or to prisoun,
 I holde it more holsum
 than to halewe a chirche, inprisonynge of the poysen that mortherith many soulis,

¶ Daw, here thou blaberist togedir falsenes and trouthe ;
 ffor a bastarde is he that holdith azenes the sothe.
 God and trwe men discusse wher that be ȝe or I.
 Ffor if thou seyst holi chirche
 the techyng of Crist,
 the reules of apostles,
 the lyf of hem alle,

after Cristis doctrine
in the holy gospel.

*Omnis, inquit, arbor quæ non fert fructum bonum, excidetur, et in ignem mittetur.
Et iterum, Qui non manserit in me, mittetur foras sicut palmes, et arescet, et colligent, et in ignem mittetur.*

Disseverynge þou from the tree that is Crist him silfe.

But how shulden freres pursue heresie,
and many of hem wite not what heresie meneth.
Jak, I am not lettered,
but I am frere Dawe,
and can telle wel a fyn
what heresie amounteth ;
heresie, that is Grw,
is divisioun on Latyn,
the whiche in oure langage
meneth sunderyng and partyng.
He thanne that sundrith him from Crist and his chirche, and frely forgith sentences contrarious to oure feith, siche manere of forgers
heretikes we callen, and also her felowis

I summitte me to hem,
and wil wile I lyve.
If thou callist, Dawe, þour Dominikis reules,
with determinacion
of many false prestes,
holi chirche, as I wene,
as oft thou hast done,

taken the same name,
 and her sory sentences
 ben clepid heresies,
 but namely when thei ben holdun of obstinat hertis.

And I shal this mater more largely declare.
 Sixe maner of heretikes
 ben foundun in the lawe.
 For he is callid an heretike that rasith oure bileve;
 and he is callid an heretike that heresies sowith,
 as Arrians, Wyclyfanes, Sabellyanes, and other;
 and the corruptours of scripturis heretikes ben holdun, that other wise undirstondin than the Holi Goost techith.
 Also we clepen hem heretikes,
 that sacramentis sellyn,
 or ben from hem dividid bi cursynge of the chirche.
 He is also an heretike that doutith our bileve, and with a litil evydence
 goith out of the waye.
 And also an heretike

I forsake the for ever,
 with this cursid chirche,
Odivi ecclesiam malignantium.
 If thou purposist to pursuwe
 and drawe men to dethe,
 I mervel not meche,
 for it is thin office.
 The fadires of freres,

him shulde we holde
 that distrieth privyleges grauntid of the pope.
 This sixe maners put Hostiensis in his Summe, and if this sentence be soth,
 y can noon other seien,
 but thou and thi secte
 ben heretikes alle.

Jak, thou spekist ferthermore of messis and of preires,
 and askist what we sellen,
 wen we seyen oure messe,
 whether the sacrament,
 our preieres, or our traveile;
 and if ony of this we done,
 thou arguest a greet errour.
 Jak, unto this questioun on wyse may be answerith, aftir that seint Austyn
 spekith of the apostlis.
 The apostlis a seye reseyved freely her breed of hem that freely
 token her techinge;
 and so, Jak, freely graunte
 we our masse to hem that freely
 ȝeven us her almesse,

whiche were the Pharisees, pursuwed Crist to the paynful dethe,
 ȝe, callid hym a blasfeme,
 as ȝe clepen hem heritikes that holde aȝenes ȝour falsehede, alle if thai men truthe.
Et vos implete mensuram patrum vestrorum.

and synnen no wyse bi noon other vice,
to selle no sacramentis ne spiritual preier.
And thus among freres gete thei no logginge, but bete hem to gretter men and geten her herbegage, of patronis of chirchis,
or privyly with preestes, wich to fatte benefices wolde be promotid.

¶ Jak, I suppose That my labour y selle, what wil thou seie therto,
do y ony symonye?
How than shal the persons seye that setten her chirches to ferme, that ben more spiritual than bodili traveile;
and these parоче preestes that ministren the sacramentis, for a certen sawd bi 3eer
of ten mark or of twelfe;

¶ Daw, thou hast lerned so long to lye,
thou wenest thou saist soth whan thou liest most lewde, and sclaunderist the truthe.
Thou saidist thou were no lettred man,
thou prevest thi self fals,
ffor thou spekist of ierarchies,
of herisies also;
thou art guilty in alle thes poyntes,
and thi brether bothe,
that I wolde preve apertly,

and al these annuellers that syngen for a tyme, takyng for her traveil
 as thei may acorde;
 but thei can answer for hem silf,
 and we shal for us.

Another mater ther is meved,
 that touchith begging;
 thou seist that we falsly Crist him silf disclaundren, to seie that he beggid,
 sith he was lord of al,
 and al in his demeyns.

if that the tyme suffrid.
 Lok 3our lyvyng, 3our prechyng,
 with other opun dedes,
 and laye it by the apostles lyf,
 and se how thai acorde,
 and as I wene the Holigost appreveth nether nouthur.
 Me thynkith 3e ben tapsteres, in alle that 3e don;
 3e tappe 3our absoluciones that 3e bye at Rome, 3our prechyng, 3our praying, and also 3our beryngs.
 Bot thou accusist other men that han bot the mote in the comparison of alle 3our gret synnes.

Hypocrita, ejice primo trabem de oculo tuo.

Dawe, 3e folowen Crist,
 as greyhounde doth the hare;
 ffor as God 3af kyng Saule in his wodenes, so 3e ben clekkid out to pursuwe holi chirche.

Periculum in falsis fratribus.

¶ But for this mater, Jacke, thou most undirstonde,
 that Crist in his godhede is lord of alle thingis, as testimonie of Scripture
 preveth in many places ;
 as touching his manhood
 he was nedi and pore, for of his nede spake
 David in his psalmes.

Ego, inquit, mendicus sum et pauper, et Dominus sollicitus est mei.

And after Austin and Jerom
 this word of Crist was seid, so thanne these twey
 stonden wel togidere, that Crist after oo kynde was lord of alle,
 and after that other

¶ Zit, Dawe, thou drawist in many fals promptynges,
 ffor to hirt symple men,
 bot me never a del ;
 ffor Crist in his membres beggid ful oft,
 ffor synne of the puple,
 when thai were at mischef.
 Bot as suche bolde beggers in bodily hele, begged never Crist,
 ne non of his membres ;
 ffor Crist, that is truthe,
 may in no wise contrarie him self ne God that is his fadir ;
 ffor in many places
 thai damnen suche sturdy beggyng.
 And, so, Dawe, thou dotest, nedide to begge.

For if Crist seie soth,
him silf ne hadde noon harborow,
to resten in his owne heed,
and steken out the stormes.

Vulpes, inquit, etc., ubi caput suum reclinat.

And if we shulen zeve credence to doctours wordes, heere what seith seint Jerom,
and seint Bernard also.

Cave, inquit Jeronimus, ne mendicante Deo tuo alienas divitias augeas; et Bernardus. Ut te, Domine, per omnia nostræ paupertati conformares, quasi unus in turba pauperum stipem per hostia mendicabas.

Wherfore thou feynest fonnedli alleggyng the water, the asse, or the herberowe;

for he was lorde of alle,
and so thou mysse takist Jerom,
and lyst on Bernarde, ffor Alrede his clerke wrote his reson,
that thou mysse layst,
and dokkist it as the likist.
Herfor a clerke saith,
that evel mot he spede,
that beggith of the puple more than is nede.

Mendax mendicus non est veritatis amicus.

Nutantes transferantur filii ejus et mendicent.

God gif the grace to knowe how thou art Judas childe;
whiche psalme thou leggist to me,
as to an evel entent;
for 3it thou schuldest be damned
softly in helle,

Nutantes transferentur filii.

that oure Lord we sclandre;
 or ellis oure holy doctours diden not her dever.
 Jak, have no merveyلة that y speke Latyn, for oones I was a manciple at Mertoun halle, and there y lernede Latyn
 by roote of clerkes.
 Of clamourus also begging
 thou chaterist and criist, and seist it is uttirli forbodun in Goddis lawe.
 ¶ Jak, the blynde begger sat bi the weye,
 and lowde criede uppon Crist,
 as the gospel tellith;
 but him was 3ovun ize-sizt,
 for al his grete noise,
 and also the pore man at the specionus 3ate praiede to the apostlis to parten of her almes;
 and ther the begger unreproved of crokidnesse he was heelid.

¶ Thou ffeillest much brethe, Daw, with legyng of thi tyxtes;
 for summe thou legest kenely
 to a fals entente;
 but of other thou blundyrst
 as a blynde buserde.
 For thes pore of whom thou spekest,
 my3t not helpe hem selfe;
 but 3oure prowde losengerie that rune abowt as snek-drawers ben neyther pore ne fabil, and so juge thou how thes to acorde.

I forȝete not the lazar
 that beggide of the riche, and criede lowde at his ȝate to cacchen his almes.
 Where redist thou that he was repreved of his begging?
 I rede wel he was ful soone in Abrahams bosum.
 Thou makist also more ado for writing in oure tablis of sich mennes names that ȝeven us her almes,
 "Wenyng that God were a fool,
 "not knowinge mennes dedes,
 "but if he were mengid
 "bi weie of ȝour writyng." ¶ Jak, writyng was ordeyned for shipernes of mynde, not of God, but of us men,
 hirt in oure nature,
 and bi bodili buystousnesse fallen to forȝetyng.
 Now special preier,
 as clerkes seien,

¶ Ȝit, Dawe, thou hewist hye, and puttist thi mouthe in heven;
 thi tong likkith the chesefat,
 and the garner also,
 and the pore wedowes porse,
 thowȝ she have bot a peny.
 And Ȝit, Dawe Dotypolle, thou justifiest this harlotrie;
 whi lykkennest thou writyng of names,
 which thou dost for money,
 to the holi scripture,
 that is our bileve?
 Ffor God ne any godeman moste helpeth the soulis, and that may not be done

 withouten special mynde.
 Thanne for oure forȝetfulnesse it nedith us to noten, and this is cause whi
 we writun in oure tablis.
 And Esdras wroot a newe book,
 to have the lawe in mynde.
 To seint Joon in the Apocalips it was bodun also,
 that privy revelacion
 to writun in his book,
 for unstabilnesse of mynde,
 seith the comoun glose.
 "Whi," also thou axist,
 "make ȝe so many maistris,
 "aȝens Cristis bidding
 "in the holi gospel?"
 For sothe, Jak, among other,
 this is a lewid question.
 Taking heed to thin astaate,
 thou art but a knave,
 and ȝit thou lokist that thi knave

appreved never this symonye;
 but thou approvest ȝour capped maistres with a glasen glose, whiche galpen after grace
 bi symonye ȝour sister, and after sitten on hie dece and glosen lordes and ladies.
 And this is no liknes bitwix my knave and hem;
 ffor of thes and suche it ben that Crist speeth in his gospel.

Amant enim primos recubitus in cœnis, et primas cathedras in synagogis, et vocari ab hominibus Rabbi.

shulde calle thee maistir.
 Leve Jacke Jawdewyn,
 how kepist thou the gospel?
 Nevertheles to thi question
 answerith the comoun glose, that neithir the acte of teching, neither the acte of maistir,
 ben forbodun of Crist,
 but oonli ambicion,
 and the nyce appetite of worldly worship.

Thou askist also ferthermore, whos ben alle oure jewels ;
 and we seyen we han rizt nouzt
 in propre ne in comoun, but gederen the goodes of the rewme to make the pope riche.

Jak, the foure and twentithe pope Joon wroot azens this mater, and frere menours azens him,
 as her actis shewen.

Examyne her actis
 and loke who hath the beter, and knowe noon other ordre
 this perfitnesse approveth.
 ¶ Thou grucchest also that we gon two of us togider ;

¶ Daw, thou herdist me not grucche that ze went two togedir ;
 ffor otherwhile ze gon three,
 a womman is that oon.
 Bot whether ze go two or oon,
 if ze wol do wele,
 it were a gret joye to me,
 God wot the sothe.
 Bot wel I wote that charité
 may not duelle there, for of the perfit apostlis wenten but oone aloone.

 Thou seist that we pretenden
 the perfeccioun of apostlis.
 Parfay, Jak, in scripture
 thou failist here ful foule, herdest thou nevere the processe of the actis of the apostlis, in what maner the Holi Goost chees Bernabé and Poule, to gone bothe togidere,
 and Cristis seed to sowun;
 and aftirward whan Bernabas from Poul was departid, another felowe, Tymothé, toke Poul to his feere.
 And 3it thei weren perfit
 bi fastinge and bi preieris, and resseyved hadde the Holi Goost bi the apostlis hondis.
 And thus we gon two togider, folwinge her stappis;
 but more for the mysterie
 includid in the noumbre, for to bi workes of charité fulfilling the lawe;
 and two tablis of Moises

where covetise crepith in,
 and lecherie is loggid.
 Therfor, Dawe, allegge thou
 no figur for thin ordre, bot if it be Zambre
 with Corby his lotby, or Jamnes and Mambres, Pharaouse freres.

Hi sunt qui penetrant domos, et ducunt mulierculas oneratas peccatis,

there the lawe was writun ;
 and two cherubyns in the temple,
 and two in the tabernacle.
 It was not good to Adam for to be aloone ;
 and Crist seith woo to sool in aventure that he falle.
 Also for fraternité ful harde thou us holdist,
 to graunt part of merit,
 and also of messis, bicause that we witen not whether that we ben in grace or in synne, and happili for we praen for suche that ben dampned in helle.
 Jak, if this cause were good,
 al preier were reprovéd,
 and thanne were set at nouzt
 bothe messe and matynes, and holy bedis and orisons seid in holi chirche.
 ¶ Thanne shulde we leve Cristis bede,
 the holy pater-noster.
 Thanne was the memento
 put fally in the masse, and hooli chirche voidli
 or madli biddith preye, and alle sicke zonge impossibilitées folowen therof.

¶ Thou argust, Topias, wonderly,
 as if thou were an asse ;
 for thou legest zoure selde bedys to the pater-noster, that Crist him selve made ;
 but wel I wote that alle ze gate never a peny,

For who is that that knowith him silf worthi for to preien, but God bi revelacion
 specially wolde it shewe;
 for noman, seith the scripture, woot,
 whether he is worthi love,
 or ellis maugree but God
 it oonly knowith.

And who can telle ferthermore whiche shulde be dampned, sith Goddis privy domes man may not comprehende;
 and so shal noman preie for other,
 ne noman for him silf.

Jak, se now thin errour,
 and sum tyme sesse for shame;
 for thou jangelist as a jay,
 and woost not what thou meenest.
 Moreover thou monest multiplieng of so many freris,
 whiche encreesen combrouseli,
 azens Goddis wille;
 sith preestis with other religious myzte serve the peple, for twelve apostlis and fewe moo serveden al the world, and mo fyngris on myn hond than foure and the thombe

with the pater-noster,
 but with zoure famulorum,
 that ze sey is beter,
 ze gete many poundes.
 For Crist made that one,
 for better may none be;
 but ze with zoure ypocrisy han autorised that other,

amenusith my worching
 more than it acresith;
 and so thou seist that freris letten
 Cristis growinge into heven.
 Jacke, thou weenest thou wyne lond,
 but thou concludist thi silf;
 thou seist that God alle thingis hath maad in mesure, weizte, and noubre, and that every frere is sum thing,
 thou maist not denye,
 and thou seist freris ben maad
 azens Goddis wille.
 Than hath God maad sum thing that he wolde not make,
 and so his sovereyne goodnesse is contrarious to him silfe.
 Lo, Jakke Jospinel,
 what folowith of thi sawis.
 Jakke, if thouz a fewe moo myzte serven al the world, thanne myzte a fewe preestes serven a litil rewme.
 Whi renne thanne these zonge clerkes
 so faste to the ordres, to encreesen preestes
 above mony hundridis?
 And if freris ben combrouse,

to blynde with the pupyl
 for zoure cursed grounde, and thou God made al thinge in mesure and in wyzte,
 as the scripture seythe,
 it folowth not he made zou,
 for ze ben oute of mesure,
 and so the devyl and Caym with Judas ben zoure fadirs.

preestis ben wel more ;
 or ellis telle a beter skil thanne thou hast begunne, whi the toon is chargeaunt more than the tother.
 Also the ensaumple of thin hond is no thing to purpos ;
 for kynde hath determyned
 the noumbre of thi fyngris,
 and if it passe noumbre,
 it is clepid monstrosité ;
 but God and holi chirche determyned noo noumbre of preestis ne of freris to helpen mannis soule.
 For the mo good ther ben,
 the better is Cristis spouse ;
 and thouz fewer myzten
 done that nedis,
 3it many hondis togider
 maken lizt werk.

¶ Another mater thou movest, Jak, moost to be chargid,
 of the solempne sacrament
 of Cristis owne bodye, conteyned in figure of brede,
 sacrificise for synne ;
 thou drawist a thorn out of thi hele,
 and puttist it in oure.

¶ Oft, Dawe, in thi writtyng, thou wryngist out contradiccion ;
 but 3it thou puttist default to prestes,
 as erst thou didist to curates.
 I wot thai ben defectif, bot 3it stondith Cristis religion,
 of whose default I dout not, Dawe, 3e ben the chef cause.

Thou berist us on honde that we seien ther is not Cristis bodye, but roundnesse and whitenesse,
and accident withouten suget.
Jak, we seie with holy chirche, that ther is Cristis bodi,
and not material breed
with Wiclyf ȝour maistir, the whiche put ther but as a figure,
and not verré Cristis bodi,
after a manere spekyng
that holy chirche usith,
as we clepen Crist a stoon, a lomb, and a lioun,
and noon of these is Crist,
but oonli in figure.
This heresie holde not we,
but ȝe his false folowers,
privyly as ȝe doren,
and opinli ȝe wolden, ne were the sharp ponishinge of ȝour former fadirs.

Bi this it suwit not God,
bot Sathanas brouȝt ȝou in.
Thou saist, Dawe, as thou felist, that there is Cristes body ;
bot I afferme faithfully that that is Cristis body ; Daw, aske thi cappid maistres,
as if thai were heritikes,
what is the sacred host,
and grounde hem in scripture,
to whiche we knele and doffe our hodes,
and don alle this wirchip,
and I bileve that oste sacred,
whiche is bothe whit and rounde,
is verrei Cristis body,

And now I will thee telle
 the freris confiteor, touching to this sacrament,
 how that thei bileven.
 Thei seie breed is turned into fleish,
 and wyne into blood,
 thourȝ the myȝt of oure God,
 and vertue of his wordis;
 the fleish is mete, the blood is drynke,
 and Crist dwellith [therin],
 no thing rasyd, no thing dividid,
 but oonli broken in signe,
 and as moche is in oo partie
 as is al the hole;
 thus leeveth not of the breed,
 but oonli the licesse, which that abidith therinne
 noon substeined substans.
 It is deth to the yvel,
 lyf to good encresing of oure grace.
 It wole not be confect
 but oonli of a preest,

as men shuld bileve,
 and did to the tyme
 that Sathanas was unbounde.
 The wittnesse of this reson is Crist and his apostles, with many holi doctouris of the thousande ȝere.
 Bot this ȝe falsely forsake, with alle ȝour secte, or many,
 and blynden the puple with heresie,
 and leven Goddis lawe;
 ffor ȝe sayen ther is Cristis body,
 and nouȝt that sacred host.
Commutaverunt veritatem Dei in mendacium.

that lawfulli is ordeyned
bi holi chirche keies ;
and so carpenters ne sowters,
card-makers ne powchers,
drapers ne cutellers,
girdelers, coferers, ne corvyysers, ne no manere of artificeris, this sacrament mowe treten,
but the privité of preesthode wer prickid in her soulis.
And 3it 3our sect susteynes wommen to seie massis, shewyng to trete a sacrament as preestes that thei were, reversynge holy doctours and decree of holy chirche.
¶ Allas! 3our brymme blastis awake the wilde wawlis, and scalen sely Peter ship,
and putt it in hize perile ;
ne were God the giour,
and kept the stern,
with the sterne stormes that reufulli 3e reisin, al schulde wende to wrak

¶ 3it spekith Jak Uplande.

To make with the a dialogge,
I holde it bot wast,
for thou maryst thy lesynges lowde with thy false heresyas ;
men may se by thy writing,
here, thou jangelyng jay,
how thou bylevest not in the sacrid oste,
for we sey alle,
the sacrid oste that is sene with eye is verey Cristes body ;
but thy secte seyth not soo,

into the waast watris.
 The releef of Cristis feeste ze renden and ratyn, that his alumnens the postlis
 gaderid togidere, and delith it to dogges
 and ravenous beestes;
 and the presciouse perlis
 ze strowun to hogges,
 the sutil metis of scripturis to cherlis stomakes, and maken hem als comoun
 as the cart weye, azens Poulis sentence,
 and Poulis owne doctrine.

Non, inquit Paulus, potui vobis scribere quasi spiritualibus, sed quasi carnalibus, etc.

Se also what Crist seith,
 in the holy gospel.

Multa habui vobis dicere, sed non, etc.

Also in many other place thus spekith he
 to his perfit disciplis:

Vobis datum est noscere mysterium regni Dei, cæteris autem in parabolam, etc.

but ze say ther is Cristes body, ze tel not where.

But Crist seyth, this is my body,
 and not, ther is my body.

Whi, ze templers messe sellers,
 grante ze not Cristes wordes, syth ze chafyr thus therwith, bygylyng the pupil?

Lete zoure secte write zoure byleve of this sacrid oste,
 and preche it as ze write it,
 and sette therto zoure sele,

Than the lewide and the lered
auzt not yliche,
the scripturis ben scaterid
in his privy pointes.

Jak, thou seist at the last,
that charité is chacid,
to vengyn oure defaultis,
and mende us of oure mysse,
levynge oure rotyn ritis,
folowinge Goddis lawe.
Jak, oure ritis ben nouzt rotyn,
her rootis ben al freishe, plantid in the gospel,
as I seide biforen ;
but, good Jak, 3our grace, where be 3e foundid ?
not in Goddis gospel,
but in Sathanas pistile,
wher of sorowe and of snowcrie noon is to seken, but al maner of dolosité to 3ou is enditid,
as in thi lewid daliaunce apertli thou hast preved ;

and I am siker of my feith 3e schul be stonde to deth ; and than schal 3oure castels cache hem new maysters, for 3e wil not grante,
ne bot few of 3oure ordirs,
the ost sacrid, white and rounde, is verey Cristis body.
I pray oure Lord Jhesu, that sone be it sene,
who is in the trew wey,
whether 3e other we.

but moche mawgré mote thou have thus to frayn a frere, that slily wolde have slent aweye,
 and noman have greved.
 But for thi grete labour
 thi gardoun thou shalt gete;
 thou shalt have the popis curse,
 and al holi chirchis;
 and if thou sett this at nouzt,
 God mowe sende thee more,
 the curse that he hath ȝovun to Cayn and Choreis sone also;
 thou shalt also have the curse
 that Crist ȝaf to Phariseis, figured in the figre tree that nevere bare fruyte aftir.
 Thou shalt have the weleaway of Gelboth hilles,
 the sorowe of Sodome,
 and al sinful citeis.
 Take for thi faire speche
 the preier of Deus laudem, the greable gardoun
 for al opin sclaudris;
 thou shalt have the malisoun
 of Moab and Ariel;

But towching men of crafte,
 whom thou dispisyst,
 al they schulde medle hem
 to know her byleve,
 but as wele of her sacryng,
 as wymmen syngynge messe, alwey thou usest the craft of thyn old fader.
 Why darst not thou of summe
 of ȝou false heretykis,

the benysoun of Bethsaida shal make thy beddis heed ;
 and, Jakke, for thou apprisist not the curse of seint Franceis, but scornyst the malisoun
 of the foure ordris, take the malisoun that God zaf
 to brekers of his lawe,
 in the book of Deutronomye,
 the seven and twenty chapitre ;
 but evere be ware of Cristis curse,
 and of cattis tailis,
 the which if thou have grace to cacchen,
 nevere shal thou thryve.
 Now fare forth to thi fourmures, and, Jak, thou hem telle
 the matere of oure talkynge, and loke how hem likith ;
 and if hem thinke not thi sawes sufficientli assoilid, lat hem senden azen,
 it shal be amendid ;
 and sai hem that it nedith not to sharpen oure clerkes, for frere Dawe is scharpe ynow ;
 for al sich enditinge.

fynde owte such on,
 and preve zoure lesynges sothe.
 And therfor, Daw, I sey nomore to the at this tyme, but thou ert on of the falsest that ever I saw write.
 For Mahomete and Serginus, and al her grete lawe,
 wot not so many lesynges
 as ben here in thy writynges.

Ffare wele, Jak Jawdewyne,
 I thee God bitake;
 and nomore of freris
 I thee rede to preche.
 To lower state than thei ben thou maist hem not dryve,
 and if thei evere come to hizer,
 the wers shal thou thryve.

ON THE DEATH OF HENRY IV.¹

By Thomas of Elmham.

*Incipit epistola sacre theologie professoris magistri
 Thomæ Elmham, monachi de Lenton prope Notyngham, ad regem Henricum quintum pro opere sequenti.*

O rex mi domine, sæpe quæ tibi scribere duxi,
 Providus ut fias, damna futura cavens,

¹ From the Bodleian Library, MS. Rawlinson, No. 214, fol. 134, r°. The writer of these lines, Thomas of Elmham, is well known to historians by his prose history of the reign of Henry V., printed by Hearne; by a history of the monastery of St. Augustine at Canterbury, of which Mr. Hardwick has recently given us an edition; and by his summary of the history of the same reign in Latin verse, the latter edited by Mr. C. A. Cole, in his "Memorials of Henry the Fifth,

"King of England." In his earlier life he was a Benedictine monk of the monastery in Canterbury, of which he compiled the history; he subsequently entered the order of Cluny, and was elected prior of Lenton in Nottinghamshire, an office which he held until 1426. The short poem here printed must, from internal evidence, have been composed immediately after the event it commemorates, the death of Henry IV., and before its author became prior of Lenton.

Errores solitos quos nunc tua curia mittit Corrige, ne feriat te gravis ira Dei.
Nam licet hic hodie sis rex, sors crastina forsau
Te cito subvertet et diadema tuum.
Ecce quod intrasti transis, patet exitus orbe,
Quo tria sunt ista, pus, labor, atque dolor.
Flebilis ingressus, progressus debilis inde,
Egressus timidus, hæc memorare precor.
O si lamenta populi, si gaudia scires,
Quæ tibi dat fleres egrediens, regrediens.
Nam tuus adventus cunctis tristis perhibetur,
Jocundus tuus est exitus a patria.
Cervicata cohors et avari quique ministri
Causant plura mala, dum bona vi rapiunt.
Quod fit eis placitum tenet hoc pro jure vigorem,
Ad libitum paret his homo, sic animal.
Hi nihil excipiunt, tamen hoc in tempore guerræ,
Illicitum fieret, liber ut esse solet.
Presbyter et monachus, mercator, cultor agrique,
His et jumenta libera jure manent.
Hi cum securi debent fore tempore guerræ,
Cur non securi tempore pacis erunt?
Si pax nulla locis datur in quibus ipse moraris,
Pacis ades fractor, inde caveto tibi.
Regis Ricardi crebro memorare secundi,
Cujus fortunæ sit cito versa rota.
Henrici regis patris ipse tui memor esto,
Nam sua fortuna carne supina ruit.
Illius in speculo res extitit hoc speculata,
Hæc mage quo fieret conspicienda tibi.
Hujus doctrina tibi stat vice cotis, acutum
Quæ ferrum reddit ipsa secando nihil.
Dogmatis ecce sui metra congrua condere conor,
Ut tibi proficiant hic tibi dixit ita.
Explicit epistola magistri Thomæ Elmham ad regem Henricum quintum.

Incipit epistola regis Henrici quarti ad filium suum Henricum quintum in extremis languentis pro sui et regni Angliæ gubernatione, una cum benedictione paternali cunctis suis filiis, ex com-posito prædicti magistri T. E.

Dilige mente Deum, fili, virtuteque tota,
Hoc tu si facias sit tibi vera salus.
Vera salus tibi sit, si corde Deum venereris,
Nec dubites sibi dans corpus, opes, cor, et os.
Corpus, opus, cor, et os sibi dans, mala discute prisca,
Si sit prosperitas, inde caveto mali.
Inde caveto mali, ne degener ad bona fias,
Et te sic habeas ut mala quæque luas.
Ut mala quæque luas crebro bene confitearis,
Tu confessores excipe proficuos.
Excipe proficuos, foveas quo te reprehendant,
Ut decet exculpa lætius arte feras.
Arcta feras læte servire Deo, vigil affer
Os, aures, oculos, corde precando Deum.
Corde precando Deum consortia pange piorum ;
Det tibi colloquium religiosa cohors.
Religiosa cohors pellat decreta malorum,
Omne malum fugias, dilige quodque bonum.
Quodque bonum nutrias, coram te despice dici
Allectiva malis, cor pietatis habe.
Cor pietatis habe, labor assit, et otia sperne,
Exemplum præbens arma tuendo tuis.
Arma tuendo tuis memorans regni diadema,
Dic memorans tibimet ad quod, amice, venis.
Ad quod, amice, venis, ut præsis proficias nil,
Non ruis inde piger si nimis alta petas.
Si nimis alta petas, scripturæ cerne valorem,
Nec puteus Jacob est, sit sapor inde recens.
Sit sapor inde recens, hinc vana recentia pelle,
Teque decencia stent recta docentia te.

Recta docentia te dictant ut linea recta
Sit servanda tibi quo vacet illicitum.
Quo vacet illicitum non dextris nonque sinistris
Divertas, gratis prosperitate cavens.
Prosperitate cavens adversis tu patiens sis,
Esto memor finis, dic ego quis tibimet?
Dic ego quis tibimet, Henrice, tibi speculum do,
Fortis eram quondam, debilis ecce ruo.
Debilis ecce ruo, multis formosior olim
Vultus pictura pluribus alma fuit.
Pluribus alma fuit quæ nunc patet horrida cunctis,
Qui sapui plura, vix memor esto mei.
Vix memor esto mei quis me de corpore mortis
Hujus nunc leniet, mors, mihi cara, veni.
Mors, mihi cara, veni, cum sis mihi janua vitæ,
Foetor, gleba, lutum, stat reputanda caro.
Stat reputanda caro nil, quamvis sint tibi vires,
Si non mente vires, non bonus ipse vires.
Non bonus ipse vires, horum si non memor assis,
Qui cari mihi sunt, his bona ferre velis.
His bona ferre velis, cunctis ingrata refutes,
Quo gratus maneat, hoc tibi gratia det.
Hoc tibi gratia det, Acheron non grata resumet;
Terram terra teget, spiritus alta petet.
Spiritus alta petet, benedictio te sacra Christi
Servet, quo solvas debita quæque mea.
Debita quæque mea solvas et eris benedictus,
Te fratres quoque rex beat ipse poli.
Rex beet ipse poli pietate Thomamque, Johannem, Necnon Humfredum, sit quibus alma fides.
Alma fides vireat qua crescant prospera regni,
Ut te contingat hac prece posse frui.

Gratiarum actiones regis Henrici 4 in fine vite suæ.

Gloria, Christe, tibi, miserorum rex miseratur,
Pro pietate tua tu miserere mei.

Tu miserere mei nosco conceptus in alvo,
 Ingressus mundum mox bona grata tuli.
 Grata tuli, tribues tibi nil miles, comes, et dux,
 Nunc rex grata tuli gloria tota tibi.
 Tota tibi laus sit, in te nunc omnia possum,
 Hæc me confortant spes, amor, atque fides.
 Spes, amor, atque fides, sensusque, memorque voluntas
 Patri tum nato spirituique sacro.
 Sacro spiritui sit laus in honore perenni,
 Infirrus cum sim fortior atque potens.
 Fortior atque potens respirans exprimo Xpistum,¹ Hinc ego nunc rogo justa crucis via sit.
 Hæc est nobilitas regnantibus inclita cunctis
 Virtutum series, relevans examine Xpus.
 Hostes ecce nocent rapiendo jocalia cara,
 Virtus servetur respirans excipe Xpum.
 Traditur hostis opus, meditetur amore sophia,
 Excipiens lumen mortis amara monens.

Mortem regis Henrici 4ti.

Annis millenis quadringentis duodenis
 Rex meat Henricus ad loca digna sibi
 Cuthberti luce vitæ spiramen ab imis
 Suscipit altitonans rex miserando piis.
 Ficta prophetia sonuit quam vivus habebat,
 Quod sibi sancta fuit terra lucranda cruce.
 Improvisa sibi sacra terra datur nescius hospes
 In Bethlem camera Westque monasterio.
 O fallax fortuna, suis vergenda repente,
 Quos sua dextra levat, hos sua læva premat.
 Fingit, ovat, recipit, tradit, variat, negat, aufert,
 Quot rara promittit, fine perire solent.
 Claruit Henricus rex, regum germine natus, Anglus, Normannus, cum sit uterque parens.

¹ It is necessary to retain the case, or we should lose the x, abbreviation of the word in this | which is necessary to the acrostic.

Anglia, Francia, Neustria, parte patris referuntur, Nobilius reliquis, stirps sua clara viret.
 Henrico regi terno sextus reperitur,
 Tam patre quam matre pura propago patet.
 Audax, intrepidus, micuit miles, comes, et dux,
 Hinc rex magnificus robore, mente, statu.
 Hic moriens monuit successurum sibi natum
 Henricum quintum, nobilitate parem.

Finitur finis regis Henrici 4ti.

*Rex es, apicolis ale ne grave lædat, id effer;
 Hic es, nil rapias, jus conservans vice summi;
 Quo virtus jubilans, noxam terit, undique suffer.
 Chrismatis arma tenens, en regni jus notat ara.
 Res est gratifica jam nobilitas animosa,
 Angelicum nomen genti locus imprimit ecce.*

ON THE BATTLE OF AZINCOURT.¹

And ther lay owre kynge til the fyrste day of Octobre, the which day owre kynge remevyd and toke his way thorow Normandy and thorow Pykardy towarde Calys. And these bethe the townes that owre kynge rood by thorow Frawnce. First is Har-flew; the secunde is Houndefle; the thirde is Barflete;
 the ferthe is Mousterevelers; the fift is Fescoonpe, with the abbey; the sixt is Arkes; the seventhe is Depe; the eyghte is Depe; the ix^e is the ceté of

ballad, until, tired of paraphrasing it, he went on copying the song itself. The lines of the earlier part of it, with their rhymes, are easily traced in the introductory prose, which is printed here as it stands in the MS.

Delewe; the x^o is the ceté de Tewe; the xj^o is ceté de Neelle; the xij^o is the ceté de Amyas; the xiiij^o is the ceté of Aras; the xiiij^o the water of Somme; the xv^o the ceté of Pyroune; the xvj^o the water of Swerdys; and than the batel of Tyrwyne. And in Azyngcorte felde owre kynge faught with the Frenchmen the ffryday tofore the day of Symond and Jude; and ther all the ryall powere of Frensshemen come azenst owre kynge and his litill meyné, save the Frensshe kynge and the dolfyne and the duke of Borgoyne, and the duke of Barre, elles all the lordys of Frawnce lay tofore the kynge in his hy way as he schuld passe towarde Calys, enbatelyd in iij^o batayles, as the Frensshemen sayde hem silfe, the nowmbre of lx m^l men of armes, and tho were the faireste men of armys that ever any man saw in any plase. And owre kynge with his litille mayné sey well he must nedys fyzte, or he myght not come to Calays by the hy way. And than he sayde to his lordys and to his mayné: "Syres and ffelowes, the

 " swete Jhesu, helpe mayntene Inglondes ryght this " day. Allso, archers, to yow I praye, no fote that " ze fle away, erste be we alle beten in this felde.
 " And thenke be Englysshemen that never wold fle
 " at no batelle, for azenste one of us thowthe ther
 " be tene, thenke Criste wil help us in owre ryght.
 " Bot I wold no blode wer spilte, Cryste helpe me
 " so now in this case, but tho that been cause of " this trespase; when thou sittest in jugment, ther

" holde me excused tofore thi face, as thou art God
 " omnipotent. But passe we all now in fere, duke,
 " erle, and bachelere, of all owre synnys he make us
 " sekere. Jentil Jhesu, borne of Marye, and as for us
 " thou deydyst on good Fryday, as thi will was, so
 " brynge us to thi blisse an hy, and graunte us ther
 " to have a place. Do and bete on ffaste," owre kynge tho bad wythe fulle glad chere; and so thei dyde at that word, lord, knyght, and archere. Ther men myght see a semblé sade that turnyd many on to tene and tray, for many a lorde ther ryght low lay that commen was of blod full gent. By evensong tyme sothely to say, ther helpe us God omnipotent.

Stedes ther stumbelyd in that stownde,
 That stod stere stuffed under stele;
 With gronyng grete thei felle to grownde,
 Here sydes federed whan thei gone fele.
 Owre lord the kynge he foght ryght wele,
 Scharpliehe on hem his spere he spent,
 Many on seke he made that sele,
 Thorow myght of God omnipotent.

The duke of Glowcestre also that tyde
 Manfully, with his mayné, Wondes he wroght ther wondere wyde.
 The duke of 3orke also, perdé,
 Fro his kyng no fote wold he flee,
 Til his basonet to his brayn was bent;
 Now on his sowle he have peté, Mersifull God omnipotent.

Hontyngdoun and Oxforde bothe
 Were wondere fers all in that fyght;
 That erste was glade thei made ful wrothe,
 Thorow hem many on to deth were dyght.

The erles fowghten with mayn and myzt,
 Rich hauberke thei rofe and rente;
 Owre kyng to helpe thei were full lyght;
 Now blesse hem God omnipotent.

The erle of Suthfolk gan hem assaylle,
 And sir Richarde Kyghlé in that stede,
 Here lyves thei losten in that bataile,
 With dyntes sore ther were thei dede.
 Ȝif eny man byde eny good bede
 Unto God with good entent,
 To tho two sowles it mote be neede,
 Gracius God omnipotent.

Sire William Bowsere, as foule in fright,
 Preste he ther was upon his pray, Erpyngham he come hym with,
 Her manhode help us welle that day.
 Off Frensshe folk in that afray
 Thre dukes were dede with doleful dent,
 And fyve erles, this is no nay;
 Ther holpe us God omnipotent.

Lordes of name an hunderde and mo
 Bitterly that bargayn bowght;
 Two thousand cot-armers also,
 After her sorow thedere thei sowght.
 Ten thowsand Frensshemen to deth wer browght,
 Off whom never none away went;
 All her names sothly know I nowght,
 Have mersy on hem Cryst omnipotent.

Two dukes were take in that stoure,
 He of Orliawnce and of Borboun,
 The Ewe and Arthowre,
 The erle of Vandoum, and many one.

The erchebisshope of Sens come with oure foon,
 * * * * *

Hym failed the wynnyng of his schone,
 Thorow myght of God omnipotent.

The fals Flemyngys, God ȝef hem care,
 Thei loved us never ȝit, by the roode,
 For alle here fals flateriſſe fare,
 Aȝenst owre kyng that day thai stode.
 Bot many of hem her hert-blode
 Unblythly bledden upon that bent;
 Ȝit schalle thai never wayt Inglond good,
 I swere by God omnipotent.

EPIGRAM ON THE BATTLE OF AZINCOURT.¹

Mortua cara cruce caro Christi victor ut unus Crispini luce fecit Francis fore funus.
 Henricus quintus rus agens curtum fuit intus,
 Jure juvante Jesu rex est victor sine læsu,
 Dant sua firma fides, bona vita, preces, et amores,
 Per silvas virides quod perdit Francia flores.
 Ante lepus fugit, quæ nunc est Anglica villa,
 Quum leo rugit per Francos redditur illa.

THE FRENCHMAN TO THE ENGLISHMAN.²

Versus Francorum.

O gens Anglorum, morum flos, gesta tuorum,
 Cur tu Francorum procuras damna bonorum?
 Servorum Christi quos tractas crimine tristi,
 Et servant isti fidem quam bis renuisti.

¹ From MS. Harl. No. 869, fol. 282, v^o. | ² From MS. Harl. No. 2,406, fol. 9, v^o.

Sub specie casti, fraudem tu semper amasti.
 Scindas annosam caudam quam fers venenosam,
 Sed cantas prosam fidelibus Christi morosam.
 Exaudi præsto tu, præsul, et memor esto,
 Qui te caudavit Deus ipsum sanctificavit.

Responsio Anglorum.

Anglorum gentem cur false percutis ore?
 Et pro responso do tibi metra duo.
 Prævalet in lingua qui non est fortior armis,
 Nullus in hac pugna plus meretrice valet.

ON THE LOLLARDS.¹

Versus Lollardorum contra prælatos ecclesiæ ad excitandum dominos temporales contra eos.

Plangant Anglorum gentes crimen Sodomorum,
 Paulus fert horum sunt idola causa dolorum.
 Surgunt ingrati Giesitæ Simone nati,
 Nomine prælati hæc defensare parati.
 Qui reges estis, populis quicunque præestis,
 Qualiter his gestis gladios prohibere potestis.

Versus quidam catholici contra eosdem Lollardos.

Gens Lollardorum gens est vilis Sodomorum, Errores eorum sunt in mundo causa dolorum.
 Hii sunt ingrati, maledicti, dæmone nati,
 Quos vos, prælati, sitis damnare parati;
 Qui pugiles estis fidei populisque præestis,
 Non horum gestis ignes prohibere potestis.

 to the reign of Henry V. They are | ix. fol. 51, r^o.

ON THE DEATH OF HENRY V.¹

Nota bene de Henrico rege quinto, scilicet Angliæ.

Finit tractatus celebri memoramine dignus,
 Tractatus talis qualem non viderat Anglus,
 Nec visurus erat, licet annis mille manebit,
 Plusquam militia nisi gratia deferat arma,
 Et fortisque potens princeps sit bella gubernans,
 Ut semper fuerit Henricus quintus quando regebat;
 Quando sed id fiet, Deus utique non homo dicet.
 Det Deus Augustus ut sit Julio novus hæres, Duxque patri Macedo successor honore Philippo.
 Quam probus et pugnax, quam vivax, fortis, et audax
 Adversus Francos fuit Henricus rex nomine quintus, Dum regnans steterat, hæc nunc concordia monstrat.
 Monstrat, declarat, plano sermoneque narrat,
 Quod fuit in bellis Mars, altus et Hector in armis,
 In causis Icathus, in judiciis Radamantus, Carolus in quæstu, Clodoveus et in moderatu;
 Pluraque sub brevibus ut summatim referamus,
 Quicquid regis erat, hic unus solus habebat,
 Unus et in numero rex, miles, duxque regendo.
 Regum gemma fuitque ducum flos dummodo vixit.
 Quam bona, quam magna, quam grandia, quamque notanda
 Hic rex, dum rexit, apud hostes gesta peregit,
 Si melius memores, et quomodo nunc variat sors,
 Non sine militias neglectu desidiaque.
 Dic flens, dicque mærens, fert hostis seu modo gaudens,

Nunc vir, nunc æstus, nunc Martis tota potestas
 Ad Francos abiit, nunc nos Anglosque reliquit.
 Regina fallit habens patrem, sequitur sua proles,
 Fallit item dictum, dat ramus semper eundem
 Fructum quem stipes, interdum sunt variantes.
 Desino plura loqui, res est manifesta legenti.

EPIGRAM ON THE ASSUMPTION OF THE ARMS OF FRANCE. 1422.¹

Invectio Gallici contra dominum regem Angliæ pro mutatione armorum.

Lilia Francorum, rex Karole septime regum,
 Sint tua cum regno, si qua est reverentia legum.

Iusta responsio Anglici pro mutatione armorum.

Lilia Francorum descensu progenitorum
 Jam sunt Anglorum, si lex valet ulla priorum.

 leian Library, MS. Rawlinson, No.
 214, fol. 121, v°. This epigram appears to have been written on the occasion of the proclamation of the dauphin of France, claiming the kingdom as Charles VII., upon the death of Charles VI.

ON THE ENGLISH TITLE TO THE CROWN OF FRANCE.¹

Here begynneth a remembraunce of a peedeugré how that the kyng of Englonde, Henry the sext, is truly borne heir unto the corone of Fraunce by lynyalle successioun, als wele on his ffader side, Henry the fifth, whom God assoille, as by Kateryne quene of Englonde, his modir, whom God assoille; made by Lydygate Johan the monke of Bury, at Parys, by the instaunce of my lord of Warrewyk.

The prolog.

Trouble hertis to sette in quyete,
And make folkys theire language for to lette,
Which disputen in their opynyons
Touching the ligne of two regions,
The right, I mene, of Inglonde and of Fraunce,
To put away alle maner variaunce,
Holy the doute and the ambyguyté,
To sette the ligne where hit shuld be,
And where hit aught justly to abide,
Wrongfulle claymes for to set aside,
I moved was shortly in sentement
By precept first and commaundement
Of the nobly prince and manly man,
Which is so knyghtly and so moche can,

¹ This is one of the numerous metrical productions of the poet Lydgate, and certainly is one of his worst. Its date is fixed to the autumn of the year 1426 by the statement that the king was then "nigh" five years old, and Lydgate himself gives us the day of the month on which it was written, namely, the 28th of July. It is printed from MS. Harl. No. 7333, fol. 31, r^o. I have not been able to discover any traces of the original from which Lydgate professes to translate.

My lord of Warrewyk, so prudent and wise,
 Beyng present that tyme at Parys
 Whanne he was than repairede agein
 From seint Juliane of Mauns, oute of Mayne
 Resorted home, as folkys telle conne,
 From the castelle that he had wonne
 Thurgh his knyghthode and his hy noblesse,
 And thurgh his wysdom and his hy prowesse.

Gladly he chevith what so he begynne,
 Sesyng not tylle he his purpos wyne,
 The fyne therof berith witnessing.
 Lyf and goodis for title of his kyng
 He sparith not to put in juperdye,
 Oonly the right for to magnifie
 Of him that is to him moste soverain,
 Henry the sext, of age ny fyve yere renne,
 Borne to be kyng of worthie reamys two.
 And God graunt that it may be so,
 Septure and crowne that he may in dede,
 As he hath right, in peas to possede,
 And to put his title in remembraunce,
 Whiche that he hath to Inglond and to Fraunce.

The regent
 of the rem[e] of Fraunce, duc of B[edford].

The noble, that worthi varioure,
 Whiche may be callid a very conqueroure,
 Who lyst considre and serche by and by His grete emprise in ordre coriously,
 And specially to encrece his glory,
 Who list remembre the grete high victory
 Which that he had in Vernouille in Perche, Fulle notable in boke oute to serche,
 In cronycles to be song and rad;
 And this prince moste discrete and sad,
 Hy lord of Bedford, of Fraunce the regent,
 Was the first that did his entent,
 By grete advys and ful hy prudence,
 Thurugh his laboure and his diligence,

That made eeoche in cronycle fulle notable,
By the clerk which he knew moste able,
Renomed of wysdom and science,
Worthie eke of fame and of credence.

And I, as he that durst not withsey,
Humbly his biddying did obey,
Ful desirous him to do plesaunce,
With fere suppressed for my ignoraunce,
And in my hert quakyng for drede;
And as I kend began to taken hede Unto the Frenssh compiled by Laurence,
In substaunce flowyng the substaunce
Of his writyng and compilacioun.
Alle be that I in my translacioun
To my helpe nor to my socoure
Of rethoryk have no maner floure,
Yit shal I folow my maistre douteles,
Calot, and be not recheles
Liche his writyng my stiel to direct;
Where I dare pray hem to correct,
I mene tho that shalle hit sene or rede;
And right forth who so lyst take hede, Undir favoure and supportacioun,
Thus I begyn on my translacioun.

Here endith the prolog, and begynneth the translacioun.

Crist Jhesu, prince and soverain lord
Of unyté, of pease, and of accorde,
Seyng the myschief and the hie distaunce
Betwene the kyng of England and of Fraunce;
Perylle of soules both nygh and ferre,
By occasioun of the mortalle werre;
Seyng also the grete confusioun
Of both reames, by devisioun
Thurgh feyned falshede caused cursidly
By the dolphyn, that so horribly

Made sleen withoute drede or shame,
 At Monstreux, a toune of grete fame,
 Johan duc of Burgoyne, by grete violence,
 Doyng to him honure and reverence,
 And evermore of inyquité,
 By false tresoun and cursed cruelté,
 Compassed; alas! that was to grete a ruth Under coloure and shadowe of veray trouth,
 In dispite of the chirche, alas!
 Havyng no reward in this horrible cas
 To suerté nor othe ymade toforne,
 Nor asurance in holy place asworne,
 The high lord Herry Bully to offende;
 That wit of man coude not comprehende,
 That this dolphyn shuld in any wise
 So hygh tresoun compassen or devise,
 Him self, alas! in hindryng of his name,
 Thurgh the world to selaundre and to blame.
 Causing in soth his unabilité
 For to succede to any dignité,
 Of knyghtly honure to regne in any lond,
 As by lettres ensealid with his hond
 Clerly recorde, truth wolle not vary,
 He to his othe wirching the contrary.

Consideryng this and peised in balaunce,
 Touching the right of true enheritaunce,
 God thurgh his myght who can undirstonde
 More of grace than of mannes honde,
 Alle oure trouble to enden and to fyne,
 By purveaunce which that is devyne,
 Provided hath of his hy grace
 For reames two large to compasse
 A rightfulle heire, I dare hit wele endite,
 As this figure unto every wight
 Shewyng in ordre descendyng lyne right,
 To forein blode that it not ne choinge,
 The crowne to put in non hondis straunge,

Schewyng
 of the peedegré in portraiture.

But it conveied there it shuld be.
 Verily, liche as ye may se,
 The peedegré doth hit specifie,
 The figure lo of the genelagye,
 How that God list for her purchace
 Thurgh his power and benigne grace,
 An heir of peas by just successioun,
 This figure makith clere demonstracioun.
 Ageins which noman may maligne,
 But that he stondith in the veray ligne,
 As ye may se, as descendid is
 Of the stok and blode of seint Lowys;
 Of which we aught of equité and right
 In oure hertis to be glad and light,
 That we may se with every circumstaunce
 Direct the lyne of Englund and of Fraunce.
 On the othir part byhold and ye may se
 How this Herry in the eight degré
 Is to seint Lowys' sone and very heire;
 To put away alle doute and despaire,
 God hath for us so graciously provided,
 To make al oon that first was devided,
 That this Herry standing in the lyne,
 Thurgh Goddis hond and purviaunce devyne,
 Is justly borne, to voide alle variaunce,
 For to be kyng of Englund and of Fraunce;
 To whom we owe truly to obey
 In every thing, there is nomore to sey.
 By whom we se the werre doutelesse
 Fully finisshed, brought in werre and peas,
 Betwix this noble worthi reames twayne,
 Ful long aforne with laboure and grete payne Sought and required, which ben now at rest,
 Thanked be God, that alle doth for the best.
 And that this peas in sothfast unyté,
 Be endid sone withoute strif or plee,
 By thavise and mediacioun

Shewyng
 the portrature of the pedegré.

Made by treté of bothe regioun,
Sworne and asured by fulle besy peyne
Of both parties at Trois in Champoigne.
Charlis the sext makyng thassurance,
Thilke tyme beyng kyng of Fraunce ;
The quene also sworne in the same wise,
And after hem, as I shal devise,
The boke also entouchid with his hond,
Was Herry sworne, kyng of Englund,
Heir of Fraunce, and also regent,
And Phelip eke beyng there present,
Duc of Burgoyne, assured eke and sworne,
Sone to the duc of whom I spake byforne,
That slayn was and murdred traitoursly;
Than thre astatis beyng by and by,
Prelatis, erles, lordis, and barons,
Sworne and assured, of both regions,
As the traité fully hath devised.
And there in Troys also was solempnesed
The mariage, to conferme up the peas ;
And to declare the maner douteles
Of this weddyng, who so lyst to serche,
At Seint Petirs Aundels of the chirche,
The said Herry, manly and prudent,
Of Englund kyng, of Fraunce the regent,
Betrouthed hath my lady Kateryne,
And the mystery with that is devyne.
O mariage by grete reverence,
The sacrement for the excellence
He hath worshipped, and fulle humbly
In the chirch made axid openly,
After custume of hy or low degré,
To show ensample of humylité.
In the chirche thries of Seint Johan,
Liche the custume of new and yore agon,
Thries published in open audience,
As the lawe byndeth in sentence.

Touching the statuyt in cas of mariage,
 For any favoure of blode or lynage,
 The cours suyng in alle his hole entent,
 And in no wise list not be exempte.
 From poynt to poynt list no thing withdrawe,
 The bonde flowyng of holy chirche lawe,
 Notwithstandyng his astate rialle;
 But in his chirche than parochialle
 Of Seint Johan he came with good entent,
 For to receive the holy sacrement
 Of mariage, he and Kateryne,
 As ye toforne have herd me determyne.

The which Herry if I shal discryve,
 I dare wele sey there was never on lyve
 No manlier to speke of worthinesse,
 Of governaunce, nor of hy prowessse,
 Whiche thurgh his manhode and grete laboure,
 Lyche a notable worthi conqueroure
 Cesid not, thurgh his besy peyne,
 Justly to bring worthi reames twayne
 Undir oo crowne by desceynt of lyne;
 For which he may among the worthie nyne
 Truly be set and reconed for oon,
 Who can take hede among hem everichone.
 And of this Henry, of knyghthode moste famous,
 Moste avisy, and moste victorious,
 From saint Lowys in the right lyne,
 I sey of him and of Kateryne,
 Don in ordre by corious lynealle,
 Descendid is from the stok rialle
 Of seint Lowis, who can undirstond,
 Henry the sext, borne in Englund,
 For to possede by enheritaunce
 Crownes two of Englund and of Fraunce,
 By true title, as ye have hard toforne,
 The first yere in soth that he was borne.
 By the which of hem he and his fader dere
 Both two passing in oon yere,

Kyng of Fraunce,
 Charles

th[e sext], and the kyng of Englond,
Her[ry the fift].

Everiche in haste suyng aftir othir,
By pitous faate, hit wold be non othir,
The yere of grace by computacioun
A thousand foure hundrid by conclusioun
Twenty and two, who so compte right.
God graunt her soulis of her grete myght
Joy and rest which is eternalle,
In his court above celestialle;
And graunt oure kyng joy, honure, and glorye,
Peas and quiete, and of his foen the victorye,
To love his people, and to be loved ayen,
As thei loved her lord most soverain,
Charles the sext, which was his aielle.
And in doctryne norissched be as wele,
And als wys and prudent fynally,
As was his fader callid eke Henry.
Graunt him grace and also good fortune,
In his regnes also to contynue
His rialle lyne also to habounde,
And that hit may verily be founde
Hy to encrece in worship and vertue,
As an heir blessed of Jhesu,
And of renoun excellent in vertue.
To drawen oute a true peedegrue,
Lyneally descending even adoun
From seint Lowys, most famous of renoun,
And renommed of parfite holynesse;
And specially, the trouth to expresse,
Amonges other to rekene everychone,
Of Frenssh men oonly there was oon
From the trouth which wold not varie,
Oure liege lord chosen secretary
For his feithfulle true diligence,
Which by name callid is Laurence Calet, of the counseille clerk,
Which toke on him the laboure of this werk,
Ever aftir to be rad and song;
First to compile hit in the Frenssh tong,

Compendiously drawe hit in sentence
 In that language, by grete providence,
 As he that was passing excellent,
 In rethoryk famous and eloquent,
 And diligent withouten any slouth
 To declare oute the trouth,
 The chaf to voide and take the true corne.
 Of which my lorde that I spak of byforne,
 My lord of Warrewyk, ful worthi of renoun,
 Of high prudence and discrecioun,
 Touching the writyng of this Calot clerk,
 Draw into Frenssh by his besy werk,
 Gaf me precept in conclusioun
 To make therof a playne translacioun
 In Englissh tong, and bad me hit translate.
 And to reherce the very true date
 Of this laboure, when I first bygan,
 Hit was in soth, as I reherce can,
 The monyth of Juylle twenty daies comen,
 And eight over, when the sonne shone
 Made his paleys and his dwellyng place
 Ameddis the hevene in the thrid face,
 The signe I mene callid the lioun,
 Which is the toure and chief mansioun
 Where Phebus hath moste souverain dignité;
 And thilke tyme in the thritheneth degré
 He entred was of the same signe,
 Thatempire wedir lusty and benigne,
 Saturne beyng in the scorpyoun,
 In which he hath no domynacioun,
 Ne dignité shortly for to tary;
 Jubiter in the sagittary
 Seven degrés where he is dignified,
Fulle fortunat and gretly magnified;
Furious Mars, the ferfulle red sterre,
Causar of stryf, patroun of the werre,
 With his bemes cast moste fervently,
 Was two pocys passed of gemeny;

Fresssh Venus, lady of Citheroun,
 Was nyne degrees entred the lyoun;
 And the mone, with her hornes pale,
 From the bolle gan her cours availe;
 The same tyme when that Mercurious
 In the lyoun had take his hous,
 Ful contrary to his dignité,
 Beyng tho in the tenth degré;
 And of the bulle also douteles
 By accomptes also twenty grees
 Entred was the hed of the dragoun;
 And his taille in thopposicioun;
 The same tyme, as I understand,
 My lord bad me this werk take in hond.
 That he may se his generacioun
 Unto the forteth multiplicacioun
 Victoriously for to regnen here,
 After this lyfe above the sterres clere,
 God him graunt oonly of his grace
 Of mercy there for to have a place.

Here endith the genologie of kyng Henry the sext, and folowith a roundelle of him ayens his coronacioun, made by Lydegate daun Johan.

Rejoice, ye reames of Englonde and of Fraunce,
 A braunche that sprang oute of the floure-de-lys,
 Blode of saint Edward and saint Lowys,
 God hath this day sent in governaunce.

God of nature hath yoven him suffisaunce,
 Likly to atteyne to grete honure and pris.

O hevenly blossome, o budde of alle plesaunce,
 God graunt the grace for to ben als wise
 As was thi fader by circumspect advise,
 Stable in virtue, withoute variaunce.

Explicit.

TO KING HENRY VI. ON HIS CORONATION.¹

Most noble prince of cristen princes alle,
 Flowryng in yowthe and vertuous innocence,
 Whom God above list of his grace calle
 This day to estate of knyghtly excellence,
 And to be crowned with diewe reverence,
 To grete gladnesse of al this regioun,
 Lawde and honour to thy magnificence,
 And goode fortune unto thy high renoun.

Royal braunched, descended from two lynes,
 Of seynt Edward and of seynt Lowys;
 Holy seyntes, translated in theyr shrynes,
 In theyr tyme manly, prudent, and wys;
 Arthur was knyghtly, and Charles of grete prys,
 And of all these thy grene tender age,
 By the grace of God and by his advys,
 Of manly prowesse shal taken tarage.

God of his grace gaf to thy kynrede
 The palme of conquest, the laurere of victorie;
 They loved God, and worshipped hym in dede,
 Wherfor theyr names he hath put in memory,
 Made hem to reigne for vertu in his glorie;
 And sith thow art born of theyr lynage,
 Tofore al thynges that bien transitorie
 Love God and drede, and so gynne thy passage.

¹ This poem was evidently addressed to the infant king, on his coronation, which took place on the 6th of November 1429. It is printed from a contemporary manuscript, MS. Harl. No. 2251, fol. 251, v°.

Downe from the heven thre flour-de-lys of gold,
The felde of asure, were sent to Clodové,
To sygnifie, in storye it is tolde,
Parfite bileve, and sothfast unyté
Of thre persones in the Trynité;
For to declare that the lyne of Ffraunce Shuld in theyr trouth parfite and stable be,
Grounded on feyth, withouten variaunce.

And sith thou art from that noble lyne
Descended downe, be stidefast of byleve;
Thy knyghtly honour lete it shewe and shyne,
Shewe thy power and thy myght to preve
Ageyne al thoo that wil the chirche greve.
Cherisshe thy lordes, hate extorcioun;
Of thyn almesse thy peple thou releve;
Ay on thy comunes havynge compassioun.

Noble prince, the high Lord to qweme,
Susteyne right, trouth to magnyfie,
Differre vengeaunce, alwey or thou deeme,
And gyf no dome til thou here iche partye
Til nother part thy favour nat applye;
And eeke considre, in thyn estate royal,
The Lord above, whiche noman may denye, Indifferently seeth and considreth alle.

God sent this day unto thy regalye
Of al vertues hevenly influence;
First of alle thi state to magnyfye
With Salamons soverayne sapience;
To governe thy wit and thi high prudence,
Liche kyng David to be loo! mercyable,
Whiche of pité, whan men dide hym offence,
Mercy preferring, list nat be vengeable.

Nobles and force in wexyng liche Sampson,
 Resemble in knyghthode to worthy Josué;
 And thow mayst be Goddis champioun,
 As that he was, Judas the Machabée;
 With Alisaundres magnanimyté;
 Conquest, victorie, with Cesar Julius,
 His pacience and his tranquillité,
 And in suffraunce to be als vertuous.

Provident, with Brutus Cassius;
 Hardy as Hector, whan tyme doth require;
 Vices eschewyng as Fabricius;
 Constant of hert, and al als entier
 As Zenocrates, whos renoun shoone so cliere;
 Wronges forgetyng, noble Cypion;
 Clement, with Titus; with al these in feere,
 In al thi dedis conquest and high renoun.

In al thi werkis hauntyng rightwisnesse,
 As themperour that callid was Trajan;
 With Thiberye, fredam and gentillesse;
 Attemperance, with prudent Gracian;
 And in thy doomes, liche Justynian,
 Nothyng conclude til thow se the fyne;
 Pees preferryng as Octovyan;
 The chirche cherysshyng, like Constantyne.

And that thow mayst be resemblable founde,
 Heretikes and Lollardes to oppresse,
 Liche themperour worthy Sygesmounde;
 And as thy fader, flowre of high prowessse,
 At the gynning of his roial noblesse,
 Voided al cokil farre out of Syon,
 Cristes spouse satte in stablenesse,
 Outrayeng foreyns that cam from Babilon.

God graunt the grace for to resemble in al
 Unto these noble worthy conquerours;
 Longe to contynue in thyn estate royal,
 And to be lyke to thy progenytours;
 To gadre the vertu out of fresshe floures,
 As dide thy fadir, myrrour of manhode;
 And to repressse of vices al the showres,
 With fynal grace to love God and drede.

Fynally, remembryng of reasoun
 Croppe and roote of that royal lyne
 Fro whiche thow cam, folwe discrecioun
 Of thy fader, whiche dide so shyne
 In al vertu; plainly to termyne,
 Late hym by thy myrrour and thy guyde,
 With the goode lyf of qwene Kateryne,
 Thi blessid moder, in that other side.

Of goode rootes, sprynggyng by vertu,
 Must growe goode fruyte be necessité;
 Whan influence by the Lord Jhesu
 Is sent adowne from his hevenly cytee.
 And God I pray, of his hygh bounté,
 Of fader and moder in thy tendre yowth
 To take ensample, reygng in thy see,
 And bien in vertu als famous and als kowth.

With hym in knyghthode to have excellence;
 Like thy moder in vertuous goodenesse;
 And liehe hem both, grounde thy conscience
 To love thi Lord in parfite stabilnesse,
 Goode lyf and longe al vices to repressse,
 Love of thy lieges, pees and obeysaunce.
 * * * * *
 Thy right rejoisying of England and of Fraunce.

Prince excelent, be feythful, triewe, and stable;
 Drede God, do lawe, chastice extorcioun;
 By liberal of courage, unmutable;
 Cherisshe the chirche with hole affeccion;
 Love thy lieges of eyther regioun;
 Preferre the pees, eschewe werre and debate;
 And God shal sende from the heven downe
 Grace and goode hure to thy royal estate.

Be mercyful, nat hasty ne vengeable;
 Lightly forgyve, where as thow seest reasoun;
 Be rightful juge, be manly, be tretable;
 Thy right ay sugre with remyssion;
 Deme nat to sone, but make dilacioun;
 Rewe on the poore and folk desconsolate;
 And God shal sende from the heven above
 Grace and good hure to thy royal estate.

In thy behestes be nat variable;
 Holde thy promesses, made of entencion;
 Be bountevous, and kyngly honorable;
 Voyde thy realme from discencion;
 Eschew flatery and adulacioun;
 Folkes reconsile that stonde desolate;
 And God shal sende from the heven downe
 Grace and goode hure unto thy royal estate.

ON THE CORONATION OF HENRY VI.¹

Nov. 6, 1429.

A balade made of the same kyng.

Holde up oure yong kyng, ave benigna,
 And sende us peas in oure londe, ave regina.
Mater, nunc bright bee thy beamys,
 Moodir of mercy, save bothe reamys;
 See to oure innocent, oure crowne may be gladder,
 Holde up oure lorde that nevyr sigh his ffadir,
 Ne the fadir his sone reynyng in his londes;
 Grete nede have we to kepe peas amonge us.
 On a Sounday, trewly ye may trowe,
 Oure bisshoppes and oure abbottes were mytird arowe;
 Two archiebisshoppes so woorthely acqueyntid,
 And a gracious cardynalle aboute oure kyng anoyntid.
 Thre swerdis there were borne, oon poyntlees, and two poyntid;
 The toon was a swerde of mercy, the oothir of astate,
 The thrid was of the empier the which ert oure gate.
 Three dukes were in presens woorshipec to encrece;
 Two bisshoppis hym ledde to kepe in peece;
 Six erles in their estate shewid them alle;
 And the v. poortis beryng up the palle.
 Gracious Werwik, God hym contynue,
 Beryng up his trayne in peece and vue.
 Alle the barouns of oure londe togidir they were founden,
 The juges, the knyghtes of the shire, and the cité of London.
 This is procession goyng thorughe the halle;
 Angelis mete, manna, on his crowne did falle,

¹ Printed from MS. Lansdowne, No. 285, fol. 5, v^o.

And conceyvid in this lande the crowne to encrece,
Evir enduryng with plenté and with peece.
The archiebisshope of Cauntirbury appoyntid,
The gracious kyng Harry the sixt he anoyntid Oure soveraigne lorde in the chief, who wille undir-sonde.
The cardynalle tho was on his right hande;
On the toothir side the chaunceller, theis lordes were able,
The bisshope of Beames¹ at the same table.
Huntyngdone kneelyng with his seiture on the right
honde,
Stafforde with his swerde there woorthyly holdande.
Northfolk as a marschalle fulle woorthyly beknowe,
Ridyng in his office, truly ye may trowe.
Salisbury in Bedforde office present hym there, Sittyng on a stede, as he conestable were.
The v. poortis on the right hande that the palle beere,
At the boorde on the right hande present they were.
At the next bisshoppis and abbottes togidir were fouden;
And on the toothir side the citee of Londoun. .
Many oothir lordis were present in that place,
To woorshipe oure soveraigne lorde with alle solace.
Byfore the kyng, with his lordis thus sittyng alle,
Came Phillipe Dymmok ridyng to the halle,
Armyd clene with armure so bright,
Like as perteynethe unto a woorthy knyght,
As the kynges champion by heritage;
There redy his body and his gloove to wage,
Yif there were any man that wille say the contrary,
That kyng Harry the sixt is crownyd truly.
He is redy to delyvir hym, and not abasshe,
By signement of the kyng, tyme and place.

Praye we alle bothe more and lesse,
 Crist save Englonde in reste and peece,
 And God coomforthe that mykille hathe loost,
 That was woon with woorshipe late nevir be loost.

ON THE DUKE OF BURGUNDY.¹

A songe made of the duke of Burgeyne.

Thow Phellippe, foundour of new falsehede, Distrourbar of pees, capiteine of cowardise,
 Sower and distrourber, reprof of alle knyghthode,
 Which of alle Bourgoyne, that is so gret of pris,
 Thow clepest thi selfe duc, whan woltow ryse
 Ande in pleyne felde do mustre with thi lance?
 See how alle knyghthode thi werre doth despise,
 White thi owne falsnes alle thi myschance.

Remembre the, Phelippe, ande have in mynde
 Howe Henry the w^{te} of werray gentelnesse, Withotene thi desert, he was to the kynde,
 Ande alwa thi socoure whane thou were in destresse,
 Defende thi persone from alle wilfulnes
 Of alle thi mortal enemys of Englonde and of France;
 Wherfor thou shewest gret unkyndnesse,
 The which thou may wite alle thi myschance.

Remembre the, Phelippe, at thi begynnyng,
 Whan that thi ffader, thurgh conspired tresoun,

¹ This piece, which appears to be imperfect, was written at the time of the defection of the duke of Burgundy from the English alliance, probably shortly before, or at the time of, the siege of Calais (1436).

It is printed from MS. Sloane, No. 252, fol. 169, r^o. It is written in a French hand, and apparently by a scribe whose mother tongue was not English, which will account for some obscurity.

By assent of Charles that callede him self kyng
Of that reame of Ffrance withouten ground resoun,
Was at Motreux broght to his confusioun ;
To kyng Henry there thou dedist thy legeance ;
Of lyf and land he was thi proteccioun ;
Wherfor thi falsnes causethe thi myschance.

Remembre the, Phelippe, what tyme and how To kyng Henry the fifte, by thi owne assent, Withouten his desire, thou madest a solempne vow,
Usyng Goddes body, the holy sacrament,
To become trew lygman with good entente
To him ande his heires, withouten variance ;
Now art thou fals to Gode, by thine owne assente,
The which thou may witte all thi myschance.

Remembre the, Philleppe, that thou yonge kyng,
Harry the sext, was crowned at Parys,
Johan duc of Bedford thine absenc excusyng
By souffisant warant made by thi devise,
He did thine homage as to the floure-de-lys ;
This matere the lust not to adversité,
With thine oune falsnes and thi myschance.

Remembre the, Philleppe, how peple of Englund
Have bene to the evyr gentil and trew ;
For whan thou wer besegede with many a thousand
Of Armynackes, they did the rescewe.¹

PHILIPPE OF BURGUNDY AND JAMES OF SCOTLAND.¹

Philippus dux Burgundiae ad Jacobum regem Scottorum.

Illustri Jacobo Scottorum principi magno,
Regi magnifico cum fulmine castra reduco.

Responsio ad hoc per quendam Anglicum.

Burgundus Scoto, dux regi, falsus iniquo,
Philippus Jacobo, dedit hæc baliaria metro.
Et si quis quærat cujus vox extitit ista,
Vox balearis erat, ut finxerat ipse metrista.
Nunc reflexivum parvum lapidem tibi flabo,
Atque ducem vivum si vult mihi stare probabo
Bumbardo metrico; sic scripsit amicus amico,
Regi magnifico cum fulmine castra reduco;
Ecce tene lapidem, per sermones ita viles,
Et frangendo fidem, tu falsus es undique miles.
Nec Burgundorum dux, quamvis scandat ad astra,
Nec rex Scottorum, sibi subdit Anglica castra.
Per tantum fulmen, per talem nempe reductum,
Anglorum culmen adquisivit sibi fructum.
Quamvis falsidicus hic dux noster amicus,
Nobis multa dedit ut ab obsidione recedat,
Angligenis vinceps tum Scotus rex habeatur,
Est falsus princeps, quia principi falsificatur.
Dux Burgundorum quia princeps falsus habetur, Principi Scottorum sua per metra falsa fatetur.
Est et semper erit similis, similem sibi quærit;
Ambo perjuri, sunt ambo simul perituri.

¹This short poem, printed from MS. Rawlinson, No. 214, fol. 166, r°, belongs no doubt, from internal evidence, to the same period as the preceding. The king of Scotland must be James I., who was murdered in the night of the 20th of February 1437.

Philippus, Jacobus, sancti simul ambo fuere ;
 Istorum reprobis contendit uterque manere.
 Nominibus similes sunt non in imagine morum ;
 Sed nisi sint humiles non intrant castra polorum.
 Dux dudum victus est, per papam maledictus ;
 Acriter inflictus est iste gravissimus ictus.
 Miror vos quippe, te, Jacobe, teque, Philippe,
 Cur ita temptatis nos Anglos et stimulatís.
 Si vultis pacem, populum revocate minacem ;
 Si vultis guerras, proprias defendite terras.
 Expectate domi, nos proprias terras tenemus,
 Vinus pomi vestri pretio nec egemus.
 Obsecro, rex et dux, clare videatis ubique,
 Quomodo lex et lux vestrum tenebrantur utrique.
 Si non curetis vestras animas fore salvas,
 Non alias detis inferni visere valvas.
 Dux Burgundicus et rex Scoticus insidiantur,
 Sed rex Anglicus et grex publicus his dominantur.
 Anglia regna premit, Burgundia dedecus emit,
 Francia fracta tremit, Scotia victa gemit.
 Undique concursus stat et Anglia fortis et ursus ;
 Anglia dum rugit, circula terra fugit.

ON THE SIEGE OF CALAIS. 1436.¹

Her biginyth the sege off Calays, in the yer off our Lord j. m' iiii'.

In Juyl, whan the sone schon,
 Tres, levys, and herbis grene,
 Wyth many sonder colowris,

¹ From MS. Cotton. Galba E. ix. fol. 110, v°. The duke of Burgundy laid siege to Calais on the 19th of July 1436, and was compelled to raise it on the 25th day of the same month.

And ffresch flowris that April mad,
 Gan for to feynt and to fad
 Of lusty colowris and of swete odowris ;
 And fruyte on tre both gret and smale
 Gan for to rip and wex fulle pale ;
 Than comyth tyme off labowr,
 To profit and to wirschip wyne
 In armes, so ther be no treson inn,
 Untruth, ne fals colowr.
 The duk of Burgayn off grete prid
 Mad gret assemblé in landes wyd,
 In Flanders, and in Breban,
 Of his power and in chevalry
 Of Burgayn and in Pikardye,
 Of Henaw and off Holand ;
 A c.l. m^l, and mo,
 That weryne alle to ryd and go
 To ber sper and schild,
 And mak avant Calys to wyn,
 And schuld dye that wer theryn,
 Both man, woman, and chylde.
 The wolles and the merchandyss,
 And othir god with the ymprise,
 They wold have a serteyne.
 The walles they wold ber adowne,
 Towr, castelle, and dongen,
 Alle schuld be mad fulle playn.
 And so with red baners displayed,
 With odir in the bateyllys arayed,
 They cum the towne abote ;
 Statly tentes anon they pyzte,
 Larg and long and gret of syzth ;
 It was a ryalle rowte.
 Wyth gunnes gret, and other gret ordinance,
 Them to help and to avanc,
 With many a prowde pavys,

Gayly peynted and stuffed welle,
 Ribawdes armyd with iyrne and stele,
 Was never better off devyce ;
 Ix. m^l cokkes to crow at nyȝth,
 And viii. m^l cressetes to brene liȝth ;
 Gret wonder to her and se,
 How sone the had mad her logyng,
 Defens off herth and dikyng ;
 Redier myȝth non be.
 The erle of Mortayne mad a diner,
 And, " Felowys, be of good chere,
 " Off no thyng hav we no dred ;
 " I trust to God to se that day,
 " That, for alle the proud aray,
 " Fulle low schalle thay lowth."
 The levetenant, ser Johan Raclif,
 That ever lovyd worschyp and dred repreve,
 Kept fulle god governance.
 And so did the baren off Dudley,
 In the castelle, the soth to say,
 Mad fulle good ordinance.
 My lord Camoys at Bolyn-gate,
 The bulwerkes he did undertak,
 At no tyme wuld he fayle, Nether late ne erly ;
 Yff any withowt wer so hardy
 It onys to assayle.
 At the Mylk-gate ser Johan Aston,
 And ser Jefferey Warbulton,
 With a many a hardy man,
 The trompetes lowd they dyd blow,
 That the duk myȝth welle know
 The wach whan yt bigan.
 The porters kept the gattes full manly,
 The gattes opyn continually,
 To wate they wer not irk ;

The trew sodiers both day and nythe
Lay on the walles in harnes brighe,
Hit was ther howss and kirk.
The burges and men wer full bown
For to defend the possession,
Hit longith to them off ryȝth ;
The merchanttes wer ful redy
At all tymes and every skry ;
Hyt was a full good syȝth.
And so did the good comyns,
That had stuffed well the town
With the good and vitayle,
In town and feld to rid and go,
And all odor werkes to doo,
In all that myȝth avayle.
The women, both yung and old,
Wyth stones stuffed every scaffold,
The spared not to swet ne swynk ;
With boylyng cawdrens, both grett and smalle,
Yf they wold assaute the walle,
All hote to gev them drynk.
The furst day ther ennys prowld
Gan to skirmysch with schowtes lowd,
But countred they wer anon.
Gonners, to schew ther arte,
Into the town in many a parte
Schote many a fulle gret stone.
Thankyd be God and Mary myld,
The hurt nothir man, woman, ne chyld,
To the howsis thow they did harm.
Sent Barbara ! than was the cry,
When the stone in the stone did fly ;
They coud non other charm.
And for the duk lay them no nere,
At the sowth-west corner
Off gonnes he had a song ;

That anon he left that place,
And to the west end he mad a chace;
 Hym thowth he bod to long.
Ther men myzth se archerys good Cast from them both gown and hood,
 The better for to schote;
That Frensch and Flemysch was ful fayn
To ther tentes to retorn ogayn,
 They saw non othir boote.
And one amang, an Iyrysch man,
Uppone his hoby swyftly ran;
 Hyt was a sportfulle sygthe,
How hys darttes he did schak;
And when him lyst to leve or tak,
 They had fulle gret dispite.
Allso a hownd that did hyeghe go by,
That longid to the water-bayly,
 Fulle swyftly wold he ren;
And every skyrmysch to travayle,
Man and hors he wold assayle,
 Fulle welle he coude them kenne.
And so hit byfelle upon a Thyrsday,
The erle of Morteyn made a fray
 At seynt Peturs on the playne;
And drove them to there tentys nere,
And toke many a prisonere,
 And many off them wer slayn.
And after they com with gret navi,
With bolgit schipis ful craftly,
 The havyn for to han schent,
At Friday; but on the morow,
Than began the dukes sorow,
 Hys schypis when he saw brent.
And so after, within a whyle,
Drawyn adown was hys castell
 With many a hardy man;

His men of armes were layd to grownd,
And sum askapid with dethys wond,
 And few off them were tan.
The next morow, or yt was day,
Erly the duk fled oway,
 And with hym they off Gant.
And after Bruges and Apres both
To folow after they wer not loth;
 Thus kept they ther avaunt.
For they had very knowyng
Off the duk off Gloceturs cumyng, Caleys to rescue.
Bycaus they bod not ther,
In Flanders he soght hem fer and ner,
 That ever may they yt rew.
Only God, in whom ys all ,
Sav Caleys that ryall towne,
 That ever yt mot wel cheve
Unto the crown of mery Yngland, Whils that this world wyll stand,
 That neany enmys ytt greve.

THE LIBEL OF ENGLISH POLICY.¹

Here beginneth the prologe of the processe of the Libelle of Englyshe Polycye, exhortynge alle Englande to kepe the see envirooun, and namelye the narowe see, shewynge whate profete commeth thereof, and also worshype and salvacioun to Englande and to alle Englyshe menne.

^a The trewe processe of Englysh polycye,
Of utterwarde² to kepe thys regne³ in rest
Of oure England, that no man may denye,

^a Incipit liber de custodia maris, præsertim arcta inter Dovoream et Caliseam.

¹ The date of this very important poem is fixed by internal evidence, for it was written after the siege of Calais by the duke of Burgundy, and the invasion of his territory by the duke of Gloucester, which latter event occupied the first half of the month of August 1436, and while the emperor Sigismond was still living, and therefore before his death in 1437. From the tone in which the defeat of the Flemings is spoken of we are justified in supposing that it was written soon after that event; and if we may take the marginal note in the MS. we follow (see further on, p. 183) as referring to the time at which the poem was written, its date would be fixed very nearly, for the 14th year of Henry VI. ended on the 31st Aug. 1436. It is here printed from a MS. in the Bodleian Library, MS. Laud. No. 704, fol. 1, r^o (A.), collated with other copies, MS. Harl. No. 4011, fol. 120, r^o (B.), MS. Harl. No. 271, fol. 1, r^o (C.), and MS. Cotton. Vitel. E. x. fol. 192, r^o (D.) The first of these manuscripts has the appearance, by the care and style in which it is written, of having been an original copy, intended to be sent by the author to one of the statesmen of the day, perhaps to the lord Hungerford, whose name is inserted in the Envoy at the end. In MS. D. the title has been changed to "The Bible of Englyshe Polycé," an evident mistake. It is hardly necessary to state that Libel (libellus) means a little book. There are two classes of the MSS., one of which has the name of lord Hungerford at the end, the other is addressed to a high ecclesiastic, no doubt cardinal Beaufort. In this respect Hakluyt's copy agreed with the text now printed, while the three other manuscripts belong to the second class. I have not attempted to give all the verbal variations in the texts, but the readings of MS. D. are generally the most interesting.

 And marternus¹ gode, bene here marchaundyse, Hertys² hydes, and other of venerye,
 Skynnes of otere, squerel, and Irysh are,³
 Of shepe, lambe, and fox, is here chaffare,
 Ffelles of kydde and conyes grete plenté.
 So that yf Ireland halpe us to kepe the see,
 Because the kynge clepid⁴ is rex Angliæ,
 And is dominus also Hiberniæ,
 Old possessyd⁵ by progenitours,
 The Yriche men have cause lyke to oures
 Oure londe and herres togedre defende,
 That none enmye shulde hurte ne offende⁶
 Yrelonde ne us, but as one comonté
 Shulde helpe to kepe welle aboute the see.
 Ffor they have havenesse grete and godely⁷ bayes,
 Sure, wyde, and depe, of gode assayes,
 Att Waterforde and coostis monye one,
 And as men seyn in England, be there none
 Better havenesse shyppes in to ryde,
 Ne more sure for enmyes to abyde.
⁸ Why speke I thus so muche of Yrelonde?
 Ffor also muche as I can understonde
 It is fertyle for thyng⁹ that there do growe
 And multiplen, loke who so lust to knowe;
 So large, so gode, and so comodyouse,
 That to declare is straunge and merveylouse.

LAMENT OF THE DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.²

Thorowowt a pales as I can passe,
 I hard a lady make gret mone,
 And ever she syked and sayd, " Alas !
 " Alle wordly joy ys from me gone ;
 " And alle my frendes from me can fle ;
 " Alas ! I am fulle woo begon ;
 " Alle women may be ware by me.

" Alle women that in this world be wrowght,
 " By me they may insaumpulle take,
 " As I that was browght up of nowght,
 " A prince had chosyn me to his make ;

¹ Instead of the lines which follow, B. has in conclusion :

*To the gret prelate, the heyghest so confessor,
 The gret mayster of the grettest
 housse,
 Cheff tresorere of the gret socoure, Besschop, herle, and baroun plentivous,
 Of highe wyttes lordes thre famous,
 To examene thy doubled rendytee,
 I offer the thum to be gracious,
 To myn excuse, farwelle, my own treté.*

MSS. C. and D. conclude in the same words.

² The duchess of Gloucester performed her penance on the 13th of November 1441. The poem here printed is preserved in a MS. of the latter half of the fifteenth century, in the Library of Balliol College, Oxford, No. 354, fol. 169, v^o, written by a citizen of London named Richard Hill, but the poem itself appears to have been composed at the time of the event to which it refers.

" My sofferen lorde so to forsake,
" Yt was a dulfulle destenye.
" Alas! for to sorow how shuld I slake;
" Alle women may be ware by me.

" I was so high upon my whele,
" Myne owne estate I cowld not know,
" Therfor the gospelle seythe fulle welle,
" Who wille be high, he shalle be low.
" The whele of fortune, who may it trow,
" Alle ys but veyn and vanyté;
" My flowris off joy be alle down blow;
" Alle women may be ware by me.

" In worldly joy and worthynes
" I was besette on every side;
" Of Glowcestere I was duches,
" Amonge alle women magnyfyed.
" As Lucyfer felle down for pryde,
" I felle ffrom alle felycyté;
" I hade no grace my self to gyde;
" Alle women may be ware by me.

" Alas! what was myne adventure,
" So sodenly down for to falle,
" That hade alle London at my cure,
" To crok and knele, whan I wold calle?
" Now, fader of hevyn celestyalle,
" Of my complaynt have pyté.
" Now am I made sympulest of alle;
" Alle women may be ware by me.

" Before the counselle of this londe,
" At Westmynster, upon a day,
" Ffulle rewfully ther dide I stonde;
" A worde for me durst no man say.

- " Owre soverayn lorde withowt delay
 " Was there he myght both here and see
 " And to his grace he toke me ay.
 " Alle women may be ware by me.
- " Hys grace to me was evermore gayne,
 " Thowgh I had done so gret offence;
 " The lawe wolde I hade bene slayn,
 " And sum men dyde there delygence.
 " That worthy prynce of high prudence
 " Of my sorow hade gret petye.
 " Honour to hym, with reverence!
 " Alle women may be ware by me.
- " I come before the spiritualité;
 " Two cardynals, and byshoppis fyve,
 " And oder men of gret degré,
 " Examened me of alle my lyffe.
 " And openly I dyde me shryffe
 " Of alle thyng that they asked me.
 " Than was I putt in penaunce belyffe;
 " Alle women may be ware by me.
- " Thorow London in many a strete,
 " Of them that were most pryncypalle,
 " I went bare fote on my fette,
 " That sum tyme was wonte to ride riale.
 " Fader of hevyn and lorde of alle,
 " As thou wilt, so must yt be.
 " The syne of pryde wille have a falle;
 " Alle women may be ware by me.
- " Ffarewelle, London, and have good day;
 " At the I take my leve this tyde.
 " Ffarewelle, Grenwych, for ever and ay;
 " Ffarewelle, fayer places on Temmys syde;

“ Ffarewelle, alle welth and the world so wide.
“ I am asigned where I shalle be ;
“ Under mens kepyng I must abide.
“ Alle women may be ware by me.

“ Ffarewelle, damask and clothes of gold ;
“ Ffarewelle, velvet, and clothes in grayn ;
“ Ffarewelle, robes in many a folde ; “ Ffarewelle, I se you never agayn.
“ Ffarewelle, my lorde and sufferayn ; “ Ffarewelle, that may no bettere be ;
“ Owr partyng ys grownd of felyng payn.
“ Alle women may be ware by me.

“ Ffarewelle, my mynstrels, and alle your songe,
“ That ofte hath made me for to daunce.
“ Ffarewelle ; I wott I have done wronge ;
“ And I wyte my mysgovernaunce.
“ Now I lyste nother to pryke nor prounce ;
“ My pryde ys put to poverté.
“ Thus, both in Englund and in Fraunce,
“ Alle women may be ware by me.

“ Ffarewelle, alle joy and lustynesse ;
“ Alle worldly myrth I may forsake.
“ I am so fulle of hevynesse,
“ I wotte not to whom my mone to make.
“ Unto hym I wille me take “ That for me dyed upon a tre.
“ In prayer I wille both walke and wake ;
“ Alle women may be ware by me.”

ON THE PROSPECT OF PEACE¹

Mercy and Trouthe mette on an hih mounteyn, Briht as the sonne with his beemys cleer,
 Pees and Justicia walkyng on the pleyn,
 And with foure sustryn, moost goodly of ther cheer,
 List nat departe nor severe in no maneer,
 Of oon accoord by vertuous encrees
 Joyned in charité, pryncesses moost enteer, Mercy and Trouthe, Rihtwisnesse and Pees.

Misericordia, ground and original
 Of this processe, Pax is conclusioun;
 Rihtwisnesse of vertues pryncipal,
 The swerd to modefye of executioun,
 With a sceptre of discrecioun;
 Ther sustir Equitas wil put hir silf in prees,
 Which with hir noble mediacioun
 Sette alle vertues in quiete and in pees.

In this woord Pax ther be lettrys thre;
 P set toforn for polityk prudence;
 A for augmentum and moore auctorité;
 X for Xpus, moost digne of reverence,
 Which on a cros by mortal violence
 With blood and watir wrot by a relees
 Of our trespacys, and for ful confidence
 With hym to regne in his eternal pees.

¹ This poem, by the well-known monk of Bury, John Lydgate, appears to have been composed during the negotiations for peace between England and France in the latter part of the year 1443. It is printed from a nearly contemporary copy in MS. Harl. No. 2255, fol. 21, r^o.

In inward pees ther is eek of the herte
 Which callid is a pees of conscience ;
 A pees set outward, which that doth avert
 To worldly tresours with to gret dilligence ;
 Glad pees in povert, groundid on pacience,
 Professyd to which was Diogenees,
 Which gruchyd nevyr for noon indigence,
 Such as God sent, content in werre and pees.

Ther is also a pees contemplatif,
 Of parfyt men in ther professioun ;
 As some that leede a solitary lif,
 In fastyng, prayng, and devout orisoun ;
 Visite the poore, and of compassioun,
 Nakyd and needy, and hungry socourlees,
 And poore in spirit, which shal have ther guerdoun,
 With Crist to regne in his eternal pees.

Pees is a princesse, douhtir to Charité,
 Kepyng in reste cités and roial touns,
 Folk that be froward, set in tranquyllité,
 Monarchies and famous regions ;
 Pees preservyth them from divisiouns ;
 As seith the philisophre callid Socratees,
 Among alle vertues makith a discripcioun,
 He moost comendith this vertu callid pees.

Pees is a vertu pacient and trefable,
 Set in quyet discoord of neihboures,
 Froward cheerys, pees makith amiable,
 Of thorny roseers pees gadrith out the floures,
 Makith the swerd to ruste of conqueroures,
 Provided by poeetys nat slouh nor rekleees,
 And mediacioun of wise enbassitoures,
 The spere maad blont, brouht in love and pees.

And who that list plenté of pees possede,
 Live in quyete fro sclandre and diffame,
 Our Lord Jhesus he muste love and drede,
 Which shal preserve hym fro worldly trouble and shame.

This woord Jhesus in Nazareth took his name,
 Brouht by an angil, which put hym silf in prees,
 Whan Gabriel cam, the gospeleer seith the same,
 Brouht gladdest tydynges that evir was of pees.

And in rejoisshyng of this glad tydyng,
 Angelis song devoutly in the ayr
Gloria in excelsis, at comyng of this kyng;
 And thre kynges havyng ther repayr,
 With a sterre that shoon so briht and fayr,
 Brouht hem to Bedleem, a place that they chees,
 Of ther viage brouht out of despayr,
 Where poorly loggyd they fond the kyng of pees.

Briht was the sterre ovir the dongoun moost,
 Wher the hevenly queen lay poorly in jesyne,
 With the seven douhtren of the Hooly Goost
 On hire awaytyng, moodir and virgine;
 Tofore whos face lowly they did enclyne,
 Song laudes Deo pastores doutlees,
 Ffyl doun to ground, bowyd bak and chyne,
 And of ther song the refreit was of pees.

Of thes seven douhtren of the Hooly Goost,
Caritas in love brente briht as levee,
 And for bicause that she lovyd moost,
 Hir contemplacioun rauht up to the hevene.
 The next sustir in ordre, as I can nevene,
 Was Pacience, which put hir silf in prees,
 And moost was besy, of alle the sustryn sevene,
 Folk at discoord to settyn hem in pees.

Gaudium in spiritu to rejoisshe every wrong,
 Ffor Cristes comyng, among hir sustrys alle,
 With a glad spirit this was hir newe song,
Gaudete in Domino, born in an oxis stalle;
 A new myracle in Bedleem is now falle,
 Kyng Davidis heir, mong prophetis perlees,
 Shal at Jerusalem, in that royal halle,
 As lord of lordys, callyd sovereyn lord of pees.

In thes seven sustryn was no divisioun;
 Cheef of ther consayl was Humilitas;
 Content with litel was Discrecioun;
 Moost meke of alle was Leta-paupertas;
 Alle of accord, cause that Benignitas
 Set governaunce that noon was rekless.
 Of cardinal vertues Perfecta-societas,
 What evir they wrouhte, concludid upon pees.

Thes sustryn alle, pacient and pesible,
 Lyk ther princesse moost fayr, moost gracious,
 Callyd Maria, as ferre as was possible,
 Ffulfilled with vertues she was moos plentevous,
 Queen of hevene, lay in a symple hous,
 A poore stable, mong beestys rewleless,
 An oxe, an asse, no courseers costious,
 In a streiht rakke lay ther the kyng of pees.

At Cristes birthe, as I reherse can,
 This pees cam in, almoost at merk mydnyht,
 Tyme of thempyre of Octovian,
 Whan Cibile cast hir look upriht
 Toward the Orient, and sauh an auhteer briht, Callyd ara cæli, of beuté peerlees;
 Theron an empresse moost fayr of face and siht,
 A child in hir armys callyd cheef lord of pees.

The pees of grace long while did endure,
 Tyme that iij. kynges wer conveyd with the sterre,
 Tyl Herodes of froward aventure
 Geyn Jhesus by malys gan a werre,
 Sent his knyhtes both nyh and ferre,
 Slouh innocentys of malys giltyes,
 In Bedleem boundys this tyraunt list so erre
 Ageyn the prynce callyd soverayn lord of pees.

This Herodis tiraunt ful of pryde,
 In his malys surquedous and cruel,
 Thoruh alle the citees that stood there besyde
 Slouh alle the childre, geyn Crist he was so fel.
 Of compassioun moost pitously Rachel Wepte, whan she sauh the knyhtes mercilees
 Slouh so hir childre born in Israel,
 Ffor his sake, sovereyn lord of pees.

Ther be figures dolorous of pité,
 Of fals tyrauntes vengable to do wraak ;
 Caym slouh Abel for his great equité ;
 Attwen Ismael was stryff and Isaak ;
 Esaw wolde have founde a laak,
 Cause that Jacob was put out of prees ;
 By Rebecca a while set abaak,
 Atwen the brethre tyl ther wer maad a pees.

The Apocalips remembryd of seyn Johan,
 In his avisiouns the ewangelist took heede,
 With a sharp swerd he sauh ridyng oon,
 Ffers and proudly, upon a poleyn steede,
 Of colour reed, his journé for to speede,
 By his array vengable and reklee ;
 Whos power was bothe in lengthe and breede,
 To make werre, and distroye pees.

His swerd wex bloody in the mortal werre
 Attween Grekys and them of Troye toun,
 Gan spreede abroad bothe nyh and ferre,
 Thebes afor brought to destruccioun ;
 Kyng Alisaundre put Darye down
 In Perce and Meede, the crowne whan he chees ;
 Vowes of the Pecok the Ffrenssh makith mencion, Pryde of the werryys, moost contrary unto pees.

Othir werryys that were of latter age,
 Afftir Jerusaleem and gret Babiloon, Werryys attween Roome and Cartage,
 Of thre Scipiouns, moost sovereyn of renoun ;
 Rekne Hanybal, the proude champion,
 Brak Rome wallys, furious and rekles,
 At the laste, stranglyd with poisoun,
 Of marcial ire koude lyve nevyr in pees.

At werryys dreedful vertuous pees is good ;
 Striff is hatful, pees douhtir of plesaunce.
 In Charlys tyme ther was shad gret blood ;
 God sende us pees twen Ynglond and Ffraunce !
 Werre causith povert, pees causith habundaunce,
 And attween bothen, for ther moor encrees,
 Withoute feynyng, fraude, or varyaunce,
 Twen al cristene Crist Jhesu send us pees.

The ffifte Herry, preevyd a good knyht
 By his prowesse and noble chivalrye,
 Sparyd nat to pursue his riht,
 His title of Ffraunce and of Normandye,
 Deyed in his conquest, and we shal alle dye.
 God graunt us alle, now afftir his discees,
 To sende us grace, attween ech partye,
 By love and charyté to live in parfihit pees.

Criste cam with pees at his nativité,
 Pees songe of angelis for gladnesse in Bedleem;
 And of his mercy to make us alle fre,
 He suffryd deth at Jerusaleem.
 The day wex dirk, the sonne lost his beam;
 The theef to paradyse by mercy gan in prees;
 Gladdest kalendis to every cristen reem,
 Ffor us to come to evirlastyng pees.

Explicit quod Lydgate.

ON THE TRUCE OF 1444.¹

Sum man goth stille of wysdam and resoun
 Afor provided can kepe weel scilence;
 Eful ofte it noyeth, be recoord of Catoun,
 Large language concludyng off no sentence;
 Speche is but fooly and sugryd elloquence
 Medlyd with language wheer men have noght to don;
 An old proverbe groundid on sapience,
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe schoon.

To thynke mochyl, and seyn but smal,
 Yiff thow art feerffulle to ottre thy language,
 It is no wisdam a man to seyn out al;
 Sum bird can synge merily in his cage.
 The stare wyl chatre and speke of long usage,
 Though in his speche ther be no greet resoun;
 Kepe ay thy tounge fro surfeet and outrage;
 Alle go we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

¹ This poem, also by Lydgate, appears to have been occasioned by the truce concluded by the earl of Suffolk in 1444, and the treaty of marriage between Henry VI. and Margaret of Anjou. It is printed, like the preceding, from MS. Harl. No. 2255, fol. 131, v°.

Unavised speke no thyng toforn,
 Nor of thy tounge be nat rekkelees,
 Uttre nevir no darnel with good corn,
 Begyn no trouble whan men trete of pees;
 Scilence is good, and in every prees,
 Which of debate yevith noon occasyoun;
 Pacience preysed of prudent Socratees;
 Alle go we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Comoun astrologeer, as folk expert weel knowe,
 To kepe the howrys and tydis of the nyght,
 Sumtyme hih and sumtyme he syngith lowe;
 Dam Pertelot sit with hire brood down right;
 The fox comyth neer withoute candellyght
 To trete of pees, menyng no tresoun,
 To avoyde as gile and ffraude he hath behight,
 Alle go we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Undir fals pees ther may be covert ffraude;
 Good cheer outward, with face of innocence;
 Ffeyned fflaterye, with language of greet laude;
 But what is wers than shynyng apparence,
 Whan it is prevyd ffals in existence?
 Al is dul shadwe whan Phebus is down goon,
 Berkyng behynde, ffawnyng in presence;
 Alle go we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

The royalle egle, with his ffetherys dunne,
 Of nature so hih takith his flyght,
 No bakke of kynde may looke ageyn the sunne,
 Of ffowardnesse yit wyl he fflen be nyght
 And quenche laumpys, though they brenne bright.
 Thynges contrarye may nevir accorde in oon;
 A fowle gloowerm in dirknese shewith a lyght;
 Alle go we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

The wourld is tournyd almoost up-so-down,
 Undir prynces ther dar noon officeer,
 Peyne of his lyff, do noon extorcoun;
 Ffreerys dar nat fflatere, nor no pardowneer,
 Where evir he walke al the longe yeer,
 Awtentyk his seelys everychoon,
 Up peyne of cursyng, I dar remembre heer,
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon,

Alle estatys of good condicioun
 Wille noon of them offende his conscience.
 Bysshoppis, prelatys, of oon affeccioun
 Kepe ther chargys of entieer dilligence;
 Avaunsyd persownys holde residence
 Among ther parysshens, make a departysoun
 Of ther tresours to folk in indigence;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

I saugh a kevelle, corpulent of stature,
 Lyk a materas redlyd was his coote,
 And theron was sowyd this scripture,
 A good be stille is weel wourth a groote.
 It costith nat mekyl to behoote,
 And paye ryght nought whan the feyre is doon.
 Sutch labourerys synge may be roote,
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Atwen a shipe with a large seyl
 And a cokboot that goth in Tempse lowe,
 The toon hath oorys, to his greet awayl,
 To spede his passage whan the wynd doth blowe;
 A blynd maryneer, that doth no sterre knowe,
 His loodmannage to conveye down;
 A fressh comparisoun, a goshawk and a crowe;
 Alle go we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

The royalle egle, with his fetherys dunne,
 Whoos eyen been so cleer and so bryght
 Off nature, he perce may the sunne;
 The owgly bakke wyl gladly fleen be nyght
 Dirck cressetys and laumpys that been lyght;
 The egle aloffte, the snayl goth lowe down,
 Darythe in his shelle, yit may he se no sight;
 Alle go we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

The pecok hath ffetherys bryght and shene;
 The cormeraunt wyl daryn in the lake;
 Popyngayes froo Paradys comyn al grene;
 Nyghtynggales al nyght syngen and wake,
 For longe absence and wantyng of his make;
 Withoute avys make no comparysoun
 Atween a laumperey and a shynyng snake;
 Alle go we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Where is also a thyng incomparable,
 By cleer repoort, in al the wourld thorough right;
 The ryche preferryd, the poore is ay cowpable,
 In ony quarelle gold hath ay moost myght.
 Evir in dirknesse the owle takith his flight;
 It were a straunge unkouth devisyoun,
 Tersites wrecchyd, Ector moost wourthy knyght;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Is noon so proude, pompous in dignyté,
 As he that is so sodeynly preferryd
 To hih estaat, and out of poverté;
Draco volans on nyght his tayl is sterryd;
Stellæ erraticæ nat ffix, for they been erryd;
 Stable in the eyr is noon inpressioun;
 This wourld wer stable, yif it were nat werryd;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Among estatys whoo hath moost quiete ?
 Hih lordshippes be vexid with bataylle ;
 Tylthe of ploughmen ther labour wyl nat lete ;
 Geyn Phebus uprist syngen wyl the quaylle ;
 The ameraus larke of nature wyl not faylle
 Ageyn Aurora synge with hire mery sown ;
 No laboureer wyl nat for his travaylle ;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Foo unto hevys and enemy is the drane ;
 Men with a tabour may lyghtly cacche an hare ;
 Bosard with botirflyes makith beytis for a crane ;
 Brechelees beerys be betyn on the bare ;
 Houndys for favour wyl nat spare
 To pynche his pylche with greet noyse and soun ;
 Clepith he merye that slombryth with greet care ;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

I sauh a krevys, with his klawes longe,
 Pursewe a snayl, poore and impotent ;
 Hows of this snayl, the wallys wer nat stronge,
 A slender shelle, the sydes al torent.
 Whoo hath no goold, his tresour soone spent ;
 The snaylis castel but a sklendir coote ;
 Whoo seith trouthe, offte he shalle be shent ;
 A good be stille is offte weel wourth a groote.

Whoo hath noon hors on a staff may ryde ;
 Who hath no bed, may slepyn in his hood ;
 Whoo hath no dyneer, at leyser must abyde,
 To staunche his hungir abyde upon his ffood.
 A beggers appetight is alwey ffressh and good,
 With voyde walet, whan al his stuff is doon,
 Ffor fawte of vitaylle may knele afore the skood ;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

The ryche man sit stuffyd at his stable ;
 The poore man stant hungry at the gate,
 Of remossaylles he wolde be partable ;
 The awmencer seyth he cam to late.
 Off poore men doolys is no sekir date,
 Smal or ryght nought whan the feeste is doon.
 He may weel grucche and with his tounge prate ;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

A good be stille is weel wourth a groote ;
 Large language causith repentaunce ;
 The kevel wroot in his rydlyd coote,
 Out with al this marke in your remembraunce.
 Whoo cast his journé in Yngelond or in Ffraunce,
 With gallyd hakeneyes, whan men have moost to doon,
 A ffool presumptuous, to cacche hym acqueyntaunce ;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Whoo that is hungry, and hath no thyng but boonys
 To staunche his apetyght, is a froward foode ;
 Among an hundryd oon chose out for the noonys
 To dygestioun repastys be nat goode.
 To chese suych vitaylles ther braynes wer to woode.
 That lyoun is gredy that stranglith geos or capoun ;
 Fox and ffulmard, togidre whan they stooode,
 Sang, be stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

Here al thyng and kepe thy pacience ;
 Take no quarelle, thynk mekyl and sey nought ;
 A good be stille, with discreet scilence
 For a good grote may not wel be bought.
 Keep cloos thy tounge, men sey that free is thought,
 A thyng seid oonys, outhir late or soon,
 Tyl it be loost, stoole thyng is nat sought ;
 Alle goo we stille, the cok hath lowe shoon.

¹ The various events alluded to in these curious verses, such as the deaths of the dukes of Gloucester and Exeter and of cardinal Beaufort, which occurred in 1447, and especially the loss of Rouen, which was surrendered to the French in that year, seem to fix their composition to the year following, or at latest to 1449. They are preserved in the Cotton. Rolls, ii. 23, in the British Museum. This was one of the songs which paved the way for the popularity of the house of York.

² John Plantagenet, duke of Bedford, third son of king Henry IV., and regent of France, had died in 1435.

³ Humphrey Plantagenet, duke of Gloucester, fourth son of Henry IV., died under arrest at Bury St. Edmunds in 1446, and is believed to have been murdered.

⁴ John Holland, duke of Exeter, who died on the 5th of August 1446.

⁵ Rouen was surrendered to the French in 1447.

⁶ Edmund Beaufort, earl of Somerset, under which title he was made regent of France on the recall of the duke of York in 1445, and created duke of Somerset on the 31st of March 1448. After the loss of Rouen and Caen, he was recalled from his command in France, and had to encounter great unpopularity, both for his mismanagement in France, and because he was one of the court favourites.

⁷ Cardinal Beaufort died on the 11th of April 1447.

¹ John de Mowbray, duke of Norfolk. The reference is probably to the duke who died in 1432, and who had distinguished himself in the French wars under Henry V.

² The great warrior John Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury, who had been recalled from active service in France.

³ William Neville lord Fauconberg, one of the distinguished heroes of the French wars.

⁴ Robert lord Willoughby, another of the heroes of the French wars.

⁵ Richard Neville, created earl of Warwick on the 4th of May 1442. He espoused the party of the duke of York, and was taken and beheaded at the battle of Wakefield. He was the father of the king-maker.

⁶ Humphrey de Stafford, created duke of Buckingham on the 14th of September 1444. He was killed in the battle of Northampton, in 1460.

⁷ Thomas Daniel, "armiger," or esquier, was one of the unpopular courtiers, who appears in this same Cottonian Roll, ii. 23, as one of those indicted at Rochester on the feast of the Assumption of the Virgin, 29th Hen. VI. (August 15, 1451).

² William Fitz-Alan, earl of Arundel.

³ Henry lord Bouchier, whose arms were argent, a cross engrailed gules, between four water-bougets, sable. The wine-bottle may perhaps refer to James Butler, created earl of Wiltshire in 1449.

⁴ Thomas Courtenay, earl of Devon, one of the heroes of the French wars, and a staunch supporter of the Lancastrian cause.

⁵ The duke of York had at this time retired to his government in Ireland.

ON THE ARREST OF THE DUKE OF SUFFOLK.¹

Now is the Fox² drevin to hole ; hoo to hym, hoo !
hoo !

Now ye han founde parfite, love welle your game ;
For and ye renne countre thenne be ye to blame.
Sum of yow holdith with the Fox, and rennythe hare ;
But he that tiede Talbot oure doge, evylle mot he fare !
Ffor now we mys the black doge withe the wide mouthe ;
Ffor he wolde have ronnen welle at the Fox of the southe.

And alle gooth bacwarde, and Donne is in the myre ;
As they han deservede, so pay they ther hire.
Now is tyme of Lent, the Fox is in the Towre ;
Therefore sende hym Salesbury to be his confessoure.³
Many mo ther bene, and we kowde hem knowe ;
But wonne most begynne the daunce, and alle come arowe.

Loke that your hunte blowe welle thy chase ;
But he do welle is part, I beshrew is face !
This Fox at Bury slowe oure grete gandere ;⁴
Therefore at Tyborne mony monne one hym wondere.
Jack Napys, with his clogge,
Hath tiede Talbot oure gentille dogge.

² The duke of Suffolk, who was accused, among other crimes, of having promoted the murder of the duke of Gloucester.

³ Richard Neville, earl of Salisbury, was one of the great political opponents of the duke of Suffolk.

⁴ The duke of Gloucester, who was accused and arrested when attending the parliament held at Bury St. Edmunds in 1446.

Wherfore Beamownt,¹ that gentille rache,
 Hath brought Jack Napis in an eville cache.
 Be ware, al menne, of that blame,
 And namly ye of grete fame,
 Spiritualle and temperalle, be ware of this,
 Or els hit wille not be welle, iwis.
 Gave save the kynge, and God forbede
 That he suche apes any mo fede.
 And of the perille that may befall
 Be ware, dukes, erles, and barons alle.

ON BISHOP BOOTHE.²

Boothe, be ware, bisshoppe³ thoughe thou be,
 Sithe that Symoun hym selff set the in thy sete, Petur his pagent pleyed not with the;
Caro and Sanguis did pryvely plete;
 Thy goode and thy catelle made the to mete
 With the churche of Chester, whiche crieth, alas!
 That to suche a mafflarde marryede she was.

¹ John lord Beaumont, lord constable of England, who in that capacity arrested the duke of Suffolk.

² From the Cotton. Rolls, ii. 23. It was evidently written in the middle of the excitement against the duke of Suffolk.

³ William Boothe, made bishop of Coventry and Lichfield in 1447, was promoted to the archbishopric of York in 1453. This see was, during several centuries after the Norman conquest, called popularly the bishopric of Chester.

Prese not to practise on the priveté
 Of princes powere, but pluk at the ploughe ;
 Clayme thou a Carter crafty to be ;
 Medille the no ferthere, for that is ynoughe.
 Thow hast getyne gret goode, thou wost welles how.
 By symoni and usure bilde is thy bothe ;
 Alle the worlde wote welles this sawys be sothe.

The psalmus of the sawter, or Salamonis boke, Austyne or Ambrose, or othere tetryes ther are,
 But litelle on the lessons lust the to loke.
 Be not to bolde, but be thou wel ware.
 The wit of this worlde wantonly ware,
 And likenyde to lewdenes lorne in my lore ;
 Shame sewith sone, whenne syn gooth byfore.

Sum servyne silver, and sorow they doone seche ;
 Synne is ther soveraigne, se what I say.
 Loke on this lessoun, and lerne of a leche,
 Thy soule for to save with miserere mei.
 The printe of a palsy wisith the thy way,
 And shewith by thy semblant to sey the ther sothe,
 That tyme is to course hens, and breke up the bothe.

Cast in thy conciens clerkly to knowe,
 Publique and privathe is alle one ;
 Tullius hit tellith fulle trewly y trowe,
 The regentes of Rome mony day gone,
 In honours and havour lile hem allone,
 And of the wide worlde worthiest they were,
 To the commyne thyng in charité they kere.

But whenne they begane godes to encrese,
 To prevat persons sorow and shame,
 Dishonoure, dispite, rebuke dide in prese,
 With alle maner myscheff disserityng ther fame ;
 Lost alle ther lose of ther nobille name,
 Disperpiled theyme in warde, and put theyme to declyne ;
 Remembre now how Rome felle to a ruyne.

Justice ne was egaly execute,
 Fredome was forfarene for lak of liberté,
 Right was repraysede and founde for no repute,
 They were punysshede and tokyne in gré.
 Rigour of lawe hit wolle no better be;
 Dethe thoghe hit were, they myzt no better escape,
 But the grete and the goldede they made but a jape,

And lepe over lawe at ther owne lust;
 Ffavour and favelle, foulle faille they ferys,
 Broghte forthe avarice fast by the fiste.

* * * * *

These were the rasours and the sharpe sheres,
 These were the same that Rome overthrewe;
 Wittenes of writyng alle this is trewe.

These made ther enmyes thenne to summyse,
 And put fro ther powere with shenshippe and shame;
 Cronicols thise causis craftly canne devise,
 And tellene how trechery brought in the blame.
 Hit is not in Englonde now the selff same;
 Discusse it with diligens, and telle iff hit be,
 This pagent is pringnant, sir Pilat, pardé.

And ye in youre olde age put in pres,
 And pecus the parlious youre parfettes to play,
 And pray for the party to make his pees,
 That alle the worlde crieth oute on, sotly to say.
 The voyse of the pepille is clepede vox Dei;
 It is agayns grace and a gret griff
 To maynetayne a mater of suche myscheffe.

Vox oppressorum one the prince playnyth,
 And one the priste eke, be warre yow off wreche;
 Juggement and justice tho that theym waynyth,
 Serche out and se welle, sorow they seche.
 The juge that is unjuste is a shrewede leche;
 Tent to the tale of Treviliane,
 And ffynde by his falsed what worshippe he wan.

Be ware of this warnyng, and wayte welle aboute,
 I counselle the corse not, ne blame not the bille,

* * * * *

Yt is myche lesse harme to bylle thanne to kyll.
 Be no more blynde, but weynyth youre wille,
 To set yow in sewrté holde up youre honde,
 God save the kyng, his lawe, and his londe.

Men seyne that youre secte is opynly knowyne and asspiede,

Concludede in conciens wonne of the tweyne,
 That ye be ychone with tresoun aliéde,
 Or els hit is lucre that maketh you to leyne.
 Pité for to here the people complayne,
 And riken up the ragmanne of the hole rowte,
 That servyth silvyre and levyth the law oute.

Se alle the set that for the swayne sewe,
 Whether mony or mede make yow to mewe,
 Try out the trouthe, myght he be trewe,
 That covetise hath causede this gret myscheff.
 By rapyne of richese put this in prefe;
 Muse one this mater, and be no more blynde;
 Be faitheffulle and feynte not fawtus to fynde.

God kepe oure kyng ay, and gide hym by grace,
 Save hym fro Southefolkes, and frome his foois alle;
 The Pole is so parlyus men for to passe,
 That fewe can ascape hit of the banck rialle.
 But set under suger he shewithe hem galle;
 Witnes of Humfrey, Henry, and Johan,¹
 Whiche late were one lyve, and now be they goon.

And mony other that nedith not to telle,
 Sum bene ago, and summe abidene here;
 Hit is a shrewde pole, pounce, or a welle,

¹ Humphrey Plantagenet, duke of Gloucestre; Henry Beaufort, cardinal of Winchester; and John duke of Bedford.

That drownythe the dowghty, and bryngethe hem abeere.

And alle is for the lordane lovithe no pere.
Practyse his preff of alle that I sey,
God kepe oure kyng, and hym to convey.

Bridelle yow, bysshoppe, and be not to bolde,
And biddeth yowre beawperes se to the same;
Cast away covetyse now be ye bolde,
This is alle earnest that ye calle game.
The beelesire ye be, the more is youre blame.
Trowthe tellithe the tale, and wille it not hide;
Your laboure for lucre is playnly aspiede.
God, for his mercy alle this reme gyde.

A WARNING TO KING HENRY.¹

Ye that have the kyng to demene,
And ffrauncheses gif theyme ageyne,
Or els I rede ye fle;
Ffor ye have made the kyng so pore,
That now he beggeth fro dore to dore;
Alas, hit shuld so be.

Tome of Say² and Danielle bothe,
To begyn be not to lothe;
Then shalle ye have no shame.
Who wille not, he shalle not chese,
And his life he shalle lese,
No resoun wille us blame.

² James Fienes, lord Saye and Sele, lord treasurer, was one of the unpopular statesmen of the day, and having been, as a matter of policy, committed to the Tower, he was dragged thence by the mob in Jack Cade's rebellion, and was beheaded by them on the 4th of July 1451. This song was written apparently before this nobleman was thrown into the Tower.

Trowthe and pore men ben appressede,
And myscheff is nothyng redresseded;

The kyng knowith not alle.

Thorowout alle Englonde,
On tho that holdene the fals bonde
Vengeaunce wille cry and calle.

The traytours wene they bene so sly,
That no mane can hem aspy;

We cane do theme no griffe.

We swere by hym that hairwede helle
They shalle no lenger in eresy dwelle,
Ne in ther fals beleve.

So pore a kyng was never seene,
Nor richere lordes alle bydene;

The communes may no more.

The lorde Say biddeth holde hem downe,
That worthy dastarde of renowne,
He techithe a fals loore.

Suffolk Normandy hath swolde,

To gete hyt agayne he is bolde,

How acordeth these to in one;

And he wenythe, withouten drede,

To make the kyng to avowe his dede,
And calle hit no tresoun.

We trow the kyng be to leere,

To selle bothe menne and lond in feere;

Hit is agayne resoun.

But yef the commyns of Englonde

Helpe the kynge in his fonde,

Suffolk wolle bere the crowne.

Be ware, kynge Henré, how thou doos;

Let no lenger thy traitours go loos;

They wille never be trewe.

The traytours are sworne alle togedere

To holde fast as they were brether;

Let hem drynk as they hanne brewe.

The chaunselere that last was hath staffes take,
 Blanke charters, to done us wrake,

No nombre of them, hit is ferde.
 He wolle not suffre the clerkes preche;
 Trowthe in no wise he wille not teche;
 He is the devels sheparde.

This bille is trewe; who wille say nay,
 In Smythfelde synge he a day,
 And the helpe of the rode;
 That traitours shalle provide;
 More resoun canne not be mevide;
 Ther shalle hit be made goode.
 O rex, si rex es, rege te, vel eris sine re rex;
 Nomen habes sine re, nisi te recte regas.

VERSES AGAINST THE DUKE OF SUFFOLK.¹

Ffor feer or for favour of ony fals mane,
 Loose not the love of alle the commynalté;
 Be ware and sey, by seint Juliane,
 Duke, jwge, baroun, archebisshope and he be,
 He wolle repent it within this monthes thre.
 Let ffolke aćcused excuse theym selff, and they cane;
 Reseyve no goode, let soche bribry be;
 Support not theyme this wo bygane,
 And let theym suche clothis as they spane,
 And take from theym ther wages and ther fee,
 or, by God and seint Anne!
 Som must go hens, hit may none othere weys be,
 And els is lost alle this lond and we;
 Hong up suche menne to oure soverayne lorde,
 That ever counselde hym with fals men to be acorde.
 Anno milleno Domini centumque quaterno
 L. simplex pleno caveat omnis homo.

ON THE DEATH OF THE DUKE OF SUFFOLK.¹

May 3, 1450.

In the monethe of May, when gresse groweth grene,
 Flagrant in her floures, with swete savour,
 Jac Napes wolde one the see a maryner to ben,
 With his cloge and his cheyn, to seke more tresour.
 Suyche a payn prikkede hym, he asked a confessour.
 Nicolas² said, "I am redi thi confessour to be ;"
 He was holden so that he ne passede that hour.
 For Jac Napes soule Placebo and Dirige.

Who shalle execute his exequies with a solempnité?
 Bisshopes and lordes, as grete reson is ;
 Monkes, chanons, prestes, and other clergie,
 Pray for this dukes soule that it might come to blis ;
 And let never suyche another come after this ;
 His interfectours blessed might thei be,
 And graunte them for ther dede to regne with angelis ;
 And for Jac Nape soule Placebo and Dirige.

"Placebo," begynneth the bisshop of Herforde.³

⁴ Boothe, bishop of Coventry and Litchfield. See the note, p. 225.

⁵ Richard Beauchamp was elected bishop of Salisbury in 1450.

⁶ Reginald, abbot of St. Peter's in Gloucester ; he was one of the unpopular courtiers indicted at Rochester in 1451, according to the Cottonian Roll.

"Dominus custodit," saith the abbot of Rouchestre.

"Levavi oculos," saith frere Stanbury, "volavi."

"Si iniquitates," saith the bisshop of Worcetre;¹

"For Jac Nape soule de profundis clamavi."

"Opera manuum tuarum," seith the cardynal wisely,² That brought forthe confitebor, for alle this Napes reson.

"Audivi vocem," songe Allemightty God on hye;
And therfore syng we "Magnificat anima mea
"Dominum."

Unto this dirige most we gon and come
This pascalle tyme, to say veryli
Thre psalmes and thre lessouns, that alle is and somme,
For Jac Nape soule, Placebo and Dirige.

Executors of this office Dirige for to synge,

Shalle begyn the bisshop of synt Asse;³

² John Kemp, archbishop of York, had been made a cardinal at the close of the year 1439.

³ Thomas, bishop of St. Asaph, a prelate who appears to have gained no degree of celebrity.

⁴ Walter Liard (in the ordinary lists of bishops he is called Hart and Lyhart) was bishop of Norwich from 1445 to 1472. This name also occurs in the list of unpopular courtiers indicted at Rochester.

"Requiem æternam graunte them alle to come to."

Therto a pater-noster saith the bisshop of synt Davy¹

For thes soules that wise were and mighty,

Suffolk, Moleyns, and Roos, thes thre;²

And in especial for Jac Napes, that ever was wyly,
For his soule Placebo and Dirige.

Rise up, Say, rede parce in Domine,

"Nihil enim sunt dies mei," thou shalt synge.

The bisshop of Carlyle³ sing "Credo" ful sore.

To suyche fals traitours come foule endynge!

The baron of Dudley with grete mornynge, Redethe, "Tædet animam meam vitæ meæ."

Who but Danyel qui Lasarum shal syng?

For Jac Nape soule Placebo and Dirige,

John Say⁴ redethe, "Manus tuæ fecerunt me."

"Libera me," syngethe Trevilian, "warre the rere,

"That thei do no more so, requiescant in pace."

Thus prayes alle Englund ferre and nerre.

Where is Somerset? whi aperes he not here,

To synge "Dies iræ et miseriæ?"

God graunte Englund alle in fere

For thes traitours to syng Placebo and Dirige.

Meny mo ther be behynde, the sothe for to telle,

That shal messes oppon thes do synge.

I pray som man do ryng the belle,

That these forsaiden may come to the sacrynge;

And that in brief tyme, without more tarienge,

That this messe may be ended in suyche degré;

And that alle Englund joyfulle may synge

The commendacioun with Placebo and Dirige.

¹ John Delamere was consecrated bishop of St. David's in 1417.

² Lord Hungerford had at this time succeeded, by right of his wife, to the title of lord Molines. He was a partizan of the house of Lancaster. Thomas Lord Ros was also a stanch partizan of the party of Henry VI.

³ Nicholas Close.

⁴ In the Rochester list, John Say is described as "esquire, of London."

ON THE CORRUPTIONS OF THE TIMES.¹

Ffullyllyd ys the profe[s]y for ay

 Ffor now the bysom ledys the blynde.

Now gloserys fulle gayly they go;
 Pore men be perus of this land;
 Sertes sum tyme hyt was not so,
 But sekyr alle this ys synnes sonde.
 Now maynte[ne]rys be made justys,
 And lewde men rewle the lawe of kynde;
 Nobulle men be holdyn wyse,
 Ffor now the bysom ledys the blynde.

Truthe is set at lytyl prys;
 Worschyp fro us longe hath be slawe;
 Robberys now rewle ryȝtwysenesse,
 And wynnerys with her sothe sawe;
 Synne sothfastnesse has slawe;
 Myrth ys now out of mannys mynde;
 The drede of God ys al todrawe;
 Ffor now the bysom ledys the b[l]ynde.

¹ From MS. Harl. 5396, fol. 295, r^o. Unfortunately two lines are lost by the close cutting of the bottom of the leaf. An entry on the last page of the manuscript, in the same handwriting as this poem, gives the date of St. Bartholomew's day, in the thirty-fourth year of the reign of Henry VI., i.e., August 24, 1456.

Now brocage ys made offycerys ;
 And baratur ys made bayly ;
 Knyztus be made custemerys,

* * * *

Flatererys be made kyngus perys ;
 Lordys be led alle out of kynde ;
 Pore men ben knyztus ferys ;
 Ffor now the bysom ledys the blynde.

The constery ys combryd with coveytyse,
 Ffor trouth his sonkyn undur the grounde ;
 W[ith] offycyal nor den no favour ther ys,
 But if sir symony shewe them sylver rounde.
 Ther among sp[irit]ualté it ys founde,
 Ffor peté ys clene out of ther mynde.
 Lord, whan thy wylle is, al ys confounde ;
 Ffor now the bysom ledys the blynde.

He ys lovyd that wele can lye ;
 And thevys tru men honge ;
 To God I rede that we cry,
 That this lyfe last not longe.
 This werld is turnyd up-so-doune among ;
 For frerys ar confessourys, ageyn a kynde,
 To the chefe ladyes of this londe ;
 Therfor the bysom ledys the blynde.

Lordys the lawe they lere,

* * * *

Japerys syt lordys ful nere ;
 Now hath the devylle alle hys devys ;
 Now growyth the gret flour-de-lys ;
 Wymmonis wyttes are fulle of wynd ;
 Now ledres ladin the leward at her debres ;
 For caus the bysom ledys [the] blynde.

Now prelates don pardon selle,
And holy chyrche ys chaffare,
Holynes comyth out of helle,
Ffor absoluciouns waxyn ware.
Gabberys glosen eny whare,
And gode feyth comys alle byhynde;
Ho shalle be levyd the sothe wylle spare?
Ffor now the bysom ledys the blynde.

The grete wylle the sothe spare,
The comonys love not the grete;
Therfor every man may care,
Lest the wade growe over the whete.
Take hede how synne hath chastysyd Frauns,
Whan he was in hys fayrest kynde;
How that Flaundrys hath myschannys;
Ffor cause the bysom ledyth the blynde.

Therfor every lord odor avauns,
And styfly stond yn ych a stoure;
Among ȝou make no dystaunce,
But, lordys, buskys ȝou out of boure.
Ffor to hold up this londus honour,
With strenkyth our enmys for to bynde,
That we may wynne the hevynty tour;
Ffor here the bysom ledys the blynde.

ON THE CORRUPTIONS OF THE TIMES.¹*How myschaunce regnythe in Ingeland.*

Now God, that syttyst an hyghe in trone,
 Help thy peple in here greet nede,
 That trowthe and resoun regne may sone,
 For thanne schal they leve owt of drede.
 In that wyse conscience schal hem lede,
 Hem to brynge onto good governaunce;
 That yt may sone be doon in dede;
 Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

And men wolde, and take good hede,
 This lond ys now full of inyquyté;
 And al that causyth the mayde Mede,
 The wyche feer bannyd ys from felycyté.
 There that sche regnyth ther ys no prosperyté,
 To holy cherche sche doth greet grevaunce;
 For of here apepyrd ys the hyghe dygnyté,
 Of al oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Mede makyth fele men for to weepe,
 Wyth here frendys sche wol abyde,
 The wyche cunne here goodys wysely kepe,
 Be manye false weyes here wyttys gyde.
 Untrowthe regnyth in many a syde,
 For agayn here ys a greet distaunce,
 That knowen ys ful feer and wyde;
 Of al oure synnys, Good, make a delyveraunce.

¹ From a MS. in the University Library, Cambridge, ff. 1. 6, fol. 134, v^o, in a handwriting of the reign of Henry VI.

Meed and falseheed associed are ;
Trowthe bannyd ys, the blynde may not se ;
Manye a man they make fulle bare,
A strange compleynt ther ys of every degré.
The way ys now past of tranquyllyté,
The wyche causyth a full greet varyaunce ;
Amange the comunys ther ys no game nor gle ;
Of al oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

And men myghte wel the hyghe wey fynde
Of trowthe and resoune, and where they dwelle ;
Meede wyth here help stand scholde behynde,
In dyspyte of alle the develys of helle.
Untrowthe wyt many oon scholde no more melle ;
Falsehed and sche byn bothe of oon substaunce,
Alle be they not worth an oyster-schelle ;
Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Murdre medelythe ful ofte, as men say ;
Usure and rapyne steffy dothe stande,
Here abydyng ys wythe her that goon ful gay ;
For whanne they wele they have hem in hande.
And thus they regne throughe thys lande ;
Ful manye they brynge to myschaunce.
Wyse men, beholden, be wayr al afore hande ;
Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Idylnesse and thefte 3yt have they no care,
Thoughe that thys worlde thus endure ever more ;
Oftyn tymes here wyde purse is full bare,
And other whyles here schoon be al totore ;
The mete that thei ete ys alle forlore ;
On the galwys they scholde anhaunse ;
They greve the comunys, and that ryghte sore ;
Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Slowthe and neclygence ful sore empeche
 Justise, that scholde regne contenually;
 Coveytyse causyth that, for he dothe teche
 Of all astatys seme fulle besyly.
 The prosperité of thys land thus they gy
 Forthewyth togedere al to the daunce;
 A wronge way to werke alle they be redy;
 Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Wygth ys blak, as many men seye,
 And blak ys wyght, but summe men sey nay;
 Auctoryteys for hem they toleye;
 Large conscience causyth they croked way.
 In thys reame they make a foul aray.
 Whanne the dyse renne, ther lakkythe a chaunce;
 Clene conscien bakward goth alway;
 Of al oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Myscheef mengid ys, and that in every syde;
 Dyscord medelythe ful fast amonge;
 The gatis of glaterye standen up wyde,
 Hem semythe that al ys ryghte and no wronge.
 Thus endurid they have al to longe;
 Crosse and pyle standen in balaunce;
 Trowthe and resoun be no thyng stronge;
 Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Rychesse renewyd causithe the perdition
 Of trowthe, that scholde stande in prosperyté;
 Between here and hope ys mayd a devisioun,
 And that ys al for lak of charyté;
 Wherefore ther regnethe no tranquillyté;
 Thys mateer causithe the fool ignoraunce,
 That the peple may not in eese be;
 Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

He that hathe the word at hys owne wylle,
 Helthe, rychesse, and contynual tranquillyté,
 Ech mannys hestes ys glad to fulfyllen,
 He thenkyth upon noon deversité.
 Ful unsewyr atte the laste may he be
 To sette hys herte in swyche abundaunce;
 Dampnacioun yt schewythe, as thenkythe me;
 Of alle oure sennys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Wyghte is wyghte, ȝyf yt leyd to blake;
 And soote ys swettere aftur bytternesse;
 And falsenesse ys evere drevene abake,
 Where tho throughte ys rootyd wytheowte dubbil-nesse.
 Wytheowte preef may not be sykernesse;
 Wherefore trowthe and resoun scholde hem avaunce,
 For to take to hem stedefastnesse.
 Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

That unhappy insacyable simonia
 Now regnethe in Ingeland, and that sore;
 He sparithe not for closynge of alleluya;
 Woo worthe the tyme that evere was he bore!
 Unavysyd clerk soone may be forlore
 Unto that theef to donne obeysaunce;
 For as afore God they ben forswore;
 Of alle oure synnys, God, make a delyveraunce.

Hatrede and praptyk of fals auctorité
 Al good consciencie they putten owte;
 Of trowthe and resoun lettynge the prosperyté;
 Wherefore concord ys put feer abowte.
 And ȝyf men wolde stonden owt of dowte
 Drede of God, with a good atemperaunce
 From these synnys scholde make hem schowte,
 And put hem alle to a pleyne delyveraunce.

Vengeaunce and wrathe in an hastyvyté,
 Wyth an unstedefast speryte of indyscrecioun,
 Been the cause that men may not yn eese be ;
 For here consentynge drawith to confusioun.
 Al londys putten thys land in derisioun.
 For thys usyd ys oonly of acustomaunce,
 Ȝyf that day may come of a good conclusioun,
 Of alle oure synnys to make a delyveraunce.

Men of holy cherche, that been ful wyse,
 Scholde meekly preye with good devosioun,
 That trowthe and resoun myghte sone aryse,
 For to bryng away thys false tribulacioun ;
 And that the heyere herd with good medytacioun
 May the pore peple swych wyse avaunce,
 In the drede of God to sette here ocupacyoun,
 Of al here synnys to make a delyveraunce.

And men wolden weel hem self knowe,
 Grace for to aske in here greet nede,
 To God here hertis bowyng ful lowe,
 Almesse doyng weel to taken heede,
 Pylgremage goyng to gete hem mede,
 Prayeng and fastyng with good rememoraunce,
 Body and sowle so they may hem lede
 Into blysse of eternalle purvyaunce.

Now, God, that art ful of al pletevousnesse,
 Of al vertuys grace and charyté,
 Putte from us al thys unsekynnesse,
 That we stande ynne in grete necessyté,
 That agayn trowthe no varyeng be,
 Al tymes that art founteyne of al felycité,
 Of al oure synnys thou make a delyveraunce.

AGAINST THE LOLLARDS.¹

Lo, he that can be Cristes clerc,
 And knowe the knottes of his crede,
 Now may se a wonder werke
 Of harde happes to take goud heede.
 The dome of dethe is hevy drede
 For hym that wol not mercy crie;
 Than is my rede, for mucke ne mede
 That no man melle of lollardrye.

I sey for meself, yut wist I never
 But now late what hit shuld be,
 And, by my trouthe, I have wel lever
 No more kyn than my a, b, c.
 To lolle so hie in suyche degré
 Hit is no perfit profecie;
 Sauf seker sample to the and me
 To be war of lollardie.

The game is nozt to lolle so hie
 Ther fete failen fondement;
 And yut is a moche folie
 For fals beleve to ben brent.
 Ther the Bibelle is al myswent
 To jangle of Job or Jeremye,
 That construen hit after her entent
 For lewde lust of lollardie.

¹ From MS. Cotton. Vespas. B. xvi. fol. 2, v°. I have put together here a few short pieces on the religious disputes of this period. The first belongs, perhaps, to a rather earlier date, as it seems to contain a continuous allusion to the celebrated Sir John Oldcastle, who was put to death in 1418, but all the others belong evidently to the reign of Henry VI.

Hit is unkyndly for a kniȝt,
That shuld a kynges castel kepe,
To bable the Bibel day and niȝt
In restyng tyme when he shuld slepe;
And carefoly away to crepe,
For alle the chief of chivalrie.
Wel aught hym to waile and wepe,
That suyche lust hath in lollardie.

An old castel, and not repaired,
With wast walles and wowes wide,
The wages ben ful yvel wared
With suiche a capitayn to abide;
That rerethe riot for to ride
Agayns the kynge and his clergie,
With privé peyne and pore pride;
Ther is a poynt of lollardie.

For many a man withyn a while Shal aby his gult ful sore;
So fele gostes to begile
Hym aught to rue evermore.
For his sorowe shal he never restore
That he venemed with envye;
But ban the burthe that he was of bore,
Or ever had lust in lollardie.

Every shepe that shuld be fed in felde,
And kepte fro wolfes in her folde,
Hem nedethe nether spere ne shulde,
Ne in no castel to be withholde.
For ther the pasture is ful colde,
In somer seson when hit is drie;
And namly when the soyle is solde,
For lewde lust of lollardie.

An old castel draw al down,
Hit is ful hard to rere hit newe,
With suyche a congregacioun
That cast hem to be untrewe.
When beggers mow nether bake ne brewe,
Ne have wherwith to borow ne bie,
Than mot riot robbe or reve,
Unde[r] the colour of lollardie.

That castel is not for a kynge
That the walles ben overthrowe;
And yut wel wors abidyng
Whan the captayn away is flowe,
And forsake spere and bowe,
To crepe fro kniȝthode into clergie.
Ther is a bitter blast yblowe,
To be bawde of lollardie.

I trowe ther be no kniȝt alyve
That wold have don so open a shame,
For that crafte to studi or strive,
Hit is no gentel mannes game;
But if hym lust to have a name
Of pelour under ipocrasie,
And that were a foule defame
To have suyche lose of lollardie.

And, pardé, lolle thei never so longe,
Yut wol lawe make hem lowte;
God wol not suffre hem be so stronge
To bryng her purpos so abowte,
With saunz faile and saunz doute,
To rere riot and robberie;
By reson thei shul not long route,
While the taile is docked of lollardie.

Of the hede hit is las charge,
 When grace wol not be his gide,
 Ne suffre hym for to lepe at large,
 But hevely his hede to hide.
 Where shuld he other route or ride
 Agayns the chief of chivalrie,
 Not hardi in no place to abide,
 For alle the sekte of lollardie.

A ! God, what unkyndly gost Shuld greve that God grucchede nouzt !
 Thes Lollardes that lothen ymages most
 With mannes handes made and wrouzt,
 And pilgrimages to be souzt ;
 Thei seien hit is but mawmentrie.
 He that this lose first up brouzt,
 Had gret lust in lollardie.

He wer ful lewde that wold byleve
 In figure mad of stok or ston,
 Yut fourme shulde we none reprove,
 Nether of Marie ne of Jon,
 Petre, Poule, ne other none
 Canonised by clergie ;
 Than the seyntes everychone
 Be litel holde to lollardie.

And namly James among hem alle,
 For he twyes had turnement,
 Moche mischaunse mot him befalle
 That last beheded hym in Kent ;
 And alle that were of that assent.
 To Crist of heven I clepe and crie,
 Sende hem the same jugement,
 And alle the sekte of lollardie.

For that vengans agayns kynde
 Was a poynt of cowardyse;
 And namly suyche on to bete or bynde
 That miȝt not stande, set, ne rise.
 What dome wold ye hym devyse
 By lawe of armes or gentrie,
 But serve hym in the same wise,
 And alle the sekte of lollardie.

When falsnes faileth frele folie,
 Pride wol preseyn sone amonge;
 Than willerdome with old envy
 Can none other way but wronge.
 For synne and shame with sorowe stronge,
 So overset with avutrie,
 That fals beleve is fayn to fonge
 The lewde lust of lollardie,

And under colour of suiche lollynge,
 To shape sodeyn surreccioun
 Agaynst oure liege lord kynge,
 With fals ymaginacioun.
 And for that corsed conclusion,
 By dome of kniȝthode and clergie,
 Now turneth to confusioun
 The sory sekte of lollardie.

For holy writ berithe witnes,
 He that fals is to his kynge,
 That shamful dethe and hard distres,
 Shal be his dome at his endynge.
 Than double dethe for suyche lollynge
 Is hevy, when we shul hennes hye.
 Now, Lord, that madest of nouȝt alle thinge, Defende us alle fro lollardie.

TO THE KING.¹

O rex Anglorum, quæ sunt jam facta videto, Dudum gestorum signacula dura timeto.
Quid, rex, est clerum sic per laicos lanari?
Ut fatear verum signat procures superari.
En, rex, a Græcis bellans fortuna recessit,
Cleri facta necis hujus prognostica gessit.
Signum, Roma, tibi quæ nunc armis viduatur,
Cur? quia clerus ibi nec floret nec dominatur.
En, rex, pro studio per singula regna timeris,
Tu quia de proprio clero responsa mereris.
O rex, tu videas spes hic distantibus an sit,
Ut faculam foveas, scintilla decora remansit.
Rex, si sit per te cleri facies relevata,
Est tibi tunc certe victoria magna parata.
Si fons siccetur, laico regnante furore,
Miles vincetur belli privatus honore.
Tu miles juras cleri defendere jura,
Cur nunc non curas inflicta sibi mala dura.
Rex, princeps, miles, clero rogo consocia te,
Quisquis ad ista siles fugiet decus et vigor a te.
Hæc duo si coeant sociari juncta valore,
Non sunt qui valeant nostros privare vigore.
Hoc scio quod clero miles bonus omnis adhæret,
Solutus pro vero falsus sua prospera mœret.
Oxonie pereant rores et germina terræ,
Singula te subeant strages et jurgia guerræ.
O plebs ingrata regi, mala signa parasti,
Dura tibi fata veniant quia tanta patrastis.
O rex invicte, pueros recolas spoliatos,
Sis rex vindictæ revocans terrore fugatos.

A POLITICAL PROPHECY.¹

When Rome is removith into Englonde,
 And ilke preest haiit the popeis poure in hande,
 Betuene the iij^d and the sixte, who wold onderstonde,
 Moche were and wo schalle arysse in Englonde.
 Thayr challe tyde then a striffe be the stremis of Hommour,
 That a northyne slave schalle follow him for ever,
 The iij^d schalle recuire and rekyn of rulyis,
 That haiit lywith in Lowthe many longe days.
 Than worthe upp, Walis, that vantithe no vylis,
 And holpe up thi brother with brite hardde brandis,
 Thi kynnys men of Yrlonde, lordes of honour,
 Thy schalle spende ther speres with dentes of dolour.
 To bringe owt of brawlis the kynd blod of Brutes,
 The whiche schalle lyve on to lyve of landes.

AGAINST THE FRIARS.²

Freeres, freeres, wo ze be!
 ministri malorum,
 For many a mannes soule bringe ze ad pœnas infernorum.
 Whan seyntes felle fryst from hevene,
 quo prius habitabant,
 In erthe leyfft the synnus vii., et fratres communicabant.

 C. iv. fol. 84, v^o.

² From a MS. in Trin. Coll., Cambridge, O. 2, 40, fifteenth cent.

Falnes was the fyrst flauré quæ fratres pertulerunt ;
 For falnes and flals derei multi perierunt.
 Freeres, ze can weyl lye,
ad fallandum gentem ;
 And weyl can blere a mannus ye pecunias habentem.
 Yf thei may no more geytte,
fruges petunt isti ;
 For falnes walde thei not lette,
qui non sunt de grege Christi.
 Lat a freer of sum ordur
tecum pernoctare,
 Odur thi wyff or thi doughtour
hic vult violare ;
 Or thi sun he weyl prefur,
sicut furtam fortis ;
 God gyffe syche a freer peyne
in inferni portis !
 Thei weyl assaylle boyth Jacke and Gylle, licet sint prædones ;
 And parte off pennans take hem tylle,
qui sunt latrones.
 Ther may no lorde of this cuntré
sic ædificare,
 As may thes freeres, where thei be,
qui vadunt mendicare.
 Mony-makers I trow thei be,
regis proditores,
 Therfore ylle mowyth thei thee,
falsi deceptores.
 Fader fyrst in Trinité, filius, atque flamen.
Omnes dicant Amen.

ON THE CORRUPTION OF PUBLIC MANNERS.¹

Ye prowde galonttes hertlesse,
With your hyghe cappis witlesse,
And youre schort gownys thriftlesse,
Have brought this londe in gret hevynesse.

With youre longe peked schone,
Therfor your thurte is almost don,
And with youre long here into your eyen,
Han brought this lond to gret pyne.

Ye poepeholy prestis fulle of presomcioun,
With your wyde furryd hodes voyd of discrecioun,
Unto your owyn prechyng of contrary condicioun,
Wheche causithe the people to have lesse devocioun.

Avauncid by symony in cetees and townys,
Make schorter youre taylis and broder your crounys;
Leve your schort stuffide dowbelettes and your pleytid gownys,
And kepe your owyn howsyng, and passe not your boundis.

Repreve non other men, I schalle telle you whye, Ye be so lewyd your selfe, there settithe no man you bye,
It is not but a schame y[e] wold be callyd holly,
And worse dysposyd people levythe not undir the skye.

Ffirst make fre your selfe, that now to syne be bounde,
Leve syne, and drede it, than may ye take on hand
Othir to repreve, and that I undirstonde,
Ye may amende alle other and bryng pese to londe.

EPIGRAMS ON THE PUBLIC EXTRAVAGANCE.¹

Luffe, luffe, where is thi reste ?
 Of Englonde I am oute keste, Thurgh sir Envye.
 Thise longe berdes to middis the breste
 Has putt luffe oute of his neste, Thurgh felonye.

Fleshly lustes and festes,
 Furies of ferly bestes,
 Costefulle crouperes with crestes,
 Fules that it first fonde ;
 Robes made of scredes,
 Grisely othes and grete medes,
 Flaterers and false dedes,
 Has schent Englonde.

ON THE TIMES.²

Now ys Yngland alle in fyght ;
 Moche peple of consyens lyght ;
 Many knyghtes, and lytyl of myght ;
 Many lawys, and lytylle ryght ;
 Many actes of parlament,
 And few kept wyth tru entent ;
 Lytylle charyté, and fayne to plese ;
 Many a galant penyles ;

 Moch bost of there clothys,
 But wele I wot they lake none othys.

ON THE TIMES.¹

De miserrima responsione populi quæ jam instat.

Proh dolor! o crudi gestus sparsim juvenescunt,
 Rarescunt ludi, solatia cuncta senescunt.
 Crimen avaritiæ dominatur ubique locorum,
 Quæ quasi blanditiæ tollit terras miserorum.
 Dormit militia vitiata cupidine rerum,
 Pro quibus in vitia jam pugnat amor mulierum.
 Clerus decrescit, vestitu vulgus olescit,
 Curia ditescit, virtus in vilia cessit.
 Heu! ratio moritur, pretio judex hebetescit,
 Fraude fides premitur, pietas cum lege recessit.
 Secta quidem consci perit entia pseudo-coloris;
 Inde sumus consi querula quocunque doloris:
 Dico parum prodest pro jure tribunal adire,
 Dum ratio vivat quæ jus faciet revenire.

ON THE PROCESSION TO ST. PAUL'S OF THE RECONCILED PARTIES.¹

(March 25, 1458.)

Whan charité is chosen with states to stonde
Stedfas and skille without distaunce,
Than wrathe may be exiled out of this londe,
And God oure gide to have the governaunce.
Wisdom and wellthe, with alle plesaunce,
May rightful regne, and prosperité;
For love hath underlaide wratheful venjaunce, Rejoise, Anglonde, oure lordes acordede to be.

Rejose, and thanke God for evermore,
For now shal encrease thi consolacion;
Oure enemyes quaken and dreden ful sore,
That peas is made ther was division.
Whiche to them is a gret confusion,
And to us joy and felicité.
God hold hem longe in every season,
That Anglonde may rejoise concord and unité.

Now is sorowe with shame fled into Fraunce,
As a felon that hathe forsworn this londe;
Love hath put out malicious governaunce,
In every place bothe fire and bonde.
In Yorke, in Somerset, as I understonde,
In Warrewike, is love and charité,
In Sarisbury eke, and in Northumbrelande,
That every man may rejoise concord and unité.

Egremown and Clifford, with other forsaide,
Ben set in the same opynyon.
In every quarter love is thus laide;
Grace and wisdom hathe thus the dominacion.
Awake, welthe, and walke in this region,
Rounde aboute in toun and cité;
And thanke them that brought hit to this conclusion;
Rejoise, Anglond, to concord and unité.

At Poules in Londoun, with gret renoun,
On oure Ladi day in Lent this peas was wrought;
The kyng, the quene, with lordes many oone,
To worship that virgine as thei ought,
Wenten a procession, and spariden right nought,
In sighte of alle the comynalté,
In token that love was in herte and thought;
Rejose, Anglond, in concorde and unité.

Ther was bytwyn hem lovely countynaunce, Whiche was gret joy to alle that ther were;
That long tyme hadden be in variaunce,
As frendes for ever that had be in fere.
Thei wenten togeder and made goud chire.
France and Britayn repente shul thei;
For the bargayn shul thei abyde ful dere;
Rejose, Anglond, in concorde and unité.

Oure soveraigne lord kynge God kepe alwey,
The quene, and the archebisshope of Canterbury,
And the bisshop of Wynchestre, chancellor of Anglonde,
And other that han labured to this love-day;
God preserve hem, we pray hertly,
And Londoun, for thei ful diligently Kepten the peas in trowbel and adversité,
To bryng in reste thei labured ful truly;
Rejoise, Anglond, in concorde and unité.

Of thre thynges I praise the worshipful cité;
 The first, the true faithe that thei have to the kynges;
 The seconde, of love to the comynalté;
 The thrid, goud rule for evermore kepynges;
 The whiche God maynteyn evermore durynges,
 And save the maier and alle the worthi cité;
 And that is amys God brynges to amendinges,
 That Anglond may rejoise to concorde and unité.

EPITAPH FOR RICHARD DUKE OF YORK.¹

A remembrer à tous ceurs de noblesse
 Que ycy gist la fleur de gentillesse,
 Le puissant duc d'York, Rychart ot nom,
 Prince royal, preudomme de renom,
 Saige, vaillant, vertueux en sa vie,
 Qui bien ama loyauté sans envie,
 Droyt heritier, prouvé en mainte terre,
 Des couronnez de France et d'Engleterre.
 Ou parlement tenu à Vestmestre,
 Bien fut congneu et trouvé vray heir estre.

[TRANSLATION.]

Let it be remembered by all noble hearts—that here lies the flower of gentility,—the powerful duke of York, Richard was his name,—a royal prince, a gentleman of renown,—wise, valiant, virtuous in his life,—who loved well loyally without envy,—the right heir, proved in many a land,—of the crowns of France and England.—In the parliament held at Westminster—he was fully acknowledged and found to be

Sy fut roygent et gouverneur de France,
 Normandie il garda d'encombrance,
 Sur Pontaysse la ryviere passa,
 Le roy Francoyez et son doulfyn chassa.
 En Erllande mist tel gouvernement,
 Tout le pais rygla paisiblement.
 D'Engleterre fut long temps prottetur,
 Le peuple ama, et fut leur deffendeur.
 Noble lygne ot d'enfans, que Dieu garde.
 Dont l'aysné fylz est nomé Edouarde,
 Qui est vray roy, et son droit conquessta,
 Par grant labeur qu'il en prinst l'aqueta,
 Il est regnant solitaire ou jour d'uy,
 Dieu et ses sainz sy le gardent d'enuy !
 Ce noble duc à Wacquefylde mourut,
 Doux paix traitant force sur luy courut,
 L'an soixnte, le xxx^e de Decembre,
 Cinquante ans ot d'age, comme on remembre,
 En priant Dieu et la tresbelle dame
 Qu'en Paradiz puist reposer son ame !

Amen.

the right heir.—And he was regent and governor of France,
 —Normandy he guarded from danger,—he passed the river at Pontoise,—and drove away the French king and his dauphin.—In Ireland he established such government,— that he ruled all the country peaceably.—Of England he was long protector,—he loved the people, and was their defender.—He had a noble lineage of children, whom may God have in his keeping.—The eldest of whom is named Edward,—who is true king, and conquered his right,—he purchased it by great labour which he bestowed upon it,— he is reigning singly at the present day,—God and his saints preserve him from injury !—This noble duke died at Wakefield,—while treating of sweet peace, force rushed upon him,
 —the year sixty, the thirtieth of December,—he was fifty years of age, as people remember,—Praying God and the very fair lady—that his soul may repose in Paradise !—Amen.

ON THE CIVIL WARS.¹

Processus sub brevibus in metro belli illius primi quod actum erat apud villam Sancti Albani temporibus regis Henrici sexti.

Martia splendiferum regerent cum sidera lucem,
Aspicerentque feros torvis aspectibus Anglos,
Albani villam tranquilla pace vigentem
Fœdarunt multo violenter sanguine fuso.
Rex aderat præsens, secumque cohors satis ingens
De dominis regni; contrarius his Eboraci
Duxque duo comites Warwici et Sarsburiensis
Venerunt; media fit grandis pugna platea,
In qua corruerant qui nobilitate vigeant
De patria Boreæ, comes insignis dominusque,
Corruit ac ipse qui belli causa fuisse
Fertur, dux magnus de Somerseth vocitatus,
Ac alii plures; satis aspera sors fuit ipsis.
Multi fugerunt, aliter se non properarunt
Quam faciunt trepidæ nisum fugiendo columbæ, Insultumve canis damus, lepus, aut fera quævis.
Dum fugiunt, nemora petierunt sive frutecta;
In quibus, ut pueri virgam metuendo magistri,
Se pudet id ferre, vecorditer occubere.
Qui fuerant nostra propius penetralia tecta
Ad nos fugerunt, sub stallis et latuerunt, Aut infra latebras; timor ingens duxerat ipsos.

¹ This piece, written by the well-known monk of St. Alban's, John de Whethamstede, was evidently composed immediately after the decisive and sanguinary battle of Towton, which is mentioned in it. The author seems to be chiefly desirous of recording the ill-treatment which the abbey of St. Alban's received from the northern partizans of the house of Lancaster. It is printed from a manuscript in the Bodleian Library, MS. Laud. No. 697, fol. 29, r^o.

Sic imbecillis tergum dedit hostibus hostis,
 Non sine dedecore, nec nominis absque rubore.
 Mors est, non vita, sub turpi vivere fama.
 Et patet in paucis sors belli quæ fuit hujus,
 Qualis et eventus domini ducis et comitatus.

Ter deno trino domini regis fuit anno Henrici sexti, facies hæc obvia cœli,
 In Maio mense bis dena bis quoque luce.

Providentia Dei misericordis mediatione martyris sui Albani actum esse credimus, ut rex ad villam cum accideret diverteret se a monasterio ac ad villæ medium properaret, unde quia tam tanta tam gratuita quæ fuerant mediatione sui martyris in salvationem suæ ecclesiæ misericordia domini plasmatoris, ideo in laudem et gloriam utriusque scribitur ulterius de hac materia metrice sub his verbis.

Dum Maius madidi flos floruit imbribus Austri, Mollibus et Zephyrus refoveret flatibus arvos,
 Flora velut riguos herbis ditaverat hortos,
 Post glacies inopes hos fecerat et locupletes,
 Sic rapidis Stilbon prædonibus undique regnum Repleratque nimis, sic late sparserat ipsos,
 Ut villam tandem tantus pervaderet istam
 Illorum numerus, ut vix evaderet unus
 Quin spoliū lueret, spoliantes vel trepidaret.
 Accidit ex causa spoliatio tam gravis ista;
 Mars cœli dominus fuerat tunc, et soror ejus
 In terris domina belli Bellona vocata,
 Unde malum multum signanter partibus istis
 Contigit, et bellum fuit istis grande peractum, Sanguis et effusus multus, dux et jugulatus
 Illius pugnæ qui fertur causa fuisse.
 Bello finito, strepitu quoque pacificato,
 Indultum est prædæ, prædones quippe fuere

Victores omnes, nulli quasi compatibles.
 Tunc rex, tunc proceres, tunc villani quoque plures,
 Ac alii varii, fuerant rebus spoliati.
 Attamen ecclesia simul ecclesiæ bona cuncta,
 Infra quæ fuerant sub clausuraque jacebant,
 Manserunt salva, nec ei res defuit ulla.
 Laus igitur Domino, laus in specieque patrono,
 Cujus per media stabant sua singula salva,
 Salvus et a cunctis simul abbas, frater, et omnes.
 Spiritus ille bonus sine fallo, spiritus almus,
 Ad villam regem qui direxit venientem
 Illius ad medium, nec tunc permiserat ipsum
 Ecclesiam petere, conservavit sua quæque.
 Sed patronus erat qui pro monachis mediarat,
 A raptore locumque suum servavit, et omnem
 Ipsius ornatum, fœdari nec tulit ipsum.
 Si rex intrasset, secumque ducem sociasset,
 Valvas ecclesiæ, paruissent cuncta rapinæ,
 Nec poterat furias quisquam compescere plebis.
 Laus igitur Domino rursus rursusque patrono!
 Stat locus iste suo salvus munimine solo,
 Salvaque supposita, sua salvaque prædia cuncta.
 Tempore dilapso miracula plura patrono
 Concessum facere fuit, utique ab omnipotente
 Laude celebrandum præ cunctis creditur unum,
 Quod dum prædator stabat pro tempore liber,
 Et raperet varia, bene servavit sua cuncta,
 Flere nec ecclesiam rem raptam pertulit ullam.

Nota de bello apud Wacfeld habito.

Anno milleno centum quater, x. quoque seno,
 Terdenoque die duodeno mense Decembre,
 Infra Eboracensem juxta Wacfeld comitatum,
 Dux dominus villæ fertur pugnans habuisse
 Conflictum grandem contra gentem borealem
 Ac proceres plures præerant qui gentibus ipsis;

Quo docuit quia sors quod res fortuna secundas
 Vitat habere moras, cecidit dux, natus et ejus,
 Ac comes insignis, sors belli sors fuit ipsis
 Obvia, sicque satis regni fuerat brevis hæres,
 Omen et id lætum tulerat mutamine mæstum,
 Deflendum multis; jus regni jus fuit ejus.

Processus belli illius sive prælii secundi sub metrico stylo, quod inter Australes et Boreales commis-sum fuerat infra et extra villam Sancti Albani.

M. semel x. seno centum quater et simul uno,
 Cum lux septena fuerat mensis quoque dena,
 Numinis illius venerantur quod morientes,
 Inter Solares pugnantes et Boreales
 Magna cohors cecidit, duo milia plebs numeravit, Sors apud Albani villam protomartyris almi
 Et pugnae campum cæsis dedit et tumulatum,
 Quod dolet ac doluit annis multisque dolebit
 Villicus ac monachus prope eos habitator et omnis.
 Principio pugnae potiores marte fuere
 Australes, tandem vicit Boreasque triumphum
 Abstulerat secum, stat sors mox versa retrorsum
 Martis, ut eventum fore scires sic dubiosum.
 Ut veniunt cinifes, culices, brucique, locustæ,
 Ac vastant segetes, aliæ muscæ quoque multæ,
 Sic advenerunt similes illis Boreales
 Ac vastaverunt segetes et opes populares
 Austri totius; his judex sit Radamantus,
 Et Minos Cretæ conjunctus eis Æacusque,
 Atque modum poenæ pensent seu demeruere.
 Vix infernalis pro poena sufficit ipsis
 Aut focus aut furia, licet essent agmine mille.
 Gens est Cerberca, gens Sphyngea, gens Briarea, Latratu, raptu, spoli prædæque voratu,
 Laus hæc, laus Boreæ, laus est hæc laus sine laude.

Nunc quia de viris Borealibus sit sæpe et sæpius mentio in præmissis, ideo de eorum moribus et conditionibus scribitur hic ulterius metricè sub his verbis.

Qui mores plebis agnoscere vis borealis,
Perlege, pange metra, tibi dicent nil nisi vera.
Gens Boreæ, gens Tisiphonæ, gens alta Megææ, Gens lactata Styge, potataque plebs Acheronte,
Sævît in Australes, stimularet seu furor omnes,
Non vigor attrahere victus, non visve moveret,
Est furor aut furia quicquid gens egerit ista.
Gens Boreæ, gens Cerbereæ linguæque loquelæ,
Latrat et elatrat et verba rudissima tractat.
Proditor est quisque vir nobilis ejus in ore,
Presbyter et monachus, puer et vir, sexus et omnis,
Fœmineæ sive probri quod possit vilius edi,
Semper ut inficiat vir vilis vilia tracta.
Gens Boreæ gens proluvie fœdissima de se
Harpyiis similis violando vasa liquoris,
Ac mensas hominum, tabulatas ac mulierum.
Fœdior est fatu, bis turpior est moderatu,
Nescit honesta loqui vir fœdæ progeniei.
Gens Boriæ gens perfidiæ, gens prompta rapinæ,
Gens est centimano raptu similis Briaræ,
Et Tityo jecore, Sisypho saxoque ruente;
Et licet ulterius societur Tantalus istis,
Non portat metrum, mos est his pejor eorum,
Diripiunt, rapiunt, post se vix saxa relinquit
Gens Boreæ, gens nequitiae, gens absque pietate,
Et sine lege veris vindex, sine judice juris.
Decisor quia vi vult cuncta regi gladiali,
Moreve barbarico, licitum foret in spoliando,
Ut fierent propriæ per raptum res alienæ.
Friguit aut caluit nimis id quod tollere nollet.
Gens Boreæ, gens viperæ pellis generisque,

Mordet et emordet, rodit, corrodit, et urget
 Matris ad interitum, male sicut tendat ad ortum.
 Devorat ad patriam quæ sæpe cibaverat ipsum,
 Per matrisque modum dederat sibi lac ad edendum,
 Et linguæ stimulo noceat caudæque veneno
 Australi populo sibi res et opes rapiendo, Austiterat præda raptrix Boreasque rapina.
 Hinc gens, gens ista quia fertur tam vitiosa,
 Quod mihi, si centum linguæ sint oraque centum,
 Ferrea vox, et item vix singula dicere possem.
 Hanc cantaream sibi quæsivit propriandam,
 Extinctis cereis sonituque nolæque libellis,
 Et pro perpetuo maledicta sit Arctos ab Austro.

Processus sub brevibus sub forma et modo quibus comes Marchice, filius et hæres domini ducis Eboraci interfecti, audita fama de morte sui patris, mox associata sibi non parva multitudine plebis, ad partes Boreales secessit contra procures et alios rebelles pugnatueros, ideo scribitur hic ulterius sub breviliquio stylo metrico sub his verbis.

X. numero seni lapsi sunt circiter anni,
 Postquam successit rex juris jureve rexit
 Anglorum regnum, vis non jus rexerat ipsum;
 Jam nova progenies quia cœlo venit ab alto.
 Saturni soboles qui nomine dicitur altro,
 Edwardus quartus, Ricardo sanguine junctus.
 Creditur a multis redient Saturnia nostris Temporibus secla; lis, visque, nefas simul una Deperient; jura, lex, et pax sint reditura;
 Fraus etiamque dolus cessabunt, ac violentus
 Raptus avaritiæ subeunt verumque fidesque.
 Hæc spes plebis erat, cleri chorus hæcque putabat.
 Det seu speratur regnum Deus ut statuatur,
 Et plebs tranquille vivat clerusque quiete.

Deinde de tempore illius belli quo domiti stabant Boreales, et prædomiti, pro excessibus patratis in patria australi, ulterius metricè sic scribens inquit.

M. semel x. terno centum quaterni simul uno,
In Martis mense ter dena denique luce,
In patria Boreæ Ferebrius prope jugera villæ
Pugna fuit plebis acris nimis et satis atrox.
Vicerat Arctos in bello martius heros
Junior Edwardus, Hector novus, alter Achilles, Prostravit multos; Austro tunc cesserat Arctos,
Et doluit casum supra x. bis millia, quorum
Quamplures domini, plures et erant generosi.
Illius patriæ flos et sors tunc cecidere,
Et merito, quoniam spoliarunt nequiter Austrum.
Laus igitur Domino, sit honor, sit gloria Christo!
Cessat nunc flatu grandis Boreæque boatus, Inque Austrum rediit, Æolus ventum variavit.
Est Boreas mordens et valde ventus adurens;
Est Auster justus, vult morsu rodere morsus,
Et male mordentem vere vires tollere eidem;
Est Zephyrus placidus, est suavis frater et ejus;
Hinc Boreasque Aquilo pro tunc clauduntur in antro.

Quia in præmissis sit mentio de titulis utriusque jam dicti regis, ideo in recensionem et recitationis recordationem scribitur hic ulterius de utrisque metricè sub horum verborum tenore.

In sibi conjunctis Edwardi semine natis
Ortus erat primo Lionellus, Johannesque secundo;
Cedat lex regni vult junior ut seniori.
Attamen Henricus hæres genitusque Johannis,
Per vim sceptrigerum regimen tuleratque coronam,
Et tenuit multis sed non sine viribus annis.

Illi successit rex, qui si non carnisset
Justitiæ titulo, non Hector dignior ipso,
Non iudex Æacus, non ore politus Ulixes.
Ipso defuncto successit filius, in quo
Stirps ea cessavit; hæres rectus remeavit, Scilicet Edwardus Leonelli proximus hæres.
Hic petiit regimen, rex obstat datque negamen.
Res agitur belli, vicit sanguis Leonelli
Et palmam tulerat, Henricus rex fugiebat.
Bello finito, multo quoque sanguine fuso,
Cum victor secum palmam ferretque triumphum,
Vendicat hoc iterum, plebs applaudabat eidem,
Clamabatque sibi, vivat felicior omni
Rege vel Augusto, melior regat Octaviano.
Hæc vox cunctorum clamor fuit ac populorum.
Rex igitur factus, rex in solioque levatus,
Quod fractum fuerat iterum bene consolidabat,
Jureque quo potuit vim pressit, jus renovavit.
Sic vetus id dictum fuerat bene verificatum,
De male quæsitis vix gaudet tertius hæres,
Stare diuque nequit mala quicquid vis stabilivit;
Jus nescitque mori, valeat licet ense ferire;
Ex bene patratibus bene crescit honos quoque virtus.
O rota versatilis nimis oque rotabilis axis,
Sorte novercante fatoque modum variante,
Corruit Henricus isto sub nomine sextus,
Et casum tulerat, titulus sibi deficiebat,
Defecitque bonus, heus! pro moderamine sensus,
Proque bono campi cor defuit Herculis illi.
Matris non patris fuit ortus filius excors,
Matrem nec coluit, nimis a patre degeneravit,
Quo melior miles non Teucer erat vel Atrides,
Sive timor Phrygiis Ajax robustus in armis.
Hic fuit in verbis rex mitis, rex pietatis,
Attamen in factis nimis vir simplicitatis.
Hinc postquam triginta novem rex præfuit annis,
Cæca suam fortuna rotam, quasi fortis in armis,

Volverat, et regimen rapiebat regis, eundem
Compulit ac subito sic dicere, "sum sine regno."
O sors prosperior, o gratia sorteque major,
Qui diuturna nimis fuit expectatio plebis,
Sed mittendus erat, jam dante Deo veniebat.
Hic Martis soboles et nomine martius heros,
Marte triumphante jus sceptri jusque coronæ
Ut decuit sumpsit, ut debuit ac sibi junxit.
Tunc bona spes fuerat sors prospera quod reveniret,
Lætæque pro voto coleret plebs secla sub ipso.
Det Deus ac faciat bona ne spes irrita fiat!
Qui veteres recolis veteranaque gesta revolvis,
Ferrequæ scis si vis thore quis fuit ac pater ejus,
Dic si legisti, legisseve te meministi,
Quenquam decrepitum qui cesserat opilionem,
Et steterat multis absens in partibus annis,
Rursus gestantem baculum baculoque regentem
Conventum pecorum concordî voce legentum.
Res hæc rata satis, nec contingens retroactis
Temporibus multis, nostris tamen accidit annis.
In patre qui sextus fuit ordine primo Johannis,
Sed post octavus bis præfuerat quia dictus,
Hoc duplex nomen sibi vindicat unus et idem,
Deque loco segetis pater est cognomine dictus,
Hac nunc in decade numerus qui dicitur esse,
In qua totius residet perfectio legis,
Scriba suo calamo pausam finemque libello
Imposuit fessus, senio morboque repressus,
Cæcutiens steterat, auditus deficiebat,
Contractique manus digiti fuerant simul omnes,
Semper et ad valvas stabat mors improba pulsans;
Dixit et ecclesiæ, dispone tuo, moriere.
Hac igitur causa scriptor nihil addidit ultra;
Addere nec poterat, quia visus deficiebat,
Idem scribendi sibi finis eratque videndi.

Explicit, expliciunt qualia scripta ferunt.

A POLITICAL RETROSPECT.¹

To have in mynde callyng to remembraunce
 The gret wrongys doon of oold antiquité,
 Unrightful heyres by wrong alyaunce
 Usurpyng this royaume caused gret adversité;
 Kyng Richard the secounde, highe of dignytee, Whiche of Ingeland was rightful enheritoure,
 In whos tyme ther was habundaunce with plentee
 Of welthe and erthely joye, withouzt langoure.

Than cam Henry of Derby, by force and myght,
 And undir the colour of fals perjury,
 He toke this rightwys kyng, Goddes trew knyght,
 And hym in prison put perpetuely,
 Pyned to dethe, alas! ful pyteuxly;
 Holy bisshop Scrope, the blyssed confessour,
 In that quarel toke hys dethe ful paciently,
 That alle the world spak of that gret langoure.

Whos dethe ys a very trew evidence
 To alle Ingeland for the just title and lyne, Whiche for the trowthe by tyranny and violence
 Was put doune and suspect holde venyrsyne;
 Many a trew lord then put to mortel fyne;
 Alway they have ben aboute withe rigoure
 The lynaige of kyng Richard to undirmyne,
 That longe have lyved in gret langoure.

¹ This poem, which appears to have been composed in 1462 or 1463, is preserved in a contemporary manuscript in the Library of the Society of Antiquaries, No. 101; fol. 98, r°.

God smote the said Henry, for hys gret fersnesse,
 With a lepre holdyng hym to hys ende fynally.
 Next hym Henry the fyfte, of knyghtly prowesse,
 Named the best of that lyne and progeny,
 How be it he regned unrightfully, 3it he upheld in Ingeland the honnour;
 Henry hys sone of Wy[n]desore, by gret foly,
 Alle hathe retourned unto huge langoure.

Callyng to mynde the fals engendred treson
 And myschyefz that were in hys dayes regnyng;
 The good duc of Gloucestre, in the season
 Of the parlement at Bury beyng,
 Was put to dethe; and ay sithe gret mornyng
 Hathe ben in Ingeland, with many a scharp schoure, Falshode, myschyef, secret synne upholdyng,
 Whiche hathe caused in Engeland endelez langoure.

Noo mervail though Engeland hathe ben unhappy,
 Whiche hathe be mysrewled 3erys sertayne;
 Scripture saithe heritage holdyn wrongfully Schal never cheve ne with the thred heyre remayne,
 As hathe be verified late ful playne,
 Where as iij. kynges have regned by erreure,
 The thred put ouzte, and the right brought agayne,
 Whos absence hathe caused endlez langoure.

Also scripture saithe, woo be to that regyon
 Where ys a kyng unwyse or innocent;
 Moreovyr it ys right a gret abusyon,
 A womman of a land to be a regent,
 Qwene Margrete I mene, that ever hathe ment
 To governe alle Engeland with myght and poure,
 And to destroye the ryght lyne was here entent,
 Wherefore sche hathe a fal, to here gret langoure.

And now sche ne rought, so that sche myght attayne,
Though alle Engeland were brought to confusyon,
Sche and here wykked affynité certayne
Entende uttyrly to destroye thys regioun;
For with theym ys but dethe and distruccioun,
Robberye and vengeaunce, with alle ryggur,
Therefore alle that holde of that oppynioun,
God sende hem a schort ende with meche langour.

O it ys gretly agayne kynde and nature,
An Englyshe man to corruppe hys owne nacion,
Willyng straungiers for to recure,
And in Engeland to have the domynacioun,
Wenyng thanne to be gret of reputacion;
For sothe they that soo hope, least schal be theyre pour;
He that would be high schal be undir subjecioun,
And the fyrst that schal repente the langoure.

Wherefore I lykken England to a gardayne,
Whiche that hathe ben overgrown many yere
Withe wedys, whiche must be mowen doune playne,
And than schul the pleasant swete herbes appere.
Wherefore alle trewe Englyshe people, pray yn fere
For kyng Edward of Rouen, oure comfortoure,
That he kepe justice and make wedis clere,
Avoydyng the blak cloudys of langoure.

A gret signe it ys that God lovythe that knyght,
For alle thoo that would have destroyed hym utterly,
Alle they ar myschyeved and put to flyght.
Than remembre hys fortune with chevalry
Whiche at Northamptoun gate the victory,
And at Mortimers Crosse he had the honnour;
On Palme Sonday he wan the palme of glorye,
And put hys enemyes to endelez langour.

And drave hys adversary ouzt of the lande;
 Aftyr cam to Londun and was crouned kyng.
 Ryght late God gaf hym grace to undirstonde
 The fals traytours agayne hym ymagynyng.
 The prophecie saithe, there schal dere hym noo thinge,
 He it ys that schal wynne castelle, toun, and toure;
 Alle rebellyous undyr he schal hem brynge,
 Willyng to hys highenesse any langoure.

Richard the erl of Warwyk, of knyghthode Lodesterre, borne of a stok that evyr schal be trewe,
 Havyng the name of prowes and manhoode,
 Hathe ay ben redy to helpe and resskewe
 Kyng Edward, in hys right hym to endewe;
 The commens therto have redy every houre;
 The voyx of the people, the voix of Jhesu,
 Who kepe and preserve hym from alle langoure.

Now blyssed saint George, pray the vierge immaculat
 To be good mediatrix, praying her sonne
 That Edward of Rouen may be victorieux and fortunat, Withe alle the trew lordes of hys regioun,
 That they may se a good way and directioun
 To make peas in Engeland, that riche and pouer
 May joyfully synge at the conclusyon,
 Welcom everlastyng joye, and farewal langoure.

ON THE RECOVERY OF THE THRONE BY EDWARD IV.¹

Remembyr with reverens the Maker of mankynde,
 How myzty, how mercyfulle, how glorius he is,
 Alle erthly creaturus in thayre reasonys byn blynde, Whan they compar with his power thay do alle amys.

Agaynste his power no thyng impossible is;
 Wherefore lett us say in wele and in woo
 Good Lorde, evermore thy wille be doo.

How mervelous to man, how dowlfulle to drede,
 How far paste mannys resoun and mynde hath it bee,
 The comyng of kyng Edward, and his good spede, Owte of Dochebond into Englonde over the salte see.
 In what parell and trowbill, in what payne was hee!
 Whan the salte water and tempest wrought hym
 gret woo;
 But in adversité and ever, Lorde, thy wille be doo.

His knyghtehode, his power, his ordinance, his ryzte, Agaynst this trowblis tempest avaylid hym no thyng.
 What may manhode do agaynst Goddes myzte?
 The wynde, the water spareth nodyr priynce ne kyng.
 Haply that trowbill was for wickyd lyvyng;
 God wolde every creature his Maker shulde know,
 Wherefore, good Lorde, ever more thy wille be doo.

Lorde, the unkyndnes was shewid to kyng Edward that day !

At his londyng in Holdyrnes he had grett payne ;
His subjectes and people wolde not hym obey,
Off hym and his people thay had grett disdayne.
There schewid hym unkyndnes, and answerid hym playne,
As for kyng he shulde not londe there for wele ne woo ;
Yett londid that gentill prynce, the will of God was soo.

To Yorke this nobille prynce and his pepull did passe, Magré his enmyes, no man hym lett myzte ;
At wiche cité trowbelid the ryalle prynce was,
Yett into the cité he enterid be Goddes power and
myzte ;
And whan the pepull of his persone had a verrey syzte, Thayre malice was quenchid, were they never so woo.
Wherefore, good Lorde, ever more thy wille be doo.

That shortly to ride that nobill prynce was redy,
By Pomfrett castell he paste, his enmys not with-standyng.
Marques Mountigew of that passage was verrey hevy, Wyth the prynce he durste not mete, but ther lay the mornyng ;
His tresoun in his mynde before done was remiying, Supposyng that kyng Edward remembryd it also.
Wherefore, good Lorde, ever more thy wille be doo.

At Covyntre that gentill prynce was trowblid mervelously,
Wyth the scourge of God thus betyn was hee.
Mete, dryncke, and logynge his pepulle lackyd certaynly,
Yett he pight his felde in placis thre,
To fyght with Warwicke and all his meny.
But he was affrayed, and his people also.
In every thyng, Lord, thy wille be doo.

O glorius God, how thou haste assigned Hertes disceveryd to be stablisshyd ayene,
 In love of matremonye thou haste hem joynyd, Kyng Edwarde and the duke of Claranse gret honour to attayne.

Thay were dysceveryd by a sottell meane;
 Nature hath compellid hem agayne togere go;
 Thus in every thyng, Lorde, thy wille be doo.

At Warwicke the knot was knytt agayne,
 Unknowyng to many a man in this londe;
 God sent his grace by a sovereyne meane, Yett the pepulle ben blynde, they will not under-stonde.

Stryve not with the peopull, ne the werkys of his honde,
 And thoncke hym hertely it plesith hym so to do;
 And lett us say, "Good Lorde, ever thy wille be doo."

Longe lay the kyng there, away wolde not hee, Dayly he prophered batayle, his enmys durst not fyghte;
 Lacke of logynge and vitayle, it was grett peté, Causid the gentill prynce to remeve, suche was Goddes
 myzte.

Lowe how the good Lorde his owne gentill knyzte,
 Because he shulde remembir hym in wele and in woo.
 Thus in every thyng, Lorde, thy wille be doo.

As the priynce passid to Londone, God shewid ryghte
 Secrett thyng to hym, tokyn of victory;
 In presence of the same priynce, by Goddes powere and myzte,
 And ymage wiche was closid brake opyn sodenly.
 God sheid hym this comforte in the abbey of Deyntré,

Because he shulde be stidfast in wele and in woo ;
 The ymage was of saynte Anne, God wolde it shulde be so.

The gentill priynce and his pepull to Londone did passe,
 Into the cité he enterid with a company of men trew.
 For the wiche his enmys cryed, "Owte and alas!"
 Thayre red colowrus chaungid to pale hewe.
 Than the nobill prynce began werkys new.
 He toke prisoners a kyng and a clerke, loo,
 How the will of God in every thyng is doo.

To Westmynster the kyng be water did glide,
 Worshypfully resayvid with processiou in ffeet,
 Resayvid with reverence, his dewté not denye ;
 The cardenall uppone his hede the crowne did sett,
 The septure in his honde, withowte intrumpeioun or lett.

Then to seynt Edwardes shryne the priynce did goo,
 Thus in every thyng the wille of God is doo.

The kyng comfortid the quene, and other ladyes eke ;
 His swete babis full tendurly he did kys ;
 The yonge priynce he behelde, and in his armys did bere.
 Thus his bale turnyd hym to blis ;
 Aftur sorow joy, the course of the worlde is.
 The sizte of his babis relesid parte of his woo ;
 Thus the wille of God in every thyng is doo.

How sodenly that tyme he was compellid to parte
 To the felde of Barnet with his enmys to fyghte.
 God lett never prynce be so hevy in his herte
 As kynge Edward was all that hole nyzte.
 And aftur that shone a ster over his hede full bryzte,
 The syght of the wiche made his enmys woo ;
 It was a tokyn of victory, Goddis will was soo.

This prynce it perceyvid, and he let it passe and goo,
 That was to Cryst his creature he did calle,
 To oure lady and to saynt George, and other seyntes moo ;

Then sodenly uppone his knes the prynce did falle, Besechyng the good Lorde and his seyntes alle
 His ryght hym to sende, and defende hym of his foo,
 And said ever, "Good Lorde, thy wille be doo."

Thow knowyst my ryzte, Lorde, and other men also ;
 As it is my ryzte, Lorde, so thou me defende,
 And the quarell that is wronge it may be overthrow,
 And to ryght parte the victory thou sende,
 And I promesse the, good Lorde, my lyffe to amende,
 I knolege me a synner wrappid in woo.
 And all said with one voyse, "Lorde, thy will be doo."

His meditacioun thus made, his herte hevy,
 Yet his hede he up lyfte with a mery chere,
 And said, "Frendis, to this journey it is tyme we hye ;
 " Latt us all call to Cryst and his seyntes in fere,
 " As he uppone a crosse boght us ryght dere.
 " I knolege me a synner wrappid in woo ;
 " In this adversité evir, Lorde, thy wille be doo."

"Avaunce, baner," quod the kyng, "passe forthe anone,
 " In the name of the Trinyté and oure Lady bryghte,
 " Seynt Edward, seynt Anne, and swete seynt Johan,
 " And in the name of seynt George, oure ladis
 " knygte,
 " This day shew thy grett power and thy gret
 " myzte,
 " And brynge thy trew subjectes owte of payne and
 " woo ;
 " And as thy wille is, Lorde, thys journey be doo."

There was shotyng of gonnys and arows plenté;
 There was showtyng and crying that the erth did quake;
 There was hewyng of harnes, peté was to see;
 For fere of that fray many man did shake.
 There was tremelyng and turnyng thayre woo did wake.
 There was hewyng of helmettes and salettes also;
 Hit plesid God that seasoun it shulde be soo.

There was jollyng, ther was rennyng for the sovereynté,
 There was rorynge and rumbelynge, peté to here;
 Sayne was the waykyer away for to flee.
 That day many a stowte man was ded there;
 Warwicke and Mowntegew were slayne in fere,
 Knyztes and gentilmen and other men moo.
 In all thynges, good Lorde, every thy wille be doo.

There was rydyng and rennyng; sum cryed, "Wayle" away!"
 Unknowyng to many man who the better hadde.
 Sum souzte thayre maysters, sum hit thaym that day,
 Sum ran here and there like men that were madde;
 Sum were ryght hevy and harde bestadde,
 Ryght besy in thayre wittes away to goo.
 Alle was for the best, oure Lorde wold it shulde be so.

Kynge Edward and his brothere, dowtyng no fere, Lordis and other gentilmen in the kynges ryzte,
 Stidfastyly and worshypfully thayre parte did there,
 Manly and freshely that day did thay fyzte.
 To kynge Edwarde fille the victorie, throw Goddes
 myzte.
 Many one whan thay wist thay were ryzte woo.
 Hit bootid hem not to stryve, the wille of God was soo.

To London com the kyng whan the batell was doo,
 Levyng behynde hym many a dede man;
 Sum hurte, sum slayne, sum cryinge "Alas!"
 Gretter multitude than I con telle.
 Sum waloynge in blood, sum pale, sum wan.
 Sum sekyng thayre frendis in care and in woo.
 In every thyng, Lord, thy wille be doo.

In Sothwerke, at Bambere heth, and Kyngston eke,
 The bastarde and his meané in the contré abowte,
 Many grett men in London they made seke,
 Man, wyff, ne childe there durst non rowte.
 Oxin, shepe, and vetayle, withowtyn any dowte,
 Thay stale away and carrid ever to and froo.
 God suffirs moche thyng, his wille to be doo.

Moche sorow and shame the wrecchis thay wroughte,
 Fayre placis thay brend on the water side.
 Thayre myschevus dedis avaylid ham noughte,
 Schamfully thay wroughte, and so thaym betyd.
 Thay wolde not leve ther malice, but therin abyde, Thay cryed kynge Edward and Warwicke also.
 Thus the wille of God in every thyng is doo.

At Londone brygge thay made asawte, sham to see,
 The utter gate on the brygge thay sett on fyre;
 Into Londone shott arows withowte peté.
 With gunnus thay were bett that sum lay in the myre.
 Thay askyd wage of the brygge, thay paid them thayre hire.
 Ever amonge thay had the worse, then wakynd thaire
 woo.
 False men most be poyneshyd, the will of God is soc.

At Londone brige anodyr sawte thay made agayne,
 Wyth gunpowdir and wildefire and straw eke;
 Fro the gate to the drawbrygge thay brent down playne,
 That x. myle men myzte se the smeke.
 Thay were not of thayre entent the nere of a leke,
 For into the cité thay myzte not com for wele ne
 for woo;
 God restid thayre malice, the wille of hym was soo.

At Algate thay sawtid in an ill seasoun;
 Thay brente fayre howsis, peté was to se.
 Thus these false men did opyne tresoun,
 Supposynge evermore to enture into cité.
 God and good seyntes thereof had pité.
 Thayre malice was sesid and turned hem to woo.
 Thus in every thyng, Lorde, thy will be doo.

The erle of Essex, and also the aldurmen,
 At Bysshopus gate togedder thay mette,
 And owte therat sewde like manly men.
 Thay bete hem down, no man myzte hem lett;
 Freshely on thayre enmyes that day did thay fyzte.
 Thayre false treson brouzte theym in woo;
 Thus in every thyng, Lorde, thy wille be doo.

The erle Revers, that gentill knyzte, Blessid be the tym that he borne was!
 By the power of God and his grett myzte,
 Throw his enmyes that day did he passe.
 The maryners were kellid, thay cryed "Alas!"
 Thayre false trësoun brouzte hem in woo,
 Thus in every thyng, Lorde, thy wille be doo.

There aventurid the erle then into the honde,
 Contravelde the welefaire of London that day;
 When the comens the skomfertour did understonde,

Thay seuyd owte freshly, thay kepud none araye;
 Glad with the Kentyschmen thay were for to fraye.
 Thay were kyllid down, away thay myzte not goo.
 Thus the wille of God is evermore doo.

God wolde the erle Revers there shulde be;
 He purchesid grett love of the comyns that seasoun;
 Lovyngly the cetysens and hee
 Pursuyd thayre enmyes, it was but reason,
 And kyllid the peple for thayre false tresoun,
 Or the chase were do, cc. and moo.
 Thus in every thyng, Lorde, thy will be do.

When the Kentyschmen herd of that fraye,
 Like maysterles men away thay wente,
 Erly in the mornyng, or it were day,
 Throw halkys and hegges resortid into Kent.
 Thay vanysshid away as thayre tayles had be brente,
 Remembrynge thayre false tresoun, in hertes woo.
 Thus in every thyng, Lorde, thy will be doo.

O glorijs God, what vexacioun was then
 To the quene and the lordis and other lades eke,
 To the mayre, and the comens, and the aldurmen;
 Thay nedid no fere ne sorow to seke.
 Then aftur kynge Edwarde thay cryed and did wepe;
 The lacke of his presence made the pepull woo.
 Thus the wille of God in every thyng is doo.

O that nobill prynce and emperour flouere,
 To sitt at Londone resorte he than;
 Nothur Alisaunder ne Artur, ne no conquerouere
 No better were acompenyd with nobill men.
 Like none of the rounde tabulle were beseyn,
 Ryally horsid and aparelde in the fere of thayre foo.
 Thus victoriously he come, Goddes wille was soo.

The duke of Gloccetter, that nobill prynee,
 Yonge of age and victorius in batayle,
 To the honoure of Ectour that he myzte comens,
 Grace hym folowith, fortune, and good spede.
 I suppose hes the same that clerkis of rede, Förtune hathe hym chosyn, and forthe wyth hym will goo,
 Her husbonde to be, the wille of God is soo.

In the kynges forward the prynee did ride,
 Withe nobill lordis of grett renowne;
 The erle of Penbroke, the lorde chamberlayne be his side;
 Many other knyghtes and yomen of the crowne;
 With tru[m]ppus and clarions thay rode to Londone.
 In the kynges forward were viij. m^l and moo.
 Thus in every thyng the wille of God is doo.

The lorde chambirlayne, that gentill knyghte,
 Whiche failid his mayster nother in storme ne stoure;
 Off goodly men he had a faire syzte,
 Wiche rode afore the kynge to his honoure.
 He hathe deservid thancke amonge other paramour,
 In Dochelonde, in Englonde, in wele and in woo;
 He hath beddyn with his kynge, the wille of God is soo.

Then the glorius prynee, victorius and ryalle,
 Kynge Edward the iiijth, I wille ye undurstonde, Viij. aldermen of Londone, I wille ye undyrstonde,
 In the felde he dubbid thaym knyghtes, and bade them up stonde,
 Fulle nobile and worshypfully with his honde.
 Wyth reverence and worshyp thay thankyd hym also;
 He remembirde thayre trew hertes, God wolde soo.

The duke of Claranse, that honorabill knyȝte,
 Can alowe the cité notabully.
 Hym to beholde it was a goodly syȝte,
 He is an excellent prynce certaynly.
 He thonckyd the cetisence of thayre fidelité
 Done to the kynge, it plesid hym soo.
 Thus in every thyng the wille of God is doo.

Then to the gate the kynge did ride,
 His brethir and his lordis in ordre, a good sizte to see.
 iiij. m^l harnessid men the kynge did abide,
 And worshypfully resayvid hym into the cité.
 Cryste preserve the pepull, for his grett peté!
 xx. m^l, I suppose, and many one moo,
 Welcomyd kyng Edward, the will of God was soo.

Throw the cité to Poulus thai did ride;
 He was resayvid with prosession solemply;
 His brether and his lordis knelyng hym beside,
 Thayre offering thay made devoutly,
 Lovyng and thonckyng God of his victory.
 His brether and his lordis said the same also.
 Thus in every thyng, Lorde, thy wille be doo.

O quene Elizabeth, o blessid creature,
 O glorius God, what payne had sche?
 What langowr and angwiche did sche endure?
 When hir lorde and sovereyn was in adversité.
 To here of hir wepyng it was grett peté,
 When sche remembirde the kynge, sche was woo.
 Thus in every thyng the wille of God is doo.

Here affir, good lady, in youre felicité,
 Remembir olde trowblis and thynges paste,
 And thyncke that Cryste hym selfe is hee
 That is kynge of kynges, and ever shall laste.
 Knytt it in youre herte suerly and faste,
 And thyncke he hathe delyveryd you owte of woo;
 Hertly thoncke hym, hit plesith hym so to doo.

And ever, good lady, for the love of Jhesu,
 And his blessid modir in any wise,
 Remembir suche personus as have be trewe,
 Helpe every man to have justice.
 And thes that wille othir maner maters device,
 Thay love not the kyng, I dar say soo,
 Besechyng ever God that his wille be doo.

Explicit the balet off the kyng.

ON ENGLAND'S COMMERCIAL POLICY.¹

Anglia, propter tuas naves et lanas, omnia regna te salutare deberent.

Goo forth, lybell, and mekly schew thy face
 Afore my lordes, with humble countenaunss,
 And pray theym all to take the to grace,
 In appoysaylle and in cheryschyng the to avaunce.

Ffor thow mayst expertly be provyd by prudence,
 Among alle discrete men havying sapyence,
 Ffor oone of the best that may be thought
 Ffor the welth of Ynglond, yf it be well sowthe.

Ffor ther ys no reme in no maner degree,
 Butt they have nede to oure Englysshe commodyté;
 And the cawse theroff I wylle to yow expresse,
 The wiche ys soth as the gospelle of the masse.

¹ This poem was written to enforce the same principles as those contained in the larger tract of an earlier date, the Libel of English Policy, of which it is partly a sort of abstract adapted to the time.

It is taken from a manuscript in the British Museum, MS. Lansdowne, No. 796, fol. 2, v^o, of about the reign of Edward IV., at which period it appears to have been composed.

Ther ys noothir pope, emperowre, nor kyng,
Bysschop, cardynal, or any man levying,
Of what condicion or what maner degree,
Duryng theyre levying thei must have thynges iij.

Mete, drynk, and cloth, to every mannes sustynaunce,
They leng alle iij., withowtt varyaunce.
Ffor who so lackyth any of thyse iij. thynges,
Be the popys or emperowrs, or soo royall kynges,

Yt may not stonde with theym in any prosperyté;
Ffor who so lackythe any of thyse, he suffryd
adversyté;
Wyls this ys soth be yowre wyttes dyscerne,
Of alle the remes in the worlde this beryth the lanterne.

Ffor of everyche of thyse iij. by Goddes ordynaunce,
Wee have suffycyenly unto oure sustynaunce,
And with the supplusage of oone of thyse iij. thynges,
We myzgh rewle and governe alle crystyn kynges.

And paynymys also we myzthe mak theym ful tame, Ffor the cause we take no hed we be mykylle to blame;
For of alle the pepylle that be lyvyng on grounde
To praye and to please God we be most bownde.

Ffor thow thei have met, drynke, in every kyngges
londe,
Yet they lacke clothe, as y undyrstonde;
And for to determyn that the trouthe ys soe,
Lestyn wel to me, and ye moste acord therto.

Ffor the marchauntes comme oure wollys for to bye,
Or elles the cloth that is made theroff sykyrly, Oute of dyverse londes fer byyond the see,
To have thyse merchaundyss into theyr contré.

Ffrom Arteyse, Pekardy, Henaude, and Normandy, Bretayne, Fraunse, Petowe, and Barry,
 Gasscoyne, Gyon, and also Aragon, Portyngale, Spayne, and Naverun.

Castyle, Cesyle, Coleyn, and Swethyn, Pruse-londe, Florence, Venyse, and Jene, Melane, Catelony, and alle Ytally, Bewme, Hungry, Greke, and gret Turkey.

And many moo londes that I can not nevene,
 But y dar sey alle that be unther hevyne,
 Bothe crystyn [and] hethyn of alle maner degreys,
 They have nede to oure Englysshe commodyteis.

Therfor let not owre woole be sold for nowȝte,
 Neyther oure clothe, for they must be sowth;
 And in espeealle restrayne strayttly the wool,
 That the comyns of thys land may wyrke at the fulle.

And yf any wooll be sowlde of thys londe,
 Lete yt be of the worst bothe to fire and bonde,
 And noone other in [no] maner wyse,
 Ffor many dyverse cawsys, as y can devyse.

Yf the woole be corse, the cloth is mykyll the worse,
 Yet into lytylle thei putt owte of purse,
 As myche for gardyng, spyunnyng, and wevyng,
 Ffullyng, rowyng, dyyng, and scheryng.

And yet when suche clothe ys alle ywrowte,
 To the maker it waylyth lytylle or nowȝtte,
 The pryce ys sympylle, the cost ys never the lesse,
 They that wyrkkyd soche wooll in wytte be lyke an asse.

The costes into lytyll trewly at the fulle
 Ys as myche as yt were maad of the fyne woll,
 Yet a zerde of that oon ys worth v. of that other;
 Bettyr can not I seye, thow yt were to my brother.

Take hed to my lessoun that y have schewyd here,
 Ffor yt ys necessary to every clothyer,
 And the most prevayle to theym that may be fownde,
 Yf they wylle take hede therto and yt undyrstonde.

A ordynaunce wolde be maad for the poore porayle,
 That in thyse dayes have but lytyll avayle,
 That is to sey for spynners, carders, wevers also,
 Ffor toukers, dyers, and schermyn thereto.

For in thyse dayes ther is a hewsauce,
 That puttyth the pore pepylle to grett hynderaunce,
 By a strange mene that is late in londe
 Bygun and usyd as y undyrstonde

By merchaundes and cloth-makers, for Godys sake take kepe,
 The wyche makythe the poreylle to morne and wepe;
 Lytyll thei take for theyre labur, yet halff ys merchaundyse;
 Alas! for rewthe, yt ys gret pyté.

That they take for vjd, yt ys dere ynow of iij.,
 And thus thei be defrawd in every contré,
 The pore have the labur, the ryche the wynnyng;
 This acordythe nowzte, it is a hevy partyng.

Butt to voyde fraude, and sett egallyté,
 That syche wyrfolk be payd in good moné,
 Ffrom this tyme forthe by suffyeyent ordynaunce
 That the poreylle no more be putte to suche grevaunce.

For and ye knew the sorow and hevyness
 Of the pore pepyll levying in dystress,
 How thei be oppressyd in alle maner of thyng,
 In yevyng theym to myche weythe into the spynnyng.

Ffor ix^{li} I wene they schalle take xij.,
 This is very trewth, as y know my self;
 Theyre wages be batyd, theyre weyte ys encresyd,
 Thus the spynners and carders awaylys be alle seasyd.

Yt were profytabyll also and expedyent for oure
 kyng,
 And a gret awawntage of myche wynnynng,
 And a gret enscherychyng to alle the comynalté,
 That dwelle abowte ther that the mynys be,

The wyche have hyt in usage
 To myne in the erthe to gete theyre sustynaunce,
 Ther myght be had x. tymys more wynnynng
 Than ys now adayeys with good governyng.

For and ther were a myntte ordeynyd ny therby,
 And a ordynaunce maad therto sykyrly,
 That alle the sylver, whan yt fynyd were,
 Thether schold be broȝttthe and yconyd there.

And mony to be caryyd into another place,
 But oonly to be coynyd in a schort space,
 Wherby that the wyrkfolk myghte trewly be payd,
 Then I dar sey yt wold not be denayyd,

But ayenst oon man then schuld ye have x.,
 For the good payment of the wyrkmen;
 And the moe peopyll that wyrk in the mynys,
 The more sylver schuld be had up at alle tymys.

And thus the kyng schold be enrychyd for his parte,
 More than he is now, I dare play[n]ly joparte,
 After the rate of theyre gret wyunnyng,
 The wiche schold be to hym a profytable thyng.

And thus this lond may be enrychyd ageyne,
 The kyng, the lordes, and alle maner of men,
 Knyghtis, squyers, and alle the comynalté,
 They may playnly voyd alle poverté.

And so to contynow owtt of hevyness,
 Fro penowry and nede, and to be put owt of dystress;
 And for to cawse owre enmyss be this ordynaunss
 To seke love and pese withowtt varyaunss.

And ffulle fayne that they may be subyet to this lond,
 Yf we kepe the woollys straytly owt of theyre hond;
 For by the endrapering theroff they have theyre sustynaunce,
 And thus owre enmys be supportyd to owre gret hynderaunce.

And therfor, for the love of God in trinityté, Conceyve welle these matorss, and scherysshe the comynalté,
 That theyre pover levyng synfulle and adversyté
 May be altratyd unto welth, rychess, and prosperyté.

Here endythe the boke of Ynglysshe polysye,
 That may cause alle the worlde yt to obeye;
 Ther may no man denye but that it ys sothe,
 For every man must have met, drynk, and clothe.

THE END.
